Vegetable Forcing

LETTUCE FOR CHRISTMAS.

Can you tell me about when to sow lettuce in a bench so as to have it for Christmas? What kind would you suggest? What is the proper temperature?
A. B.

In order to have good head lettuce for Christmas, sow the seed in a bed or bench early in September. The night temperature for lettuce in winter should not be lower than 45 degrees, or higher than 50 degrees. Some of the most successful growers keep the minimum as near 48 degrees as possible. Good forcing varieties are Hittinger's Belmont, May King and Arlington Forcing Tennis Ball. If your customers prefer curled lettuce, you will find Grand Rapids Forcing and Early Curled Simpson good. These come in a little earlier than the regular head lettuce. C. W.

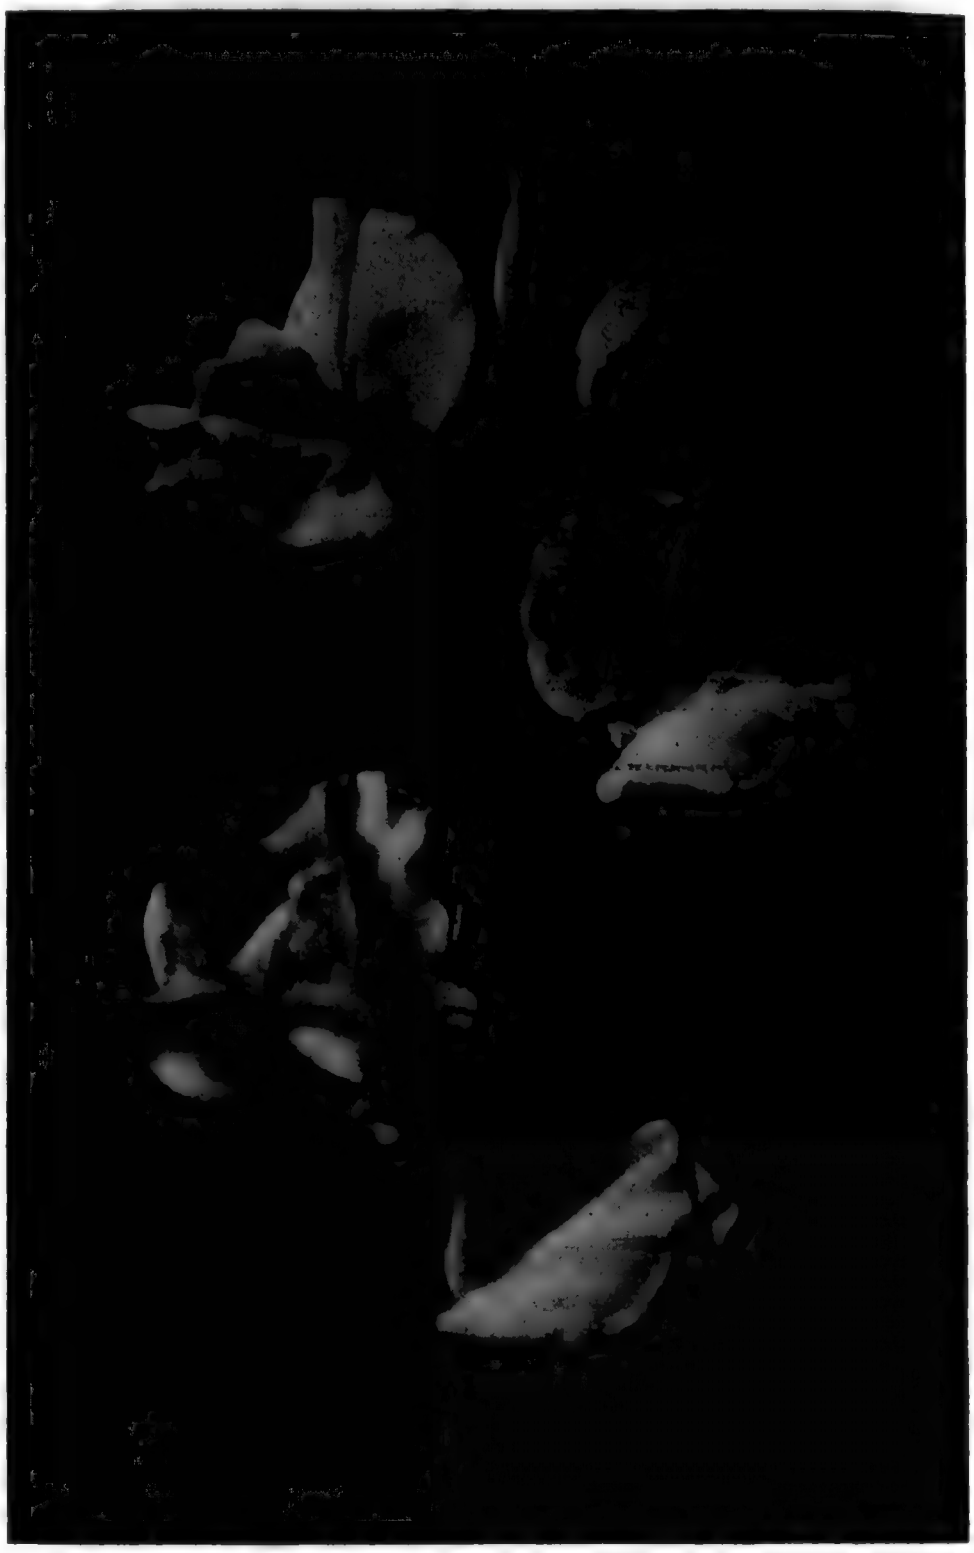
TOMATO TROUBLES.

What causes tomato blossoms to fall? Also, what causes them to rot at the blossom end after they have commenced to turn red? F. A. P.

When tomatoes make an extra rank growth, due to an excess of nitrogen in the soil, the buds and flowers drop freely. This is especially true under glass, where practically all plants are more subject to certain types of diseases than when grown in the open. Blossom-end rot is due to various causes. Usually it appears on plants which are making a strong growth during damp and sunless spells of weather. This particular disease is more pronounced outdoors than under glass. In greenhouses, tomatoes can be given the dry atmosphere which they require; outdoors contrary conditions often exist. Clear away surplus growth and let the fruits get more light. C. W.

PITTSBURGH.

The Market.



There is not much to be said about business so far this month, not a single affair of any kind having occurred in the city that would call for any quantity of flowers. There have been plenty of outdoor flowers, although the better varieties of gladioli are not so abundant. It is a shame to have to tell of the quantities of asters that have been coming in, good, bad and indifferent. Roses are not any too plentiful and there are no carnations. White chrysanthemums have made their appearance and from this time on we will be able to have them.

None of the retail stores seem to be making any special effort; there seems rather to be curtailing of expenses until business starts up.

Various Notes.

David Frazer, gardener for H. C. Frick, is seriously ill. He has been confined to bed for several weeks.

Miss Nellie G. King, formerly with Wm. M. Turner, has opened a store at 7141 Kelly street. Miss King is always full of energy and business and her friends are predicting her success in her new venture. Clarke.

WINTER-FLOWERING ORCHID SWEET PEA, "MRS. A. A. SKACH."

My Original Winter-flowering Orchid or Spencer Sweet Pea

revolutionized the cut flower market last winter. It has brought higher prices than the best carnation, from the start to finish. They will be more sought for this year.

On account of the War, I will not take any chances to ship many of my foreign orders. This will enable me to send all American orders in full of the following varieties, besides having some to spare:

Pink and White Orchid, White Orchid, Mrs. A. A. Skach (clear pink), Orchid Beauty (dark rose), Venus (white, pink blush), Mrs. M. Spanolin (white), Mrs. Jos. Manda (light pink), all, 1 oz., $4.00.
Lavender Nora, the best and largest clear lavender in cultivation, 1 oz., $1.50.

Winter-flowering Spencer Mixture.

This consists only of the best light pink, pink, white, salmon, lavender and very few dark. Every commercial grower should plant at least one house of these, and he will be taking no risk. 1 oz., $3.00; 4 oz., $10.00; 1 lb., $30.00. Ask for special prices on 10 lbs. or more.

You need one ounce of the Winter Orchid Sweet Pea seed for 100-foot row.

Commercial Sweet Pea Culture, 50c, free with every $5.00 order.

We have all other Winter Grandifloras.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

Los Angeles, Cal.—The commercial agencies report that the Los Angeles Flower Market filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy September 15. Charles E. Morton is president of the corporation and Frederick Sperry secretary. A wholesale and retail business was done.

SPOKANE, WASH.

The Market.

A week or two more will probably bring a heavy frost, after which the call for florists' flowers will undoubtedly increase. As yet there has been no perceptible change in general business conditions. The weather has been cooler for the last week and this has improved the quality of asters and dahlias.

Various Notes.

European bulbs are arriving. Among the firms who have received consignments are the Spokane Greenhouse Co., Inc., A. J. Burt, the Hoyt Bros. Co. and Henry Reimers.

Special credit is due to Olsson & Bernson and to Henry Reimers for the fine cyclamen stock they are bringing into shape for the Christmas trade. The 8-inch pans at both places are particularly fine.

During the interstate fair, held September 12 to 20, L. B. Hill assisted Superintendent of Parks Duncan in the staging of the floral exhibits.

L. B. H.

A CALL FROM CALIFORNIA.

To the Members of the S. A. F.—Welcome, thrice welcome to the Pacific coast, ye Society of American Horticulturists. "Horticulture" and "horticulturists" appeal to the undersigned as being broader than merely "florists" or "floriculture," and would seem to embrace all that is really necessary in a title to our good, 30-year-old S. A. F.

I do not believe it is necessary to have "professional" as a part of that title, notwithstanding the fact that our capable and worthy president, Theodore Wirth—and my good friend—has so recommended in his admirably written message to the fraternity. The fewer words used in a given title, provided it conveys all that is necessary, the better. The words "ornamental horticulturists," added to the society's name, have always appeared cumbersome. It may take some time to effect the desired change, but come I feel it will, sooner or later. But, no matter what name the society comes under to the Panama-Pacific Exposition, to be held in San Francisco in 1915, all the members will be welcome, welcome!

Good accounts are spreading as to the progress being made in all the departments toward having everything in readiness at the exposition for the opening day, and the horticultural department is, I am assured, among those farthest forward.

Excursions to the Panama Exposition, in its present state, are arranged at intervals by the Southern Pacific Railroad Co., and, if my informant was not mistaken, as high as $40,000 monthly are being taken in at the gates at an admission of 25 cents. So far this writer has not had an opportunity of seeing for himself the progress made, but he hopes to do so when there are not quite so many details to look after on the Floradale seed ranch.

It is to be hoped a large gathering of the members can see their way clear to join in the trip, for it will be quite as easy for the leaders in horticulture, also the rank and file, to come to California, as it was for the same party to go to Cincinnati to the initial meeting thirty years ago.

It goes without saying, we will welcome to the Burpee Floradale seed ranch all who will give us a call. At that season of the year our sweet pea harvesting may be over, but we hope to have something worth inspecting at the time the convention will be held, namely, I believe, in August.

Edwin Lonsdale,
Vice-President for Southern California.

TACOMA, WASH.

The Market.

This city has shown a decided change in the retail line, and stock moves much more briskly than it did a few weeks ago. The recent rains have done great damage to the outdoor stock. This has had a tendency to stiffen prices of indoor stock.

Carnations and roses are none too plentiful, while the quality is slightly improved. Asters, gladioli and sweet peas are still the favorites with the cheaper class of trade.

Various Notes.

The new retail store, The Fern, is reported to be doing a good business.

The Evergreen Florists have moved to their new location on C street. The building where they were formerly located is being remodeled. J. L. S.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

Never, perhaps, was the uncertainty of the florists' business more marked than during the present week. It opened well; every retailer with whom I spoke had an excellent call for stock of all kinds. Later in the week it sloughed off and then the stores rapidly filled up again. Taken all around, though, there is "no kick coming" for this time of year and everything points to a good fall business.

Outdoor roses are extra fine, especially Cochet, white, pink and red. This old rose, in its several varieties, holds its own in spite of the number of new ones constantly being put on the market. Indoor flowers are good for the season. The new September Morn easily leads everything here in pink roses for lasting quality and general excellence as a forcing rose. There is absolutely nothing like it in its color. Carnations are fine, especially the reds, which are not covered with thrips marks, as usual at this season. All outdoor flowers are plentiful, especially dahlias, while the sweetly scented Belladonna lilies are still seen around the stores.

Various Notes.

Away back in March of this year, William Pfitzer, of Stuttgart, Germany, sent over a case of bulbs of Gladiolus Schwaben to Jacob Dieterich, of this town, with a view to their being grown here and eventually sent to the big shows at San Francisco and San Diego. Being shipped by mail, they were turned down by the customs officers and returned to Germany. They were again shipped and, by the time they reached Los Angeles, I can answer for their being a pretty dry and shriveled looking lot, for I saw them. But, as showing their recuperative power, the flowers are now magnificent, and have been since the second week in August in Mr. Dieterich's Montebello nursery. It is interesting to note that this gladiolus is named after Mr. Dieterich's native place. Prominent men always have incorrect rumors floating around with reference to their birthplace, and this disproves the current story that Mr. Dieterich was born in Dublin.

At the store of Wolfskills' & Morris Goldenson, funeral work has been the principal outlet for stock, but there has been a lot of it, and of good quality.

Wright's Flower Shop is noted for the large quantity of good stock always shown there, and Mr. Wright says he never had better stock, either cut flowers or plants, than this year. Business keeps up well here.

The new firm, Smith & Dieterich, has made an auspicious start by securing a

NEW SWEET PEA

MONROVIA

For several years this has been the best seller on the Los Angeles and other local markets, and I have decided to offer it to the trade as long as the stock lasts at $5.00 per ounce.

Monrovia begins to flower when only about one foot high and continues to bloom profusely until it reaches 8 feet high outdoors. It will make a splendid greenhouse variety, as the buds do not drop under any conditions. The color is a deep purple outside, inside heliotrope, and it is unquestionably the finest winter-blooming purple in existence. The seed has been carefully re-selected from large pods only. It was gathered in April and May in the foothill section, and is consequently mature and of high germinating power. It is an exceptionally stout grower and throws long stemmed flowers all through the season, four to six flowers to the stem. This offer will be withdrawn as soon as present stock is exhausted.

five-year lease on the splendid store at the northeast corner of Seventh and Figueroa streets. This is to be fitted up as a first-class retail store, with office room for the landscape business of the firm. The store room is 35x60, with a basement the same size. The houses and premises at Wall street are being renovated and the nursery stock will be handled from here as heretofore, in connection with the 25-acre nursery at Montebello.

Dr. Parker, of Santa Cruz, has been paying Los Angeles a visit. He is now heavily interested in the Leedham Bulb Co., if not the entire owner, but still has time to look after his orchids.

The H. N. Gage Co. is sending in fine chrysanthemums and reports trade good.

The Markwell funeral made a lot of work for the retail store of Howard & Smith. The new lath house at the nursery at Montebello is in fine shape now, all planted with stock that looks exceedingly well. The shipping business has kept up well here.

IMPORTANCE OF TRADE CENSUS.

In an appeal to the trade to assist in the census of the industry recently undertaken by the Horticultural Trades Association of Great Britain, W. Cuthbertson, of Dobbie & Co., Edinburgh, president of the organization, says in part:

"The Council of the Horticultural Trades Association has done many things during the last fifteen years for the benefit of the trade as a whole, but it has never put its hand to a piece of work which is likely to be more helpful than the attempt to secure statistics showing the importance of the horticultural trade, in connection with which circulars were recently sent out.

"Everything has been arranged so that no fact or figure sent in will ever get beyond the private room of the eminent accountants who are undertaking the work—no member of the trade will see a single return. The totals only will be furnished to the Council, and these can only be of value and service if they are fairly complete.

"Many hundreds of returns have not yet been sent in to Price, Waterhouse & Co., and we beg that those who have not sent will give the matter serious consideration at once. It is surely the duty of every trader to do this much to help himself and his fellow-traders. There is an almost continuous cry of want of cohesion in the horticultural trade. When an opportunity like the present arises, let us for once unite into a solid body.

"The questions need cause no great difficulty. Every man knows the area of the land he cultivates, and it matters not whether it is freehold or leasehold for the purpose of Question 2.

"Question 3 asks the area of glasshouses—that is the area of ground covered with glass in square feet. This also is simple. If a grower has five houses, each 20x100 feet, that is equal to 10,000 square feet.

"The average number of employees (Question 4) is more difficult, especially when casual labor is employed, but all that is expected is an honest attempt to give the figures. There can be no difficulty with regular employees whose names appear in the wages book all the year round. If in spring or summer extra men, women or boys are taken on, the average for the year must be arrived at something in this way: Suppose we take ordinary laborers employed for hoeing, etc., and paid £1 a week. If such are employed for three months and if there are, say, four of them, that is equal to an average of one man for the year. The aggregate wages for the year (Question 5) should not give any trouble, as this figure must be easily got by any firm, large or small.

"The capital involved in the business (Question 6) can approximately be found by asking oneself (if no other method is available) the question, 'For how much would I sell out?'

"We do appeal to everyone who has not yet sent in the return to sit down and give half an hour's work to it."

TO DESTROY BUGS.

I have sent you, under separate cover, some bugs which have done great damage to my flowers this season. Can you tell me what they are called and the best way to get rid of them? They eat any flower in bloom, also the silk and tassel on sweet corn, and in consequence no kernels will form on the ears. H. F.

This pest I am unacquainted with. I should say that it could be destroyed on all flowers by spraying with Paris green at the rate of one ounce to fifteen gallons of water. Add a little lime and there is practically no danger of burning. The Paris green will not discolor the leaves or flowers like arsenate of lead. On sweet corn, I would use arsenate of lead at the rate of four pounds to fifty gallons of water, unless you are going to use the stalks for fodder. C. W.

NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

WITH the permission of the court, James H. Fraser, receiver for the Montana Nursery Co., of Billings, Mont., has sold the nursery packing plant at private sale for $3,500.

C. S. HARRISON, head of the C. S. Harrison Select Nursery Co., of York, Neb., has issued the third edition of his peony manual, which treats of the propagation, cultivation, etc., of this flower.

THE wholesale catalogue of the California Rose Co., of Pomona, is unique in that it gives the originator's name and the date of dissemination of each of the approximately 250 varieties listed.

POSSIBLY as a reaction against the high cost of living, the Pomona Ten-Cent Nurseries have been incorporated at Dansville, N. Y., with a capital stock of $5,000. The incorporators are H. A. Burdick, C. E. and F. W. Wells.

AFTER a three months' sojourn in Europe and an exciting last month, Julius Heurlin, proprietor of the Blue Hill Nursery, at Braintree, Mass., has returned. The greater part of the last two months of his stay abroad was spent in Switzerland.

NURSERYMEN will learn with great regret of the death of Peter Bohlender, head of the firm of Peter Bohlender & Sons, proprietors of the Spring Hill Nurseries, at Tippecanoe City, O. The report of his death and an account of his life appears in this week's obituary column.

A VOLUME of 128 pages, well bound in a green paper cover, carries the proceedings of the thirty-ninth annual convention of the American Association of Nurserymen, held at Cleveland June 24 to 26. The book is neatly got up and shows the care of Secretary John Hall throughout.

COMPLAINT has been filed in the controller's office of the city of New York by Swain Nelson & Sons Co., of Chicago, in regard to nearly 150 elm trees, which, it is asserted, were received by the park department of New York in 1911 but never paid for. The park department disclaims responsibility and is prepared to fight any litigation.

ARTICLES of incorporation have been filed by the Greysolon Nursery Co., of Duluth, Minn., organized to do a nursery and seed business in that city. The officers of the company are: President, C. E. Roe; vice-president, Louis Christensen; treasurer, E. R. Cobb, and secretary, J. A. P. Neal. They, with T. W. Walker, are the incorporators and form the first board of directors. The capital stock is $50,000.

PRICES ON THE JUMP.

A catalogue just to hand from a western nursery contains a slip which reads as follows:

"Quotations are not guaranteed unless order is placed at once. Practically every item we buy, including domestic supplies, has jumped in price during the last ten days, and the end is not yet if the European war continues. The nurseryman can hope to make a living only by increasing the selling prices in proportion to the cost of production. Importations of all kinds have practically stopped and the indications are that we shall all shortly be paying an internal revenue tax."

NEW YORKERS IN SESSION.

Annual Meeting at Rochester.

Laws of the state formed the basis of the greater part of the discussion at the annual meeting of the New York State Nurserymen's Association, which was held September 10, at the Chamber of Commerce, Rochester. About forty members were in attendance.

The workmen's compensation law came up for much consideration, as it has not yet been made clear whether nursery workers are in the same class with farm laborers, although the nature of their work is much the same. The association will therefore submit to the workmen's compensation commission a request for a definite ruling.

The discussion in connection with the law in regard to the sale of trees hinged mainly on the clause which places upon the seller the burden of proof if the purchaser claims that an unwritten contract is violated. It is urged upon members and upon New York nurserymen in general that they make as few verbal agreements as possible.

The Officers.

All the officers of the association were reëlected, except that W. L. Hart, of Fredonia, was chosen fifth vice-president, taking the place of F. E. Schifferli, of the same place. William Pitkin, of Rochester, was added to the executive committee, the other members of which are J. B. Morey, of Danville, and John P. Rice, of Geneva. The officers are:

President—E. S. Osborne, of Rochester.

Vice-presidents—J. M. Pitkin, of Newark; Maxwell Sweet, of Dansville; F. A. Guernsey, of Schoharie; T. J. Smith, of Geneva; W. L. Hart, of Fredonia.

Treasurer—Horace Hooker, of Rochester.

Secretary—H. B. Phillips, of Rochester.

THE PHOENIX RECEIVERSHIP.

Although the consensus of opinion among the out-of-town creditors of the Phoenix Nursery Co., of Bloomington, Ill., according to the replies received by John Y. Chisholm, receiver of the concern, in response to his query accompanying his report for the year, seems to be that the business should be continued as at present, local creditors, who met with Mr. Chisholm September 4, feel that it is not advisable to continue the business under the direction of a receiver. If, however, some organization could be perfected whereby the business could be continued at a profit, they would like to have such steps taken. There seems to be no one, however, who is sufficiently interested in the concern to advance the money necessary to continue the business.

The receiver has decided to continue the business for the present and sell stock on hand at catalogue prices, awaiting the convening of the court later in the month. It is possible, in view of the discussion at the meeting of local creditors, that the business may be closed up.

SORBUS AMERICANA.

I am mailing under separate cover a small branch from a tree bearing bright orange-colored berries. I should appreciate it if you would give me the name of this tree and a little of its history. C. F. M.

Sorbus Americana, commonly called mountain ash and dogberry, makes a bold, striking tree, and is particularly beautiful while in fruit. The foliage also takes on a fine coloring in the fall. There are some thirty species of sorbus found in North America. The one forwarded and Sorbus Aucuparia, formerly called Pyrus, the European mountain ash, or rowan tree of Scotland, are the two species most worthy of culture. They are hardy and seem particularly free from attacks of insects as well as fungoid affections. C. W.

HOLLANDERS STILL BUSY.

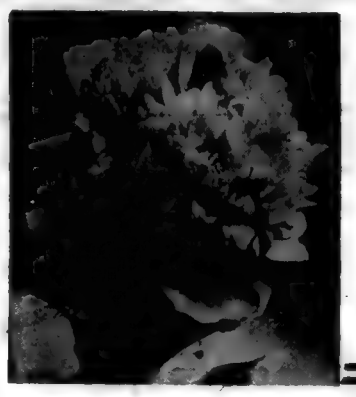
Since the first of the month of August the European war is raging with an intensity the world has never experienced before. The glorious discoveries of the peace, ingenious and practical as they are, are now misused for purposes of war, for killing and destroying, and the more skillful the products of science became, the more effective they now prove to be.

The American daily papers will undoubtedly give a true and up-to-date account of the proceedings and it will be needless for us to picture the war incidents.

We are happy to state that Holland so far has kept neutral and we have the most decided assurance that our government will keep this up with every might and power. This is for us a great consolation, as we have no desire to mingle in the great fight against nations with which we have lived in peace ever since we can remember and to which we have feelings of friendship only.

The neutrality of Holland places us in the happy position that we can ship to several countries. It may be that there will be some delay, as we will depend upon the steamships available, but we are assured that the Holland-America line will keep up its service and that there will be no increase in freight rates and assurance premiums, except a little addition to the latter when molest is included.

We can report that owing to the favorable weather all through the growing season the stock is in beautiful condition and there is plenty of help to keep it so. Packing and shipping will therefore find little or no delay.



Prices have not changed materially on account of the war. The growers do not feel like sacrificing on same, since it is not uncertain that conditions may change soon.

Nurserymen and florists who placed their orders with Boskoop houses can depend upon receiving their goods as usual without increase of cost.

It is sincerely to be hoped that the war may soon be over and that the higher human motives may ultimately triumph in Europe.

The Market.

Stock of all kinds continues plentiful and fully equal to requirements. The demand has picked up considerably, owing to the large number of fall openings, but prices have not changed materially. Southern smilax is selling well and is in demand.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club held its regular monthly meeting at the Hotel Gilson. It was well attended. Charles H. Meeds, chief engineer of the local park department, gave an interesting talk on the Cincinnati parks and their needs.

A. C. Heckman, Jr., and Alex. Ostendarp, who have been doing business as the Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange, have dissolved partnership, the former retiring. Mr. Ostendarp will continue to conduct the business under the name of the Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange.

C. E. Critchell says he has been filling many orders for wild smilax and that the stock is excellent for so early in the season.

NEWPORT, R. I.

The sixteenth annual ball of the Newport Horticultural Society was held at Newport Beach September 8, and sustained the reputation the society has for always giving successful affairs. The decorations were tasteful and artistic. John T. Allen was floor manager, his assistant being Col. Herbert Bliss and the aids William McKay, Hugh Meikle, John Urquhart, Frederick Carter and Alexander Fraser. On the reception committee were: A. K. McMahon, James McLeish, Alex. McLellan, John T. Allen, William McKay, Richard Gardner, James Sullivan, Bruce Butterton and Andrew S. Meikle.

The decorations for the Pierson-Bogert wedding, both house and church, were furnished by Wadley & Smythe.

All the florists report having had exceptionally good business during the summer just closing. W. H. M.

State Fair Flower Show.

In the classes open to professional florists in the flower show at the state fair the special prize of $100 for the best collection and display of roses, comprising 500 blooms of at least twelve distinct varieties, was won by the F. R. Pierson Co., of Tarrytown, N. Y. The Wm. F. Kasting Co., of Buffalo, took second prize. Awards in other rose classes were as follows:

Twelve American Beauties—F. R. Pierson Co., first; Chester A. Harris, Syracuse, second; Wm. F. Kasting Co., third.

Any other red rose—F. R. Pierson Co., first; Chester A. Harris, second; Wm. F. Kasting Co., third.

Any yellow rose—F. R. Pierson Co., first; Chester A. Harris, second.

Twelve Brides—Chester A. Harris, first.

Twelve Bridesmaids—Chester A. Harris, first.

Killarney and White Killarney—F. R. Pierson Co., first; Chester A. Harris, second; Wm. F. Kasting Co., third.

Among those taking prizes in the professional classes for gladioli were Henry Youell, F. R. Smith, Hugh Meneilly and Chester A. Harris, all of Syracuse, and Mrs. E. S. Mather, of Cazenovia.

Hugh Meneilly won the prize of $70 for the best collection of stove and greenhouse plants covering an area of 50 square feet. Second prize of $60 went to Howard Meneilly, of Syracuse.

The Pierce-Christian Co., of Syracuse, took firsts in two classes for floral pieces, spray of fifty roses and spray of fifty carnations, second prizes going to Chester A. Harris. The bride's bouquet class called forth keen competition; first prize was won by Werner F. Bultman, of Syracuse; second by the Pierce-Christian Co., and third by Chester A. Harris.

HONOR TO WHOM HONOR IS DUE.

Godfrey Aschmann, the Philadelphia plantsman, at the age of 67, is as active as ever (a visit to his establishment will convince you). He is a native of Switzerland, of the right thinking, active, fiery type, and, like the Deutsche Kaiser, full of courage and ambition. He is not afraid of the combined armies of the so-called florists, and he is sure he will carry the field when other florists are down-hearted and holding back on account of hard times and afraid to invest a dollar. Godfrey Aschmann has his eyes open—he watches and looks into the future—buys up all the good stock he can get, fills his houses with the choicest and is prepared when the rush comes.

ARAUCARIA
OUR SPECIALTY

WAR ABROAD will make the Araucarias scarce this fall and winter. But look, it won't affect Godfrey Aschmann. Why? We were not afraid to invest thousands of dollars in importing the plants in the spring of 1914, hence we do not care for the war, and are prepared to fill all orders—4 houses are filled with the choice ARAUCARIA EXCELSA. We are again able to fill all orders. 5½ and 6-inch pots, 2, 3, 4, 5 years old, 14, 15, 20 to 25 in. high, well established. 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. EXCELSA GLAUCA and ROBUSTA COMPACTA, large plants, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00.

AZALEA INDICA, beautiful strong plants, full of foliage and buds, in good shape, the best commercial varieties, Christmas or Easter blooming, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00.

PALMS.

BELMOREANA and FORSTERIANA, bushy, stocky plants, new importation, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50. K. BELMOREANA, single plants, bushy, 5½-inch pots, 50c, 60c and 75c; made up of three plants, bushy, 5½ and 6-inch pots, 50c, 60c and 75c. FORSTERIANA, single and made up, 5½-inch pots, 50c, 60c and 75c.

COCOS WEDDELLIANA, 3-inch, 15c, 18c and 20c.

CYCAS REVOLUTA, or Sago Palm, 6, 7, 8-in. pots, large leaved, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9 to 10 leaves to a plant, leaves 25 to 30 in. high, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00.

FICUS ELASTICA (Rubber Plant), 6, 7-in. pots, 40c, 50c, 75c, $1.00. Large, staked up.

HYDRANGEA OTAKSA, 6, 7, 8-in. pots, bushy, pot-grown, 25c, 50c, 75c, $1.00 to $1.50. The Otaksa is the only pink variety that will stand the winter at the sea shore and elsewhere. Five best French varieties, 5½, 6-in. pots, pot-grown, 25c, 35c, 40c.

BEGONIA ARGENTEO-GUTTATA, 4-in. pots, large plants, 15c.

BEGONIA LUMINOSA for Xmas blooming, 2¼ in., $5.00 per 100.

BEGONIA LUMINOSA, improved winter flowering dark red, 4-in., 10c; 5¼-in., 20c. In bloom.

BEGONIA ZULU KING, beautiful red of dwarf habit, 2¼-in., $5.00 per 100.

SIX-INCH PANS: Table Ferns, Albo-Lineata, Aspidium Tussimense, Pteris Serrulata, Wilsoni, 25c per pan; large 6-in. azalea pots of Pteris Mayii, immensely large size and magnificent, 40c to 75c.

TORONTO, ONT.

Canadian National Exhibition.

The horticultural section at the Canadian National Exhibition was well patronized by the crowds at the exhibition last week, three special features attracting considerable attention. No less than 752 varieties of outdoor roses were shown by J. Moore, of Moore Park, Toronto, and it was generally conceded that the perfection of these blooms would help in no slight degree to convince the general public that it is quite possible to grow roses in their gardens during the entire summer.

The talks on floriculture and other phases of horticulture given by the superintendent, E. T. Cook, who was mainly responsible for the many changes in the management of the horticultural department, were listened to by interested audiences. The special design shown by S. A. Frost, resembling two horses, life sized, and a chariot, reflected great credit on the exhibitor, and with the splendid array of orchids put up by the Dale Estate, of Brampton, shared highest honors in this section.

In bridal bouquets, which were exquisitely arranged, the first prize went to H. G. Dillemuth; second, S. A. Frost; third, Wm. Manton.

PAWTUCKET, R. I.

The Market.

There was not much business done last week, except for one or two funerals. There is an oversupply of asters, all of good quality. Outdoor sweet peas are about gone. Gladioli have become scarce and what few are seen are of poor quality. Carnations are housed and some growers will commence cutting them in about a week.

Various Notes.

Fred Hoffman, in the Oak Hall building, has an attractive window display of excellent gloxinias.

Neil Ward, of Lonsdale, received a certificate of merit and a premium for a display of pansies at the Newport flower show; also a first prize for asters at the Esmond flower show. He has an immense bed of excellent asters.

Eugene McCarron is making extensive alterations to his greenhouses and store. The store, when completed, will rank as one of the best in the city.

With the completion, soon, of the new railroad station, which will be one of the best in the state, several florists are beginning seriously to consider the question whether a flower stand would pay well, as it does in the Providence station. Many have been making inquiries regarding it.

At the second annual fair of the Wrentham Grange, the prize-winners for flowers were: Harry T. Hayward, Thomas Proctor and Robert Ware. The last two were winners for the best displays of dahlias. Mr. Hayward's exhibition alone was worth a visit to the hall. Fred D. Randall had a unique display of date palms, raised from seed.

Mr. Demeres, caretaker at Jenks park, in Central Falls, who has had charge of the work of grading the lawn around the new District court in that city, is being complimented by the florists in that vicinity on the way in which he has done the work. T. F. B.

PANSIES.

PANSY PARK PERFECTION is the most thoroughbred strain of giant show and fancy pansies, the flowers of largest size and most perfect form. I have made growing of pansy seeds and plants a specialty for 40 years, and it is the result of many years of breeding and selection. It also contains every variety introduced by foreign growers up to date. One of many reports: "The pansy plants all look like good, healthy, stocky plants, and we feel will come up to all expectations." Henry J. Hass & Son, Newport, R. I. An immense stock of fine field-grown plants from seed sown thinly, broadcast, so that each plant has plenty of room to grow stocky and strong, with extra good roots. Over 75 varieties mixed, the reds, bronzes and best fancy sorts in large proportion, 1000, $3.00; 500, $1.75; 5000, $14.00; 10,000, $27.00. Ready after Sept. 25th. Cash.

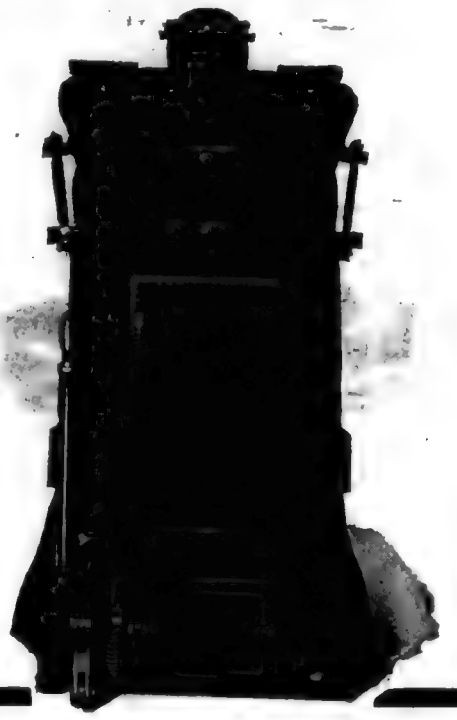
Greenhouse Heating.

Subscribers are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. But please do not ask The Review to make a choice of apparatus for you. The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

CAPACITY OF BOILER.



I want to ask you whether an upright steam boiler four feet in diameter, with 6-foot flues, has sufficient capacity to heat two greenhouses, connected, whose total floor space is 60x125 feet. Our location is northern Wyoming. We have had no experience with upright boilers and are at a loss to know how they heat. J. H. L.

Had the size of the grate been given, it would have been possible to tell much more definitely the size of the house it would heat. If the grate is three feet in diameter, it should handle 6,000 square feet of glass at 60 degrees, or 15,000 square feet at 50 degrees, about the size of the house described.

In using an upright boiler, care must be taken to have it placed low enough so that the drip water will be returned by gravity. If this cannot be done, a steam trap should be connected with the returns. In piping such a house, I would use three 2½-inch flows and twenty 1¼-inch returns for 60 degrees, and fifteen returns for 50 degrees.

HOUSES ON A HILLSIDE.

I am submitting a plan of my greenhouses, which I wish to heat with hot water. The houses run east and west. They are built on a hillside and the south wall is in the ground up to the eaves. The boiler room is at the northwest corner of the range. The side walls are concrete and are five feet high. There is not much exposed wall, as the west ends of the houses are protected by the workroom and storeroom, and the south wall, as already stated, is sunk in the ground. The boiler will be in the basement or cellar, seven feet six inches below the floor level of the greenhouses. Can you offer any suggestions as to the proper way to

"RICHARDSON" GREENHOUSE BOILERS

Were first put on the market many years ago. They were quickly recognized as possessing special adaptability to greenhouse requirements and have been sold to florists in steadily increasing numbers as the greenhouse industry has expanded.

A boiler must be a good boiler—and made by a strong, dependable manufacturer—to have withstood the stress of competition for so many years.

The "Richardson" line has developed with the needs of the trade. The "Richardson" now is made in sixty sizes, round, end feed, side feed—all sectional—for hot water and steam. They are low priced, but, better yet, they are fuel savers.

THE THREE MAIN POINTS IN BURNHAM ECONOMY

Side Flues

At the end of each of the spaces or cross fire channels, between each section, is an opening or flue, that leads from this lower story, or combustion chamber, into the upper story where the real fire travel begins.

You can easily see that if the opening for the hot gases and smoke leading into the upper story, were all at the back of the boiler, the hot gases and smoke would rush to those back sections and draw a large amount of heat away from the front ones. This is bad because only the back sections are fully efficient. The side flue openings in the Burnham draw an equal amount up each side flue opening between each section and make each section equally efficient.

Cross Channels

The cut at the left shows you that the shape of each water filled part of each section directly over the fire, is like a blunt ended wedge. This gives a deep space between each of the sections into which the hottest part of the fire is pocketed, and a large proportion of the heat directly absorbed from it by the water. It's the directest kind of direct surface that can't be beaten for economy.

Fire Travel

Once up in the second story, the hot gases and smoke start on their long journey back and forth three times on each side of the boiler. This traveling is done between water lined walls that hungrily grab what heat is left, leaving only enough to form the necessary draft in the chimney. It comes pretty close to squeezing the last drop of heat out of every pound of coal. It comes so near it in fact, that no other boiler can come as near it, and be a fact.

How about it—do you want to save money on your boiler when you buy it; or save money on your coal every year after the boiler is bought? The Burnham will do that last thing for you.

We can ship at once.

pipe the houses? I have no boiler yet, but I have a lot of 1-inch pipes which I should like to use. My location is eastern Ohio. I expect to use one house for lettuce and other vegetables, and the other house for flowers or whatever the trade demands.

J. L. N.

The sketch shows two houses, each 18x70, with twenty-four feet of glass in the roofs. One of the houses has two raised benches and the other three beds. For lettuce, carnations and other plants which require a temperature of 50 to 55 degrees, two 2½-inch flow pipes and seven 2-inch returns should be used in each of the houses.

The flows may be on the plates and the returns on the walls in the house with the beds, but in the other house it would be fully as well to have the returns under the benches and the flows just below the purlins.

While it would be preferable not to use the 1-inch pipe for the returns, it would give fairly good results if a generator is attached to the system. Thirteen or fourteen 1-inch returns will be required in each house for a temperature of 50 to 55 degrees. In case roses or other plants, needing 60 to 63 degrees, are to be grown, the returns should be increased to ten 2-inch or twenty 1-inch pipes.

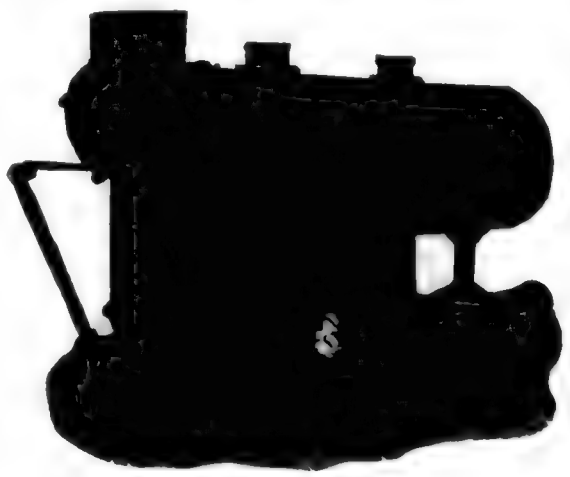
In choosing a boiler for heating the two houses, it will be advisable to select one with a rating of 1,200 square feet of radiation if a temperature of 50 to 55 degrees is desired, and 1,000 square feet for 60 to 65 degrees. If there is a likelihood of an increase in the size of the range, it would be well to provide heating capacity at this time to the extent of at least an additional 70-foot house. In case a still greater increase is to be made, it will be better to provide an additional boiler when the addition is made.

AN INDIANA LETTUCE HOUSE.

We are building a greenhouse, 21x50, and intend to grow lettuce and vegetable plants. We have a hot water boiler, with a rating of 1,250 square feet. It has six 2-inch outlets and the same number of openings for returns. Please state how many runs of 2-inch pipe, mains and returns, will be necessary to heat the house properly. What day and night temperatures should be maintained? A. P. R.

I would suggest the use of two 2½-inch flow pipes and eight 2-inch returns. While it would be desirable to have 2½-inch openings in the boiler for the flows and returns, it will answer if the flows and returns are reduced to 2-inch at the boiler. If piped as I have suggested, the flows should be on the plates and the returns should be either on the walls or under the side benches, if raised benches are used. Another way of piping the house would be to use three 2-inch flow pipes and nine or ten 2-inch returns. With this system of piping, which would give good results if there are raised benches in the middle of the house, one of the flow pipes should be under the ridge and three or four of the returns should be under the middle bench.

With this piping there should be no difficulty in maintaining, in zero weather, a night temperature of 50 to 55 degrees and a day temperature 10 degrees higher, which will be about right for lettuce. If the head varieties of lettuce are grown, a slightly lower temperature than this will be desirable, unless a little ventilation is given.



In reckoning the radiation needed, it should be understood that no allowance has been made for glass in the side walls. If glass is used in the walls, it will be advisable to add an additional return for each thirty inches of glass.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

There was a slight betterment in business last week, as the returning of many families from the seashore or the country caused an increase in the demand for cut flowers for the house. A decided fall in temperature somewhat spoiled the outdoor flowers and the deficiencies had to be made up from the house stocks. Asters have been especially good in quantity and quality this season and thousands have been sold readily. Roses have held good all summer and gladioli have surpassed all previous years.

Various Notes.

A light frost, the first of the season, was reported from the Oaklawn section on the morning of September 9.

The first annual show under the auspices of the Esmond Horticultural Society was held last week and proved quite successful. The exhibition was almost entirely of asters and dahlias.

The annual September display of flowers, fruits and vegetables by the Greystone Horticultural Society was held at the Whitehall building, in Greystone, September 12, and was the finest ever held. Dahlias and asters predominated.

Albert Holscher is bringing in the first chysanthemums of the season.

Fred Deitz has returned from an automobile trip to New York, where he combined business and pleasure.

James Burke, manager of the Warwick Greenhouses, at Warwick, has just been putting in two large new boilers.

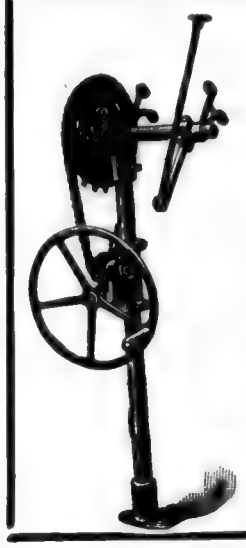
WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

The change in the temperature shortened the supply of flowers, but had little or no effect on either prices or demand. Last week the only rose of which there was a sufficient quantity to more than supply all calls was the American Beauty, all other roses cleaning up well each day. The quality of the flowers now coming in seems to have suffered considerably. Asters in this locality are about over for the season, although a few good ones still are reaching the market. Their place is being taken by chrysanthemums, for Golden Glow, Smith's Advance and one or two other varieties are to be had. Orchids are scarce, but there is little demand. Dahlias have begun to make their appearance, but as yet are in little demand. Carnations are coming along better, although the short stems preclude the use of these flowers for other than funeral work.



Various Notes.

The coming of the cool weather has produced a number of exceptionally fine window displays, most of these being in the form of rustic scenes. At the stores of George C. Shaffer, Marche & Co., J. A. Phillips, Gude Bros. Co., and O. A. C. Oehmler it looks as though a section of the great outdoors had been transplanted behind the plate glass windows. These displays consist of rustic houses and of rustic bridges crossing small streams wherein are lilies and goldfish. These displays are attracting considerable attention and are proving themselves well worth the trouble.

Miss Nellie Breuninger, with Gude Bros. Co., is spending a two weeks' vacation at Atlantic City, N. J.

John G. Heinl, of Terre Haute, Ind., spent several days in this city last week. He visited a number of the greenhouses and made a trip through the park system. While at the houses of Gude Bros. Co. he expressed himself as well pleased with the view obtained of their gardenia houses, saying this fully repaid him for the trip he had taken.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

Business in general was not quite so good last week. There has been too much dark, rainy weather, and while this condition has retarded the growth of stock to some extent, it has also retarded the sales. The first week in September should have shown up better than it did.

The supply of new carnations is not increasing as fast as it should and, in consequence, asters are still selling well. The new carnations are short-stemmed and small and the asters are not as good as they might be. There are some fine greenhouse-grown asters in the market and these are bringing top-notch prices. Gladioli are still in the market, although of inferior quality. They are moving fairly well, despite the fact that the stock is not improving. The first chrysanthemums are coming in and are in fine shape. They are selling well, although the prices are not so good as last year as yet. The stock seems better this year, but this stock brought exceptionally good prices last year. There are lots of lilies in the market at this time and they are moving fairly well. Valley, of course, is not plentiful, but the cut is satisfying the needs of the trade. Roses are somewhat scarcer, on account of the cloudy weather, but the quality is extra fine and the stock is moving every day.

Various Notes.

The annual Wisconsin state fair is held here September 14 to 18, and the florists had planned a larger exhibition than ever before. The size of the florists' display is increasing every year and has already reached such proportions that some attractive premiums are offered for the different classes of stock shown.

The Holton & Hunkel Co. has just purchased a new Kissel Kar auto truck. It is quite large and has a special body that will make it possible for this firm to transport a large quantity of stock at one load. The new car will be used mainly at the large greenhouses and will greatly facilitate the handling of stock.

John Kruchten, of Chicago, made this city a short visit last week on business.

H. J. S.

Austin, Tex.—At the last meeting of the Austin Florists' Club, which was held at the home of Olaf Olson Wednesday evening, September 9, with the largest attendance in the club's history, plans were made for a fall flower show. Competition is to be open to amateurs only and the proceeds are to go to a local charity.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

The Market.

During the last six weeks business has been practically at a standstill. Funeral work and special sales on Saturdays at reduced prices are the only means of getting along at all. Those having hotels to supply are fortunate. Collections are poor and about all one can get is promises.

Stock is plentiful and good. Asters are the best in years and sell for 35 and 50 cents per dozen. Gladioli are excellent and sell for $1 a dozen. Roses are fair. Carnations are not on the market yet.

Lilies, both giganteum and speciosum, are good, but florists find sale for them only in funeral work. A few Golden Glow mums are coming in. The rest of the outdoor stock is plentiful and good, but there is not much sale for it, and much finds its way to the dump.

Carnations are all planted and for the most part are looking fine. Some growers are having bad luck with stem-rot on stock that was bought from out of the city. Mums, on the whole, are looking better than they did last year, but if business does not improve in the fall, there will be some hard times for the growers.

Various Notes.

Mark Aitken opened a new store September 5, at 418 Main street. The store is to be known as Aitken's Cash Branch Store. It is handsomely finished in white, with mirrors and marble counters. Specials in fancy boxes of cut flowers are for sale on Saturdays and ten per cent discount is allowed at all times on regular prices for cash. The store is in charge of two young men of well known ability in the art of selling and making up floral pieces. Mr. Aitken has remodeled the front of his other store on Main street. His greenhouses in Agawam are full of stock and it is looking fine. A large number of asters are grown under cloth. A large number of annuals and perennials are grown for cut flowers.

William Schlatter is installing a new Kroeschell boiler and repiping some of his houses. He had a large trade in cemetery bouquets for Flower day at Oak Grove cemetery.

N. F. Higgins' greenhouses show some fine mums, giganteum and speciosum lilies. The asters are quite good; a late sowing of seed was made, plants from which are just coming into flower, and the earlier ones are in their prime.

The Springfield Cemetery Association has added a new greenhouse to the range and built a new office opposite the houses. F. J. C.

ALWAYS MENTION THE FLORISTS' REVIEW WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS

HOW DO YOU LIKE OUR NEW FALL DRESS?

With this issue The Review has published a series of fifty-two consecutive weekly editions, no one of which has carried less than 100 pages—a straight year of 100 pages and up! It seems an appropriate time to drop the pamphlet style of binding heretofore used and give the trade a journal the appearance of which will be as good as the contents. For the contents must be good, unusually good—otherwise the demand for space never would have grown to the point where 100 or more pages are necessary each and every week in the year.

IN the year completed with this issue The Review has printed a grand total of 6,132 pages—100 pages in the smallest issue, 180 pages in the largest; an average of 118 pages for the fifty-two issues. Also, it has printed approximately 600,000 copies, the press room order having been 11,000 copies one year ago and 12,000 copies now.

Service the Basis.

The continued success of any business is based on the ability of that business to render a public service—and the knowledge that the business is meeting a general need always is one of the chief recompenses of the management. The steady, almost rapid, growth of the paper in its seventeenth year is convincing evidence that the service The Review gives the trade is good service, a needed service—and appreciated.

Those 6,132 pages, and the 600,000 copies, are the measure both of The Review's service in its field and of the trade's appreciation of that service.

In this connection there may be interest for some in the accompanying table comparing the circulation and rates of a dozen weekly trade papers picked because each is a leader in its field. Twelve are used because it is enough to make the points—the leading papers in fifty trades would show no more, and no less.

Cost to Readers.

Take the matter of subscription price: Of these dozen papers picked at random only one charges its readers as little as The Review. Several charge $5 a year, and the average for the lot is $3.12½.

Editorially The Review might be stronger if its income were larger—and it might be more expensively printed—but it is doubtful if it would thereby render a better service to the trade. With a low subscription price the paper is within the reach of all who care to read—and with 12,000 copies printed for a trade of no greater numerical strength, The Review covers its field with wonderful thoroughness. Just how thoroughly can best be seen by consulting the table.

In Other Trades.

Possibly the best known trade paper in America is Iron Age. Its circulation is almost exactly the same as that of The Review. But how much larger is its field?

Take the lumber trade: Its leading paper has a circulation hardly greater than The Review. But how many more lumbermen are there than florists? Ten times as many? Perhaps more than ten.

Then the dry goods trade: Its leading paper has a circulation almost the same as the florists'. But there surely are a dozen dry goods stores and factories to every florist.

The price of subscription should not be considered in this. The publication best serves its trade that is bought and read by the largest percentage of those in its field.

From which it may be deduced that no one of these leading trade papers serves its trade anywhere near so well as The Review serves the florists' trade.

Volume of Advertising.

A paper that covers its field as thoroughly as does The Review would almost inevitably have a large advertising patronage. The only thing that could prevent would be prohibitive charges for space.

And Review rates are not prohibitive. They easily can be called reasonable. Indeed, after noting what the others of this dozen leaders charge one might almost say Review rates are decidedly and definitely low.

But this is only another form of excellent service to the whole trade—to buyers as well as sellers.

A trade paper owes its first duty to its subscribers. Good service to its readers lies primarily in telling the trade news truthfully and fully—and how can the trade news be told fully without a full showing of ads? For the trade news is found in the ads quite as much as in the text.

A Word on Rates.

By charging a distinctly reasonable rate for the use of its space The Review makes it possible for all who wish to put their business news before the trade in attractive form.

The publisher's advantages in the lowest possible rate include: A big assortment of trade offers that in most cases are as interesting as editorial matter; a low cost for solicitation, the publisher's selling expense; a steady volume of business to keep the plant running at minimum expense.

Rates of Other Leaders.

Note the yearly rates per page for the dozen papers in the table on this page. Regardless of circulation, none of them charges so little as The Review. Iron Age, with practically the same size circulation, charges exactly twice as much, Lumberman just three times The Review Ads.

Each of these papers carries a fine volume of advertising—but their space is not used, in proportion to the size of each field, anywhere near as generally as Review space is used.

In last week's issue The Review carried 1,555 separate advertisements, for each and every one of which its published, public card rates were charged without deviation. That's service.

It is service to buyer. It is service to seller. Not so good service as will be given in the future, perhaps, but good service as judged by all the accepted standards—also, good service as judged by comparison with the circulation and rates of other leading trade papers—any trade papers.

SPANISH IRISES.

Please give me some information on the growing of Spanish irises, stating when to plant them, whether in flats or benches, and how close together. Will they do well if planted with carnations? What temperature is required? What varieties would be best? I want to grow purple, light blue and white varieties. My location, you will notice, is northwestern Oregon. F. W. G.

Spanish irises can be easily and successfully grown in your state either under glass or outdoors. They are perfectly winter-hardy, even without protection. In growing them outdoors, plant them quite late, just before the ground freezes, as this iris starts to grow at once when in the soil, but even zero weather does not affect the young growths at all. For forcing, flats five to six inches in depth are preferable to more shallow ones. A flat 12x24 inches will hold eighty to 100 bulbs. Stand these in coldframes or even outdoors until frosts become too sharp. They are more easily injured in flats than when planted outdoors. It does not pay to house flats before Christmas. Start in a cool house; 45 to 48 degrees at night should not be exceeded. If a spare bench can be devoted to their culture, they will flower splendidly with you. The bulbs can be placed three to four inches apart each way. They are useful for dotting among carnations, especially where any of these chance to die out. The night temperature for them should not exceed 50 degrees.

A few first-class varieties are: Louise, pale blue, a beautiful variety; Chrysolora, canary yellow; Belle Chinoise, buttercup yellow; British Queen, splendid pure white; King of the Blues, dark blue, and Thunderbolt, bronze. Spanish irises like a light, sandy soil, with some well decayed manure added. They must not be planted where they will have wet feet. Severe cold will not affect them, but water at the roots will cause the bulbs to rot. C. W.

TIME TO SOW CINERARIA SEED.

When is the right time to sow cineraria seed to have the plants in flower for Easter? What temperature do they need and what kind of soil is best? A. S.

July and the early part of August is a suitable time to sow cineraria seed for an Easter supply. It is too late now to make a sowing, but you can obtain young seedlings at a low rate from advertisers in The Review. Cinerarias like a light, moderately rich soil. They must have a cool temperature, or green aphis will soon disfigure them. A night temperature of 45 degrees is ample and the plants should be sprayed with nicotine or fumigated every week, to keep them perfectly clean. They can be fed freely with liquid manure when the pots are well filled with roots. They must be protected at all times from strong sunshine. C. W.

BOSTON, August 31, 1914.

Florists' Publishing Co.,
Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen:-

We have been making a careful study of results obtained through our various advertising mediums, and, among the trade papers, we have found that we are obtaining the best results from the Florists' Review.

During the Convention in Boston, many visitors who came to our booth to inspect our advertising display mentioned the fact that they have seen a great deal of our advertising in the Florists' Review.

After careful investigation we are satisfied that yours is the leading Trade Paper and that the best results from advertising may be obtained by using its columns.

Yours very truly,

Penn the Florist.

THE CALL FOR KNOWLEDGE.

In a circular descriptive of the objects and facilities of the department of floriculture at the New York State College of Agriculture at Cornell University it is said:

"Flower growing in the United States is yearly becoming more and more important. In the early history of the industry competition was lacking and methods of culture were consequently crude. Within recent years the business has developed to such an extent, and competition has become so keen, that flower and plant producers now find it necessary to utilize scientific principles in the practice of the art.

"In recent years there has come to be a demand for education in floriculture along technical and practical lines. Young men are asking for this instruction. The practical growers are also seeking assistance in solving problems regarding culture of various florists' crops. They are coming to demand that their problems be given the same consideration in agricultural experiment stations as is given to the problems of the fruit grower, the dairyman and the poultryman. Several agricultural colleges and experiment stations are endeavoring to give the assistance that the florists so much need.

"New York is the largest flower-producing state in the Union. The census reports for 1910 give the total value of flowers and ornamental plants produced annually in the United States as $34,872,000. Of this amount the value of the plants produced in New York state was $5,110,221. The plants were grown in an area of 13,876,857 square feet of glass. Other states leading in flower production were Pennsylvania, $3,760,644; Illinois, $3,680,973; New Jersey, $2,839,319; and Massachusetts, $2,432,000. New York state, therefore, should lead in matters pertaining to floricultural instruction and investigation.

"There is an increasing demand for young men educated along flower-growing lines. This demand comes for men to engage in commercial flower and plant-growing establishments, in retail stores, in cemetery and park conservatories, on private estates, and in work in agricultural colleges and experiment stations. There has also arisen a demand for men and women competent to teach the principles and methods of flower and plant culture in the agricultural high schools that are being established so rapidly."

RETAIL STORE MANAGEMENT

WHAT THE LEADERS IN THE TRADE ARE DOING

HOW TO DO IT.

It is absolutely all right to send circulars or letters to possible flower buyers, telling them of your stock, your facilities, your aims, or even to make proposals in person at the proper time and place. It is not all right to pester with begging letters soliciting business, to run down your competitors, or to call unasked at a private house.

It is good business to have an attractive show window that will draw people into your shop by its charm, but it is bad business to go out on the pavement and bring them inside.

It is good business to show everything worth showing in your shop, and bad business to ask a prospective customer to buy it.

It is good business to talk, to draw your customer out. It is bad business to talk too much.

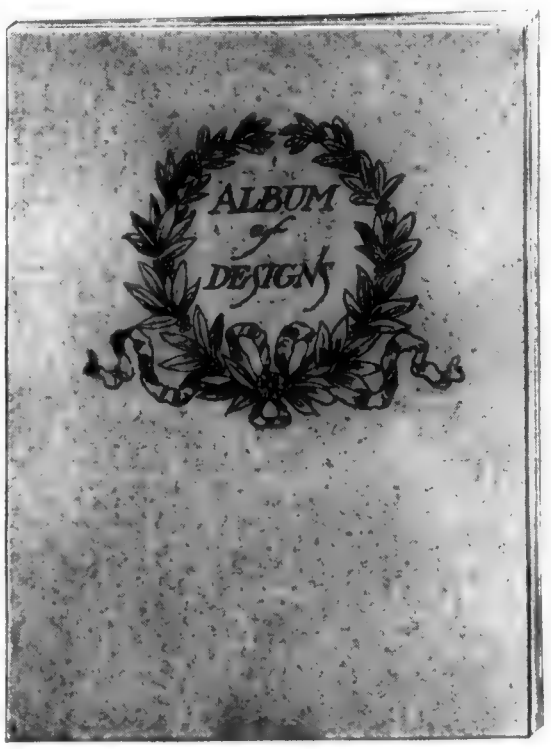
It is good business to show costly flowers or plants to a customer who can afford them. It is bad business to show them to one who cannot afford them.

It is good business to give all you have promised, and bad business to give less.

It is good business to give credit where means and integrity warrant, and bad business to give credit where means or integrity does not warrant.

It is good business to be courteous to everyone. It is bad business to waste your own and other people's time.

SIOUX CITY FIRM GROWS.



The branching out of the firm of Rocklin & Lehman, of Sioux City, Ia., with its opening of a store in Le Mars, Ia., marks one more step in the growth of this concern. It is seven years since M. E. Rocklin, now general manager of the three stores operated by this firm, came to Sioux City after many years' experience with E. H. Hunt and Bassett & Washburn, of Chicago, and opened a small store at 405 Douglas street. Prosperity led to the opening of a branch store in the Martin hotel, now in charge of Miss Shulkin, and the removal of the main store from Douglas street to new and larger quarters at 402 Fourth street, where Mr. Sullivan has charge. As stated above, a store was opened in Le Mars September 1, where the opening for a successful business seems good, and Mr. Newman is at the helm. The three stores of the firm take all the flowers of three of the largest Sioux City growers, who have a total of 100,000 feet of glass. The addition of an automobile truck to the delivery service has done its share in boosting the business.

Fresno, Cal.—Miss Kate Parsons, the retail florist, and Will S. Marshall, the nurseryman, are taking active parts in the improvement of the city as members of the city beautiful committee.

ON THE WAY.

"Let 'er roll," called the pressman to his assistant, and the big machine began grinding out the third printing of the Album of Designs. That was several days ago. Complete copies of the new edition are promised for delivery October 5.

The Album of Designs has proved the most successful book ever printed for florists. It met a widespread demand. Florists everywhere felt the lack of a means for showing prospective customers just how a funeral design or other arrangement would look. The album met the need. Among its 300 illustrations one can find almost any design that may be called for. In the handsomely printed pictures the florist can show, better than he can tell in words, how his design will look. Probably nothing ever did so much to make easy the selling of flowers. At any rate, the first edition sold out in half the time that was expected, the second edition went nearly as fast, and now The Review has orders on file for a large number of copies of the third edition, on which shipment will begin October 5, orders being filled in rotation. The price of the book is only 75 cents per copy, postpaid, or $6 per dozen by express, collect.

FROM A RETAILER'S VIEWPOINT.

[A paper entitled "The Florists' Business from a Retailer's Point of View," read by Charles F. Edgar before the meeting of the Lancaster County Florists' Club September 17.]

The retail florist of today, in order to make his business a paying proposition and be successful, must be original, artistic and up-to-the-minute, there having been many changes in this particular line in the last ten or twelve years.

In the olden days the customer who made a floral purchase would, nine times out of ten, have made up his mind as to about what he wanted—it would probably be a gates ajar, broken column, Bible, broken wheel, wheat sheaf or pillow—but things have changed. Today it is strictly up to the one behind the counter to make the suggestion, and the one who can suggest something out of the ordinary is the one who will win out in the long run.

Clusters, baskets and wreaths of various forms are becoming more popular every day and must be worked up in many different combinations and color schemes. Then comes the corsage bouquet of numerous types, made up for street wear and dances. Flowers for the sick are made presentable by being put in a basket with a water receptacle or packed loose in a box. All of these suggestions are looked for from the striving retailer, as the public is becoming more educated every day as to the varieties and keeping qualities of the many cut flowers that are grown.

Value of Appearance.

The appearance of one's shop and the courtesy shown by the clerks carry great weight with the prospective buyer, or, in other words, one must act as if nothing is a trouble to satisfy his customer.

The window should be kept up to the minute with seasonable stock and new ideas as to the uses of our productions, as this is the main advertising point and should not be neglected under any consideration. Then, it is up to him to turn out the best workmanship possible and give a dollar's worth for a dollar.

Right here might come in the subject of the cutting of prices. I would not maintain that a uniform price is the proper thing, but I do maintain that to cheapen the price because there is a surplus on the market is of no benefit to anyone; the sales are not increased to any appreciable extent, and the buyer does not properly appreciate what he buys, from the fact that the flowers are a cut-price article. This point could be enlarged upon indefinitely, but I want it well discussed from the different points of view of our members here.

The retailer, however, who does not grow his own flowers or plants and has to purchase all of his stock must look to the commission man or the grower for his main support, and in this case the grower should work with his commission man and keep him posted. The commission man can advise his retailer just what stock to purchase and push, and by all working together in the so-called coöperative way, we shall all derive benefit.

THROUGH THE RANKS.

If there is anyone in Detroit who knows every phase of the retail business from experience, it is John H. Klang, who is celebrating the opening of his new store at 715 East Forest avenue. Something less than twenty years ago Mr. Klang started in as delivery boy for John Breitmeyer's Sons. Proving his worth, he advanced in position and became familiar with all the branches of the business. After fifteen years' experience in all departments, he embarked in business for himself, in 1910, entering into the partnership of Klang & Rockelman. He purchased his partner's interest less than two years later and has since been proving the value of thorough experience for building up business. So successfully has he demonstrated this that he has recently erected a 2-story office building at the corner of Forest avenue and Chene street, and has installed his store on the ground floor. How up-to-date is Mr. Klang's store, inside and out, may be seen from the two views of the establishment given herewith. Not so apparent in the illustration showing the interior as they are in the store itself are the pattern of the mosaic floor, the tiled floor of the show windows and the floral decorations on the electric light globes, all of them worthy of note.

Interior of John H. Klang's New Store at Detroit, Mich.

THE BUSINESS OUTLOOK.

From a New York Retailer's Viewpoint.

The depression apparent in some lines of business is justified only where the business is built up on importation, or where the raw material cannot be secured elsewhere than in Europe. In our business, the conditions will hardly change in consequence of the war and we have absolutely nothing to complain of. We are in possession of much better growing establishments than Europe. Our greenhouses are not only much better built and much better heated, but our soil contains all its virgin strength. We have a stronger sun than they have in most parts of Europe, and among our men we have schooled workers from every country. And this is about the only sore point in our business: that we have not sufficient Americans who are as well versed in gardening.

Lack of American Gardeners.

If seven or eight men come together, one will say, "I have an excellent gardener, a Scotchman;" the second, "I have a good gardener, an Englishman;" the third, "a German;" the fourth has a wonder of a Bohemian, another has a Russian, one again will have a surprisingly smart gardener, a Frenchman or a Hollander. But it is rarely one will say, "I have an excellent gardener who is an American," and whose fault is it but our own?

The war is raging in Europe. However bad an effect it has on lines which depend on importation, and however dearly it costs Europe in human lives and wealth, it will be a wholesome experience for our country if we can manage to stay out of the general calamity. We are sending to Europe great sums for herbaceous plants, bulbs, azaleas, roses, bay trees, palms and many other varieties of plants. But our public, with its taste for refinement increasing more and more and with its steadily increasing demand for variety, can be well satisfied with the products of our own growers.

Many growers originally trained in the best gardens of Europe, after becoming American citizens and building up for themselves a large business in the States, did not make an effort to grow the necessary stock in America, but, on account of high labor, they brought it from abroad. Many varieties they did not attempt to grow in America because they did not have sufficiently trained help. This, however, will alter the moment the demand of the public requires of us goods which we cannot bring in and consequently will have to produce. Other goods which we cannot produce here on account of the climate, we will let our brother florists in the more southern countries grow for us.

Customers Will Stay at Home.

Our business, especially in the main cities like New York, Boston and Chicago, will not change on account of the war, because so many of our customers will stay at home who otherwise would have been traveling in Europe. Many people who otherwise went abroad, from south, and west, and north, will go to the eastern metropolis, New York, and the western metropolis, Chicago. And the same thing will happen with other large cities.

There may be a shortage on different stocks for planting, and all these things may be a little more expensive for the first year for those who do not want substitutes, but all these stocks we can grow ourselves, or find substitutes for them. Should the demand continue for the stock we import, then the growers in America will be forced to make the effort to grow it and many houses in Europe that had a ready market in our great country will find that they are not needed so badly.

There is not much chance that Holland will be entangled in the war and we have the benefit that the bulbs are offered to us this year from Holland people at low prices, as their customers in Europe are not able to take them this year. The only thing in bulbous plants that will be really high in price this season will be lily of the valley. But what bridegroom will try to save on the bridal bouquet when the bride wants lily of the valley? But for other occasions other pretty flowers can be substituted for lily of the valley, so if the demand is not too large the price may be kept at a reasonable level.

Alert Minds Will Win.

The interruption of our supplies from Europe will force us to train our minds to bring new things to the attention of the public. There are many who have fertile minds, but who most likely have been too comfortable, and their ability lay dormant. And right here I can say part of my success in working up business in my line has been possible because of the dormant minds of others.

There are many plants that are easy to grow and which are pretty for decorative purposes, but which have not been appreciated sufficiently by florists. On that account, or on account of their simple beauty, these plants were not offered to the public. A refined public would not fail to appreciate them. These plants now will take the place of the imported stock, which is sold at a high price but which does not give any better service than the home-grown stock.

Flowers Bright and Gay.

Our patrons who use plants and flowers to beautify the home will not stop doing this because the times are depressing. Just because of that the lady of the house will want to make her home pretty, so that when her husband comes home after a hard day of business he will find his home unchanged and cheerful. Some of our patrons may buy cheaper plants, but plants they will have. It is up to the florists to give them something good at a low cost if possible, and it must be a pretty poor man who cannot meet conditions with the right spirit and try to overcome difficulties with a cheerful mind. So, on the whole, if we do not get complicated with any of the warring countries, America will prosper as it has prospered before, and it will prove to us what we knew right along, that this rich country, where prosperity is throbbing in the very air, where energy and ambition are to be found everywhere, can be the whole world to itself.

Max Schling.

HATS IN TABLE DECORATION.

It was a New York retailer who, as related in The Review, conceived the idea of using ladies' Florentine straw hats as the basis for steamer baskets, but it remained for a western florist to adopt a similar idea for a table decoration. At the Iowa state fair, reported in last week's Review, the entry of the Iowa Seed Co., of Des Moines, in the luncheon table decoration class was of this character. The centerpiece consisted of a lady's Panama hat, of large size, lined with blue messaline and trimmed ready-to-wear with pink and blue chiffon. Inside the crown of the hat were arranged Cecile Brunner roses, lilies of the valley and maidenhair fern. The individual favors were small Panama hats trimmed to match the centerpiece. The place cards were small pasteboard hats, hand-painted to match the favors and centerpiece. The completed decoration, shown in the accompanying illustration, was novel in design and, as it was worked out, particularly effective in its execution. Of the dinner and luncheon table decorations shown at the fair, this was one of the most admired and merited the blue ribbon it received as the best of the latter class.

BUSINESS EMBARRASSMENTS.

New York, N. Y.—Theodore E. Hahn, of 2574 Broadway, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $2,466, and assets of $664, consisting of furniture and fixtures to the value of $600 and accounts amounting to $64.

Alvin, Tex.—Judge A. R. Hamblen, of the Eleventh District court, has appointed T. C. Ford master in chancery of the Alvin Japanese Nursery Co., which, as reported fully in last week's Review, recently made application for the appointment of a receiver.

A PRAYER FOR PEACE.

At the summer meeting of the National Association of Gardeners, held in Boston, August 19, 1914, a committee, consisting of W. N. Craig, Duncan Finlayson and M. C. Ebel, was appointed to draft resolutions conveying the sympathies of the members of the organization to the European horticulturists on the terrible calamity which has befallen them. The committee reports its resolution as follows:

Whereas, Our fellowmen engaged in the pursuit of horticulture in its various phases in the European countries are now surrounded by the horrors of a terrible war, many of whom may be suffering from sorrowing anguish for loss of kin on the battlefields.

Be It Resolved, that the members of the National Association of Gardeners convey to their brother horticulturists in Europe afflicted by the war, their heartfelt sympathies on the catastrophe which has so suddenly overtaken them; and that our prayer be that the Almighty God in His infinite wisdom will guide the instigators of the appalling conflict now raging to a speedy termination of it, and to everlasting peace.

Be It Further Resolved, that copies of these resolutions be forwarded to the various national horticultural bodies in the several countries now at war, and spread on the records of the N. A. G.

Fairfield, Ia.—E. H. Montgomery reports business about as usual. As cooler weather has come, he expects trade to increase shortly. The building of additional houses has been postponed to next year.

DUTCH BULBS

HOW TO HANDLE THEM.

Unpack at Once.

The Dutch bulbs have all come to hand quite a little earlier than usual this year. The thrifty Hollanders have made earlier shipments in order to catch steamers still running, and because to America they must naturally look for an outlet for their heavy crop owing to heavy cancellations by the countries at war. A heavy surplus seems a certainty, but if newspaper dispatches are correct, tulip flour added in the proportion of one part to three of rye or wheat is being used and is found toothsome. This is certainly vastly better than destroying the bulbs, as was in some cases advocated.

No time should be lost in unpacking and spreading out the bulbs. There were numerous complaints last season that narcissi and tulips did not flower. This would no doubt follow too hard forcing when insufficiently rooted and started, but was more probably caused by the bulbs being kept too near the boilers, becoming heated in transit. Some of the narcissi, such as Victoria, poeticus ornatus and Horsfieldii, are easily injured by heating and should be carefully examined after unpacking. Cut one or two of the bulbs across the center with a knife and if the embryo buds are fresh the bulbs are all right.

Good Demand a Possibility.

It is too early yet to plant bulbs outdoors, but for forcing purposes the sooner they are in the soil the better. We hear some pessimistic talk regarding a probable glut of bulbous flowers the coming season, which may not be well founded. Wealthy Americans will be at home and not abroad this winter. We may have to worry along without lily of the valley, and white bulbous flowers such as freesias, Roman hyacinths, etc., will have, in a large measure, to take its place, along with sweet peas. Then azaleas may be fewer than usual and for this reason there may be a better call for other blooming plants, Dutch bulbs included.

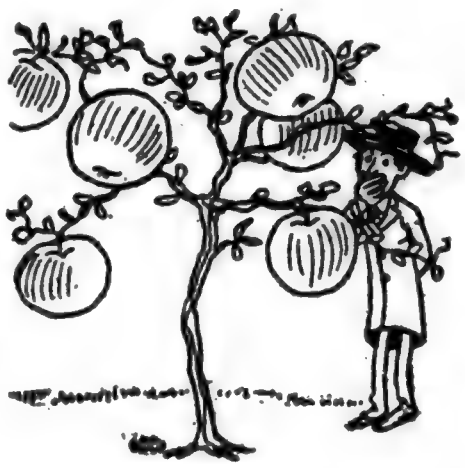
Storing in Flats.

As a general rule flats four to five inches deep answer well for about all bulbs; a convenient size is 12x24 inches. Where to stand the bulbs after planting is another question. If no special place is ready, stand them outdoors. Soak well with water; then give the flats a covering of sand. Over this lay two or three inches of coal ashes. If later on more ashes are added and then a thick bed of straw or leaves, the bulbs can be kept out all winter where the climate is not too severe. One would advise, however, storing in coldframes or cellars, where such places are available, as they are more readily got at during severe weather. If, however, the bulbs are needed quite late, say for Easter, a good plan is to make a dug-out for them on a southern slope. Bury well with soil as cold weather advances and later with a warm mulch. Nevertheless, one would always prefer a good cool cellar, as each year we are able to keep back hyacinths, tulips and narcissi as late as the middle of May in such a place, and there is no frozen earth to dig away when a batch is needed for forcing.

Hyacinths.

Hyacinths are not of great value commercially, compared with tulips and narcissi, but there always is a fair call for them. For cutting the miniature bulbs are inexpensive and to be recommended. White is the leading color; then pink and blue. For culture in pots, pans and glasses, named varieties are preferable, as they are sure to be the same shade of color. They cost a little more than the unnamed sorts sold for bedding and forcing, but are well worth the difference. Double hyacinths are of little value commercially. A few good, inexpensive singles are: Gertrude, Charles Dickens and Moreno, pink; L'Innocence, Baroness van Tuyll and Grandeur a Merveille, white; Queen of the Blues, Grand Lilas, light blue; Grand Maitre and King of the Blues, dark blue.

Early Tulips.



Tulips are of great value, both in pans and for cutting. By using a proper selection, flowers can be had from Christmas until Memorial day, which is a fairly long season. The little Duc van Thol, which is grown in such quantities for the European Christmas markets, is not much used here, but is worthy of increased culture. Forced in flats and later made up in pans with some small ferns among them, they make desirable Christmas plants.

Among the early tulips La Reine, pink early in the season and white later, is far the most popular. White Hawk, also called Albion, is a beautiful pure white sort which can be had as early as La Reine. It is more expensive, however, but makes a more fancy flower. A few other good forcing tulips are: Yellow Prince, golden yellow; Vermilion Brilliant, rich scarlet; Thomas Moore, apricot orange, fine for cutting, a popular shade; Mon Tresor, a splendid yellow for cutting or pans; Keizerskroon, red and yellow; Cottage Maid, white bordered pink.

A few tulips a little higher in price which are good for market are: Flamingo, pink and white; Prosperity, deep pink; Rose Hawk, white tinged pink; Prairie Queen, sulphur yellow; Queen of the Netherlands, delicate pink.

Only a few doubles are of value. The best are: Couronne d'Or, yellow, tinged orange; Murillo, deep pink, grand for cutting and pans; Tea Rose, also called Brimstone Beauty, beautiful saffron yellow; White Murillo, also called Schoonoord, pure white; Imperator rubrorum, bright scarlet.

ILLINOIS STATE FAIR.

Flower Show Makes New Record.

The Illinois State Fair, at Springfield, is on this week and the flower show is making a new record. It is larger, better staged and more interesting than ever before. A number of new exhibitors have appeared, for the advertising value of the show, in a retail way, has come to be widely appreciated. It has little trade advertising value, since the attendance of florists is limited practically to the exhibitors, but to the local florists it is the great chance of the year to get before the people. Also, a winning at the state fair has advertising value to retail florists in other towns than Springfield, which results in a larger number of entries.

John Bauscher, of Freeport, is judging the show this year. Other florists from outside Springfield whose presence was noted include:

Kuhl, George A., and assistants, Pekin, Ill.
Longren, A. F., Chicago.
Peterson, P. W., Joliet, Ill.
Hey, Albert T., wife and two sons, Maywood, Ill.
Reinberg, Peter, Chicago.
Gullett, C. E., Lincoln, Ill.
Poehlmann, August, Morton Grove, Ill.
Anderson, C. G., Morton Grove, Ill.
Anderson, A. K., Morton Grove, Ill.
Pantly, Wm., Wilmette, Ill.

The Roses.

There were as many as half a dozen entries in some of the rose classes, all local except for three exhibitors, Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago; Pyfer & Olsem, of Wilmette, and Gullett & Sons, Lincoln. The Poehlmann entries made a clean sweep, taking all the first prizes on the varieties shown. The principal other exhibitors were G. J. Dinkel, A. C. Brown and Hembreiker & Cole, all of Springfield.

The Carnations.

The J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., Joliet, a new exhibitor, made a fine showing in the carnation classes, taking seven first prizes on nine entries. Among them were the two big prizes, for the best 100 blooms and for four vases, fifty blooms each of four varieties. The principal other exhibitors were Poehlmann Bros. Co., and Gullett & Sons. The Chicago Carnation Co. did not set up its blooms, as they had suffered in transit.

Miscellaneous Cut Flowers.

In spite of the early date there was a good showing of mums, four entries in the class calling for fifty blooms. Pyfer & Olsem, Wilmette, were first.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. put up a beautiful display of cattleyas and oncidiums in the class for cut orchids and also took first for 100 sprays of valley, but the prize was not so much as the flowers were worth in the market.

Retailers' Work.

There are few metropolitan exhibitions that can make the showing of retail work that is seen at the Springfield fair. It is in this department that the exhibitors get the best publicity for home consumption. This year there were nine contestants, as many as eight of them entering in the classes for sprays. Nearly all the Springfield florists put up work and from outside there were Geo. A. Kuhl, of Pekin; Gullett & Sons, of Lincoln; A. T. Hey, of Maywood, and Pyfer & Olsem, of Wilmette. The local exhibitors included Hembreiker & Cole, A. C. Brown, G. J. Dinkel, G. M. Brinkerhoff and the Janssen Seed & Floral Co. Competition was keen and the awards fairly equally divided.

Miscellaneous Plants.

The show opened with the miscellaneous plant classes, staged September 21. Competition here was not quite so keen as usual, although Poehlmann Bros. Co. entered in these classes for the first time and captured premiums on each entry. The awards in these classes were as follows:

Collection of stove and greenhouse plants—George J. Dinkel, Springfield, Ill., first; George M. Brinkerhoff, Springfield, Ill., second; George A. Kuhl, Pekin, Ill., third; Janssen Seed & Floral Co., Springfield, Ill., fourth.

Twelve palms—George J. Dinkel, first; George M. Brinkerhoff, second; George A. Kuhl, third; Janssen Seed Co., fourth.

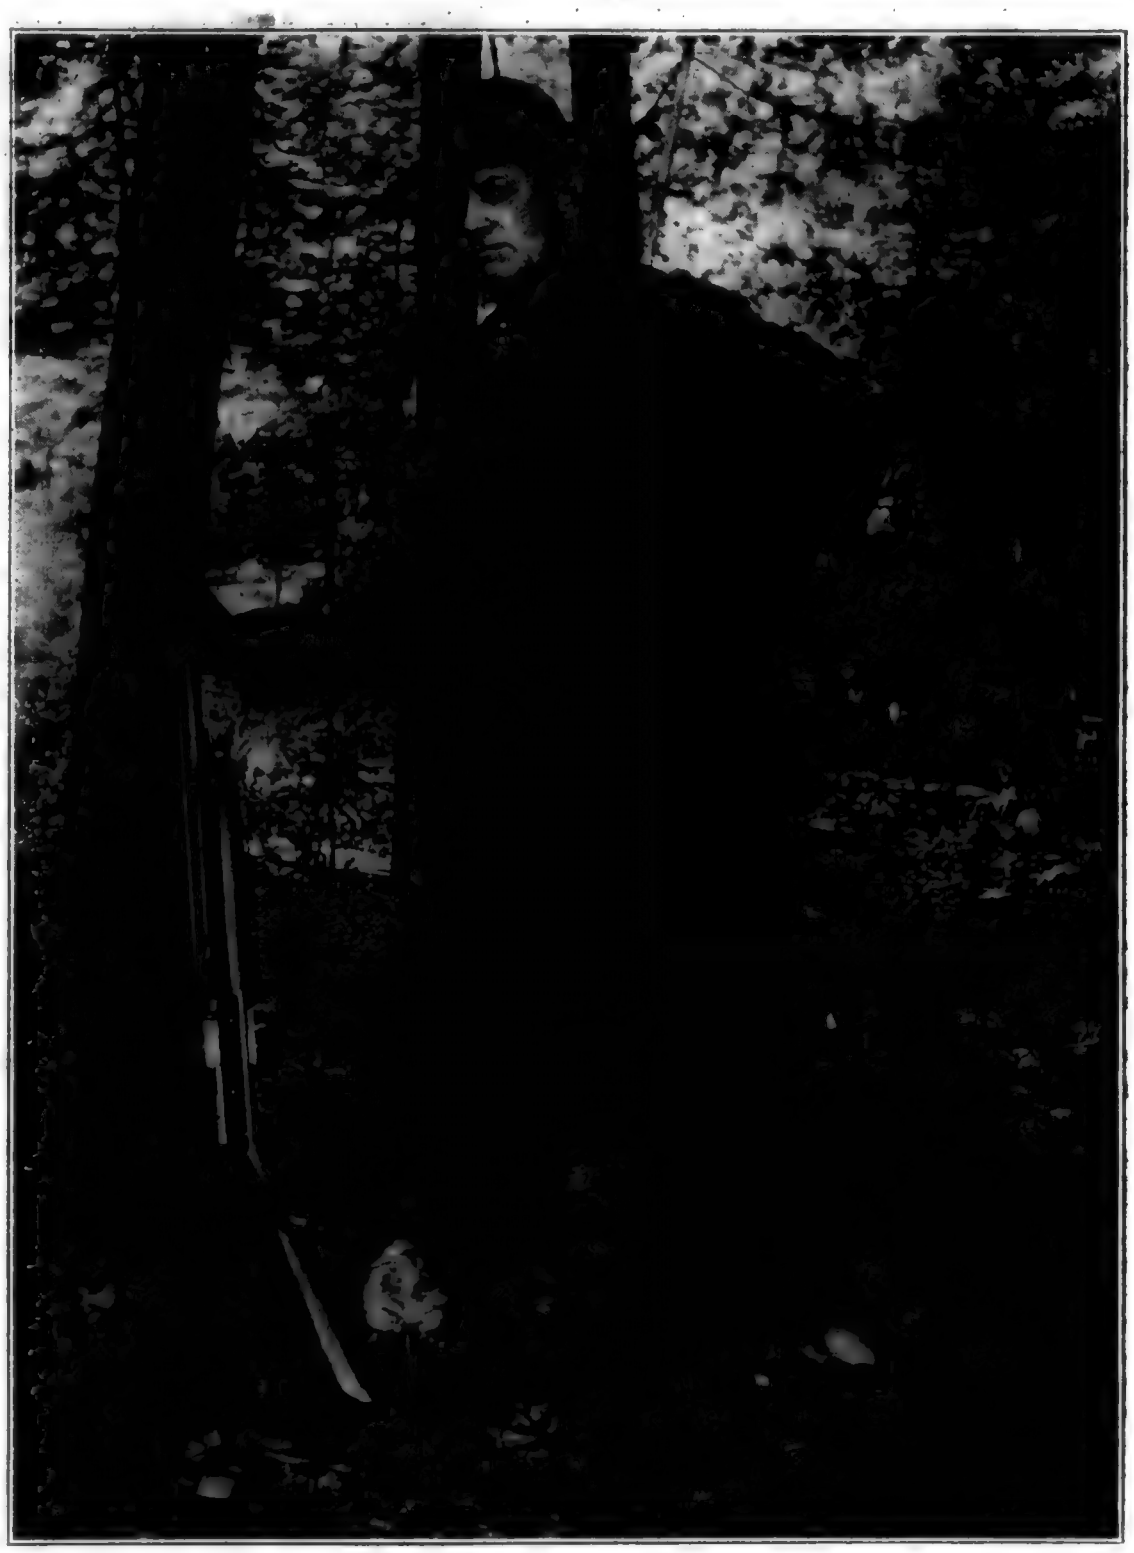
Six palms, three varieties—George J. Dinkel, first; Poehlmann Bros. Co., Morton Grove, Ill., second; George M. Brinkerhoff, third; George A. Kuhl, fourth.

Two palms, made up—A. C. Brown, Springfield, Ill., first; George M. Brinkerhoff, second; Poehlmann Bros. Co., third; George A. Kuhl, fourth.

Cycas revoluta—George M. Brinkerhoff, first; George A. Kuhl, second.

Four araucarias—Gullett & Sons, Lincoln, Ill., first; George A. Kuhl, second; Janssen Seed Co., third.

Twelve crotons, in variety—George A. Kuhl, first; George M. Brinkerhoff, second; Gullett & Sons, third.



Ornamental or foliage plant—George J. Dinkel, first; George A. Kuhl, second; George M. Brinkerhoff, third.

Twelve begonias, flowering—George M. Brinkerhoff, first; George J. Dinkel, second; A. C. Brown, third.

Cyclamens, ten plants—Poehlmann Bros. Co., first; Gullett & Sons, second; Hembreiker & Cole, Springfield, Ill., third.

Two orange trees, in fruit—Poehlmann Bros. Co., first; Janssen Seed Co., second; George M. Brinkerhoff, third.

THE MEN YOU MEET

WILLIAM MURPHY.

PERHAPS it IS hay fever that sends William Sureshot Murphy to Les Cheneaux islands every year—and then again perhaps it isn't. Perhaps it's only his love of the out-of-doors, the open air, the rod and gun. Mr. Murphy's friends will recognize the illustration as characteristic, as the Cincinnati wholesale florist is widely known as a woodsman. He is at Les Cheneaux this month as usual, dodging the sneezes and storing up energy for the busy season, for Murphy pursues the elusive dollar as indefatigably ten months in the year as he does his hobby the other two. He works hard and plays hard, but he is the best natured, kindest hearted and most tolerant of men.

Twelve ferns—Gullett & Sons, first; George M. Brinkerhoff, second; George A. Kuhl, third.

Six ferns—Hembreiker & Cole, first; Gullett & Sons, second; George M. Brinkerhoff, third.

Four adiantums—George A. Kuhl, first; Gullett & Sons, second; George M. Brinkerhoff, third.

Four Nephrolepis Bostoniensis—Hembreiker & Cole, first; Gullett & Sons, second; George M. Brinkerhoff, third.

Four Nephrolepis Piersoni—Hembreiker & Cole, first; Gullett & Sons, second; George M. Brinkerhoff, third.

Four Nephrolepis Whitmani—Gullett & Sons, first; George M. Brinkerhoff, second; George A. Kuhl, third.

Four Nephrolepis Scottii—Hembreiker & Cole, first; Gullett & Sons, second; George A. Kuhl, third.

Specimen Nephrolepis Bostoniensis—Gullett & Sons, first; Hembreiker & Cole, second; Poehlmann Bros. Co., third.

Specimen Nephrolepis Piersoni—Hembreiker & Cole, first; Gullett & Sons, second; Poehlmann Bros. Co., third.

Specimen Nephrolepis Whitmani—George M. Brinkerhoff, first; Gullett & Sons, second; Hembreiker & Cole, third.

Specimen Nephrolepis Scottii—Hembreiker & Cole, first; Gullett & Sons, second; George M. Brinkerhoff, third.

Cibotium Schiedei—Gullett & Sons, first; George M. Brinkerhoff, second; Janssen Seed Co., third.

Four dracænas, four varieties—George M. Brinkerhoff, first; Janssen Seed Co., second; George A. Kuhl, third.

Four Pandanus Veitchii—Poehlmann Bros. Co., first; George M. Brinkerhoff, second; George A. Kuhl, third.

Twelve Baby ramblers, in bloom—Hembreiker & Cole, first; Gullett & Sons, second; George M. Brinkerhoff, third.

DUTCH BULBS

HOW TO HANDLE THEM.

Unpack at Once.

The Dutch bulbs have all come to hand quite a little earlier than usual this year. The thrifty Hollanders have made earlier shipments in order to catch steamers still running, and because to America they must naturally look for an outlet for their heavy crop owing to heavy cancellations by the countries at war. A heavy surplus seems a certainty, but if newspaper dispatches are correct, tulip flour added in the proportion of one part to three of rye or wheat is being used and is found toothsome. This is certainly vastly better than destroying the bulbs, as was in some cases advocated.

No time should be lost in unpacking and spreading out the bulbs. There were numerous complaints last season that narcissi and tulips did not flower. This would no doubt follow too hard forcing when insufficiently rooted and started, but was more probably caused by the bulbs being kept too near the boilers, becoming heated in transit. Some of the narcissi, such as Victoria, poeticus ornatus and Horsfieldii, are easily injured by heating and should be carefully examined after unpacking. Cut one or two of the bulbs across the center with a knife and if the embryo buds are fresh the bulbs are all right.

Good Demand a Possibility.

It is too early yet to plant bulbs out doors, but for forcing purposes the sooner they are in the soil the better. We hear some pessimistic talk regarding a probable glut of bulbous flowers the coming season, which may not be well founded. Wealthy Americans will be at home and not abroad this winter. We may have to worry along without lily of the valley, and white bulbous flowers such as freesias, Roman hyacinths, etc., will have, in a large measure, to take its place, along with sweet peas. Then azaleas may be fewer than usual and for this reason there may be a better call for other blooming plants, Dutch bulbs included.

Storing in Flats.

As a general rule flats four to five inches deep answer well for about all bulbs; a convenient size is 12x24 inches. Where to stand the bulbs after planting is another question. If no special place is ready, stand them outdoors. Soak well with water; then give the flats a covering of sand. Over this lay two or three inches of coal ashes. If later on more ashes are added and then a thick bed of straw or leaves, the bulbs can be kept out all winter where the climate is not too severe. One would advise, however, storing in coldframes or cellars, where such places are available, as they are more readily got at during severe weather. If, however, the bulbs are needed quite late, say for Easter, a good plan is to make a dug-out for them on a southern slope. Bury well with soil as cold weather advances and later with a warm mulch. Nevertheless, one would always prefer a good cool cellar, as each year we are able to keep back hyacinths, tulips and narcissi as late as the middle of May in such a place, and there is no frozen earth to dig away when a batch is needed for forcing.

Hyacinths.

Hyacinths are not of great value commercially, compared with tulips and narcissi, but there always is a fair call for them. For cutting the miniature bulbs are inexpensive and to be recommended. White is the leading color; then pink and blue. For culture in pots, pans and glasses, named varieties are preferable, as they are sure to be the same shade of color. They cost a little more than the unnamed sorts sold for bedding and forcing, but are well worth the difference. Double hyacinths are of little value commercially. A few good, inexpensive singles are: Gertrude, Charles Dickens and Moreno, pink; L'Innocence, Baroness van Tuyll and Grandeur a Merveille, white; Queen of the Blues, Grand Lilas, light blue; Grand Maitre and King of the Blues, dark blue.

Early Tulips.

Tulips are of great value, both in pans and for cutting. By using a proper selection, flowers can be had from Christmas until Memorial day, which is a fairly long season. The little Due van Thol, which is grown in such quantities for the European Christmas markets, is not much used here, but is worthy of increased culture. Forced in flats and later made up in pans with some smilax ferns among them, they make desirable Christmas plants.

Among the early tulips La Reine, pink early in the season and white later, is far the most popular. White Hawk, also called Albion, is a beautiful pure white sort which can be had as early as La Reine. It is more expensive, however, but makes a more fancy flower. A few other good forcing tulips are: Yellow Prince, golden yellow; Vermilion Brilliant, rich scarlet; Thomas Moore, apricot orange, fine for cutting, a popular shade; Mon Tresor, a splendid yellow for cutting or pans; Keizerskroon, red and yellow; Cottage Maid, white bordered pink.

A few tulips a little higher in price which are good for market are: Flamingo, pink and white; Prosperity, deep pink; Rose Hawk, white tinged pink; Prairie Queen, sulphur yellow; Queen of the Netherlands, delicate pink.

Only a few doubles are of value. The best are: Couronne d'Or, yellow, tinged orange; Murillo, deep pink, grand for cutting and pans; Tea Rose, also called Brimstone Beauty, beautiful saffron yellow; White Murillo, also called Schoonoord, pure white; Imperator rubrorum, bright scarlet.

RUSCUS IS HERE.

The dealers who rely on imported dyed ruscus for the Christmas business still are in doubt as to whether or not they will receive their stock, although it looks more and more as though some of it is sure to get through by way of Rotterdam or Copenhagen. The dyed stock comes from Germany. The ruscus that is imported in the bleached state and dyed here is mostly in the hands of the dyers. It comes from Italy and shipment was hastened rather than delayed by the war. With the dyers, however, there is the further question of the proper dyes. These come from Germany and are in short supply. It makes all the difference in the world what dye is used. Every user of ruscus knows that some of it is a much better color than other lots, and worth more money. Without the right dye good ruscus is an impossibility.

Red ruscus had an enormous sale last Christmas. It resulted in preparations for a big season in 1914, some houses importing as much as twenty tons for dyeing.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY.

President Wm. Kleinheinz announces the committees to examine new chrysanthemums for the ensuing year as follows:

Chicago—N. J. Wietor, chairman; Geo. Asmus, Guy French. Ship flowers to chairman, 30 East Randolph street, Chicago, Ill.

Cincinnati—R. Witterstaetter, chairman; Jas. Allen, Henry Schwarz. Ship flowers to chairman, Jabex Elliott Flower Market, care janitor.

Boston—Wm. Nicholson, chairman; James Wheeler, Alex. Montgomery. Ship flowers to Boston Flower Exchange, C Park street, care of chairman.

New York—Eugene Dailledouze, chairman; Wm. H. Duckham, A. Herrington. Ship flowers to New York Cut Flower Co., 55 West Twenty-second street, care of chairman.

Philadelphia—A. B. Cartledge, chairman; John Westcott, S. S. Pennock. Ship flowers to A. B. Cartledge, 1514 Chestnut street, Philadelphia.

Shipments should be made to arrive by 2 p. m. on examination days, to receive attention from the committee. Shipments must be prepaid to destination and an entry fee of $2 should be forwarded to the secretary not later than Tuesday of the week they are to be examined, or it may accompany the blooms.

Seedlings and sports are both eligible to be shown before these committees, provided the raiser has given them two years' trial to determine their true character. Special attention is called to the rule that sports, to receive a certificate, must pass at least three of the five committees.

The committees will be in session to examine such exhibits as may be submitted on each Saturday during October and November, the dates of which will be October 3, 10, 17, 24 and 31, November 7, 14, 21 and 28.

Chas. W. Johnson, Sec'y.

OPEN LETTERS from READERS

THE HAMBURG VERSION.

The following letter was dated at Hamburg, Germany, August 28:

We just received your paper for gardeners, the Florists' Review, where you say Hamburg will be effectually sealed by the English fleet, and where you talk about an English blockade on Hamburg. We are bound to believe that these remarks are the result of false reports from England and France to America and we therefore have the pleasure of enclosing a German morning paper where you can see the present actual standing of all forces. Our navy has a lot of times tried to challenge the English fleet, but the English in all cases preferred to retire to their own mainland much better than to fight with us! They are too afraid of our strong navy and of our large fleet of Zeppelins! Russia is just about asleep in the middle of this war. They are supplying their soldiers f.i. with cans that should contain vegetables and which really contain sand!!! Some of the French soldiers fight with patent leather shoes and cardboard cases for cartridges tied to their belts with string!! We hope over here to show our American friends only too soon what it means to attack Germany in the manner pointed out in the German White-Book, which we sent you under separate cover!

We hope to be able to send out some of our orders for lilies of the valley some other way as over Hamburg and hope you will be kind enough to tell this to the American trade through your paper. Aug. Hohmann & Söhne.

BULB GROWING AT PUGET SOUND.

The soil and climatic conditions of the Puget Sound country, especially the tide lands in the neighborhood of this city, Tacoma, are peculiarly fitted for the successful growing of bulbs and such other things as Holland has grown for us.

It would be quite timely if a ship load of Hollanders could be landed at Puget Sound and set at work growing bulbs and plants for the American markets, especially for the Pacific coast, where the great new development of the near future will require immense quantities of Holland bulbs and shrubs.

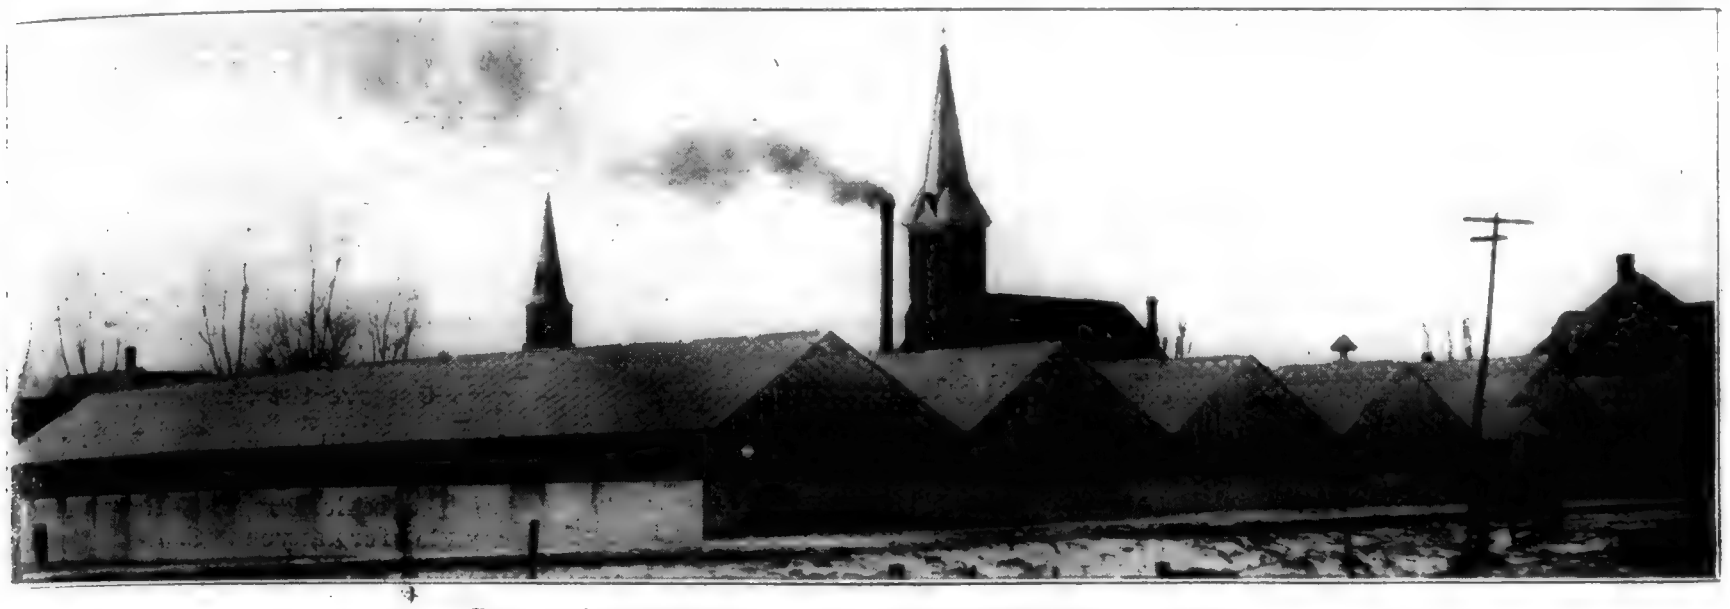
I have demonstrated on my own grounds that Holland bulbs will thrive and multiply amazingly and without expensive irrigation. Not a drop of water was used on my bulbs this year, the driest in the weather records of this place. I know nothing of bulb growing, other than to put them in the ground and watch them increase.

George Lawler

BULB GROWING IN WASHINGTON.

During the fall of 1913, having a few surplus bulbs, of narcissi, tulips and hyacinths, I offered to the schools of Whatcom county, Washington, to donate about four or five pounds of bulbs if they would fence and prepare a square rod of land and care for them under the direction of Miss Delia Keeler, county superintendent of schools, and myself. Twenty-three schools responded, having enrolled over 1,500 children. I am now preparing an application to the Bureau of Plant Industry, Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., for a few hundred bedding and forcing single tulips for this fall, so the children can offer samples of Whatcom county grown bulbs to the American trade as soon as possible. These bulbs all bloom two to three weeks earlier than Dutch bulbs planted the same day on the same land, indoors or outside. We want the florists' world to know we have the greatest bulb climate in America or Europe. It is right now one great opportunity to grow them. Geo. Gibbs.

MILWAUKEE.



The Market.

Business in general has not improved, though fine, sunshiny weather has prevailed nearly all the week. The bright, warm weather brought in lots of stock, but, while the cut moved well, the prices showed a downward trend. Asters, from being scarce, have glutted the market to a great extent. New carnations have improved wonderfully under the favorable weather and are coming in a little more heavily. The rose supply is increasing and the quality is better than ever. The Milwaukee market has not seen such excellent roses for some time. Some extra fine Russells and Prima Donna are in the market and are bringing good prices. Gladioli are plentiful, but the quality of the stock demonstrates clearly that the crop is on the wane and will soon be out of the market. The supply of chrysanthemums is about equal to the demand and the quality of the stock is better than usual for this time of year.

Lilies are still plentiful and are moving fairly well. It is understood that valley is not scarce in Milwaukee, at one place at least, but the general disposition seems to be to hold the supply down somewhat. There seems to be more than a possibility that some imports may come in and the situation may not be nearly so bad as it was originally supposed to be.

The State Fair.

There was a horticultural display at the Wisconsin state fair September 14 to 18, which outdid all previous years. While the exhibit was beautiful, it should have been much larger, but the florists, with a few exceptions, did not take the interest necessary to make the display the size it should be. It is to be hoped that next year the stay-at-homes will turn out as they should, for the benefit of the profession. Following is a list of the winners among the trade exhibitors:

Range of the New Haven Floral Co., at New Haven, Ind.

Collection of greenhouse plants, not less than twenty-five varieties, to cover not less than fifty square feet—C. C. Pollworth Co., first; Holton & Hunkel Co., second; A. Klokner, third.

Display of palms, covering fifty square feet—C. C. Pollworth Co., first; Holton & Hunkel Co., second; A. Klokner, third.

Display of ferns, covering fifty square feet—Holton & Hunkel Co., first; C. C. Pollworth Co., second; A. Klokner, third.

Display of foliage plants, covering fifty square feet—Holton & Hunkel Co., first; C. C. Pollworth Co., second; A. Klokner, third.

Specimen nephrolepis, any variety—A. Klokner, first; Holton & Hunkel Co., second; C. C. Pollworth Co., third.

Specimen palm, any variety—Holton & Hunkel Co., first; C. C. Pollworth Co., second.

Fifty roses, any variety—Holton & Hunkel Co., first; C. C. Pollworth Co., second.

Fifty lily of the valley—C. C. Pollworth Co., first; Holton & Hunkel Co., second.

Fifty lily blooms—Holton & Hunkel Co., first; C. C. Pollworth Co., second.

Various Notes.

J. J. Karins, representing Henry A. Dreer, Inc., visited the local trade last week.

Among the visitors who attended the state fair, and visited the trade at the same time, were: Lewis Otto, of Neenah, Wis.; H. L. Clapp, of Ripon, Wis., and J. Rindfleisch, of Beloit, Wis.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

Trade conditions improved considerably last week. Society people have returned from their summer homes, the seashore and mountains, and social functions are beginning for the season. Several weddings have already taken place. Two funerals of note helped to swell the volume of business, and the openings of several large department stores added their quota to the week's business. Weather conditions have been ideal. Stock of all kinds is good. Asters are abundant and the quality is excellent. Gladioli still are used a great deal for funeral work and for decorations of all kinds. There are still some fine America, King and Augusta on the market and the price remains firm. A large quantity of culls are now coming in and sell at a low figure. There are few carnations just now and these are quite small. Weddings and funerals have made a big demand for cattleyas; the supply of these is small. Valley is excellent in quality and has risen in price. A few good chrysanthemums are being shipped in, principally yellow and white. All kinds of roses are in fine condition, and especially Sunburst, Ward, Taft and Pink Silene. Smilax, Asparagus Sprengeri and plumosus, and maidenhair and hardy ferns all are abundant. All florists are beginning to use beech and oak foliage in red, brown and bronze for decorative work. It is most effective in combination with chrysanthemums, gladioli, dahlias, tritomas and calendulas.

Delaware Park Gardens.

The gardens surrounding the Delaware park conservatories are gorgeous with fall flowers. Beautiful beds of Begonia Vernon in full bloom are charming. There are a few beds of celosias, or cockscomb, of exquisite color. Another interesting bed is a round one of tuberous-rooted begonias with immense blooms of assorted colors. In the hardy border, phloxes, salvias, snapdragons, marigolds, calendulas, cornflowers, scabiosas and helianthus run together in a riot of color. Since there has been no damaging frost, the beds of geraniums are perfect. The rose garden has a number of fine plants still in bloom. Near-by are splendid specimens of Clematis paniculata, which are a mass of blooms. In the conservatories cuttings of coleus are being rooted for next year's plants, and everything from the cyclamens to the palms and ferns is in fine condition. The chrysanthemum plants are coming on well and there are enormous specimen plants in pink and white, which will come into bloom in October.

Various Notes.

The American Carnation Society will hold its next meeting in Buffalo the latter part of January at Hotel Iroquois. There will be an exhibition of carnations and also an interesting program for all who attend.

The Lenox Flower Shop did the decorating for the Hews & Kelly department store. Boston ferns were the main feature and gladioli were also used.

It has been the talk of the assembly at Kasting's commission house that Harry Aust, formerly with S. A. Anderson, will open a store of his own on East Genesee street in the near future.

Joseph Speidel, of Palmer's lower store, has just returned from his vacation. The force at this store has been kept busy with the Goodyear and Thompson funerals and various weddings, besides regular trade.

Things are somewhat quiet at Stroh's Quality Shop, it is reported, but they expect trade to pick up soon. Ed. Stroh is at the greenhouses in Attica.

S. A. Anderson had several large funerals last week, among them the Wattles funeral, for which he made a casket cover of pink roses, cattleyas and maidenhair ferns.

Jacob B. Wiese is growing some excellent calendulas of a deep orange color, which are finding great favor with the flower-buying public.

Among recent visitors was Milton Selinka. He reports that trade in ribbons is good with him.

Word has been received that Harold Taylor has left Kansas City and is now in Denver for a short stay.

Miss Jean Lindsay is spending her vacation in Fergus, Ont. She will be away two weeks.

Frank Mahoney was on the sick list last week.

PITTSBURGH.

The six-story building at 125-31 Sandusky street was destroyed by fire in the early hours of September 16. Next door, at No. 121, the building, part of which is occupied by the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., escaped destruction, but all the tenants suffered more or less damage by smoke and water, the wholesale florists putting their loss at $3,000. On the other side, at No. 137, is the building in which the McCallum Co., wholesale cut flower and supply dealers, does business. This concern escaped with a loss of $1,000 by water and smoke.

"IN A GOOD NEIGHBORHOOD."

"As you may see by the background, we are in a good neighborhood," says Herman J. C. Leitz, vice-president and general manager of the New Haven Floral Co., at New Haven, Ind., in sending the photograph of the range of his concern, which is reproduced herewith. And while the proximity of two church steeples may be held to indicate the high moral status of the place, the excellent appearance of the range of Dietsch houses in the foreground may serve to show the goodness of the location from a business standpoint. The latter is indeed the case, for the New Haven Floral Co. has been quite successful since its incorporation about two and one-half years ago. Carnations are the principal crop, but chrysanthemums, bedding plants and greens are also grown for the wholesale and retail trade. Herman J. C. Leitz, who was formerly secretary and treasurer of the company, has held the positions of vice-president and general manager since the sale, last winter, of Henry F. Hermann's interest to August Freese, now the president of the concern. Henry F. Freese is secretary and treasurer.

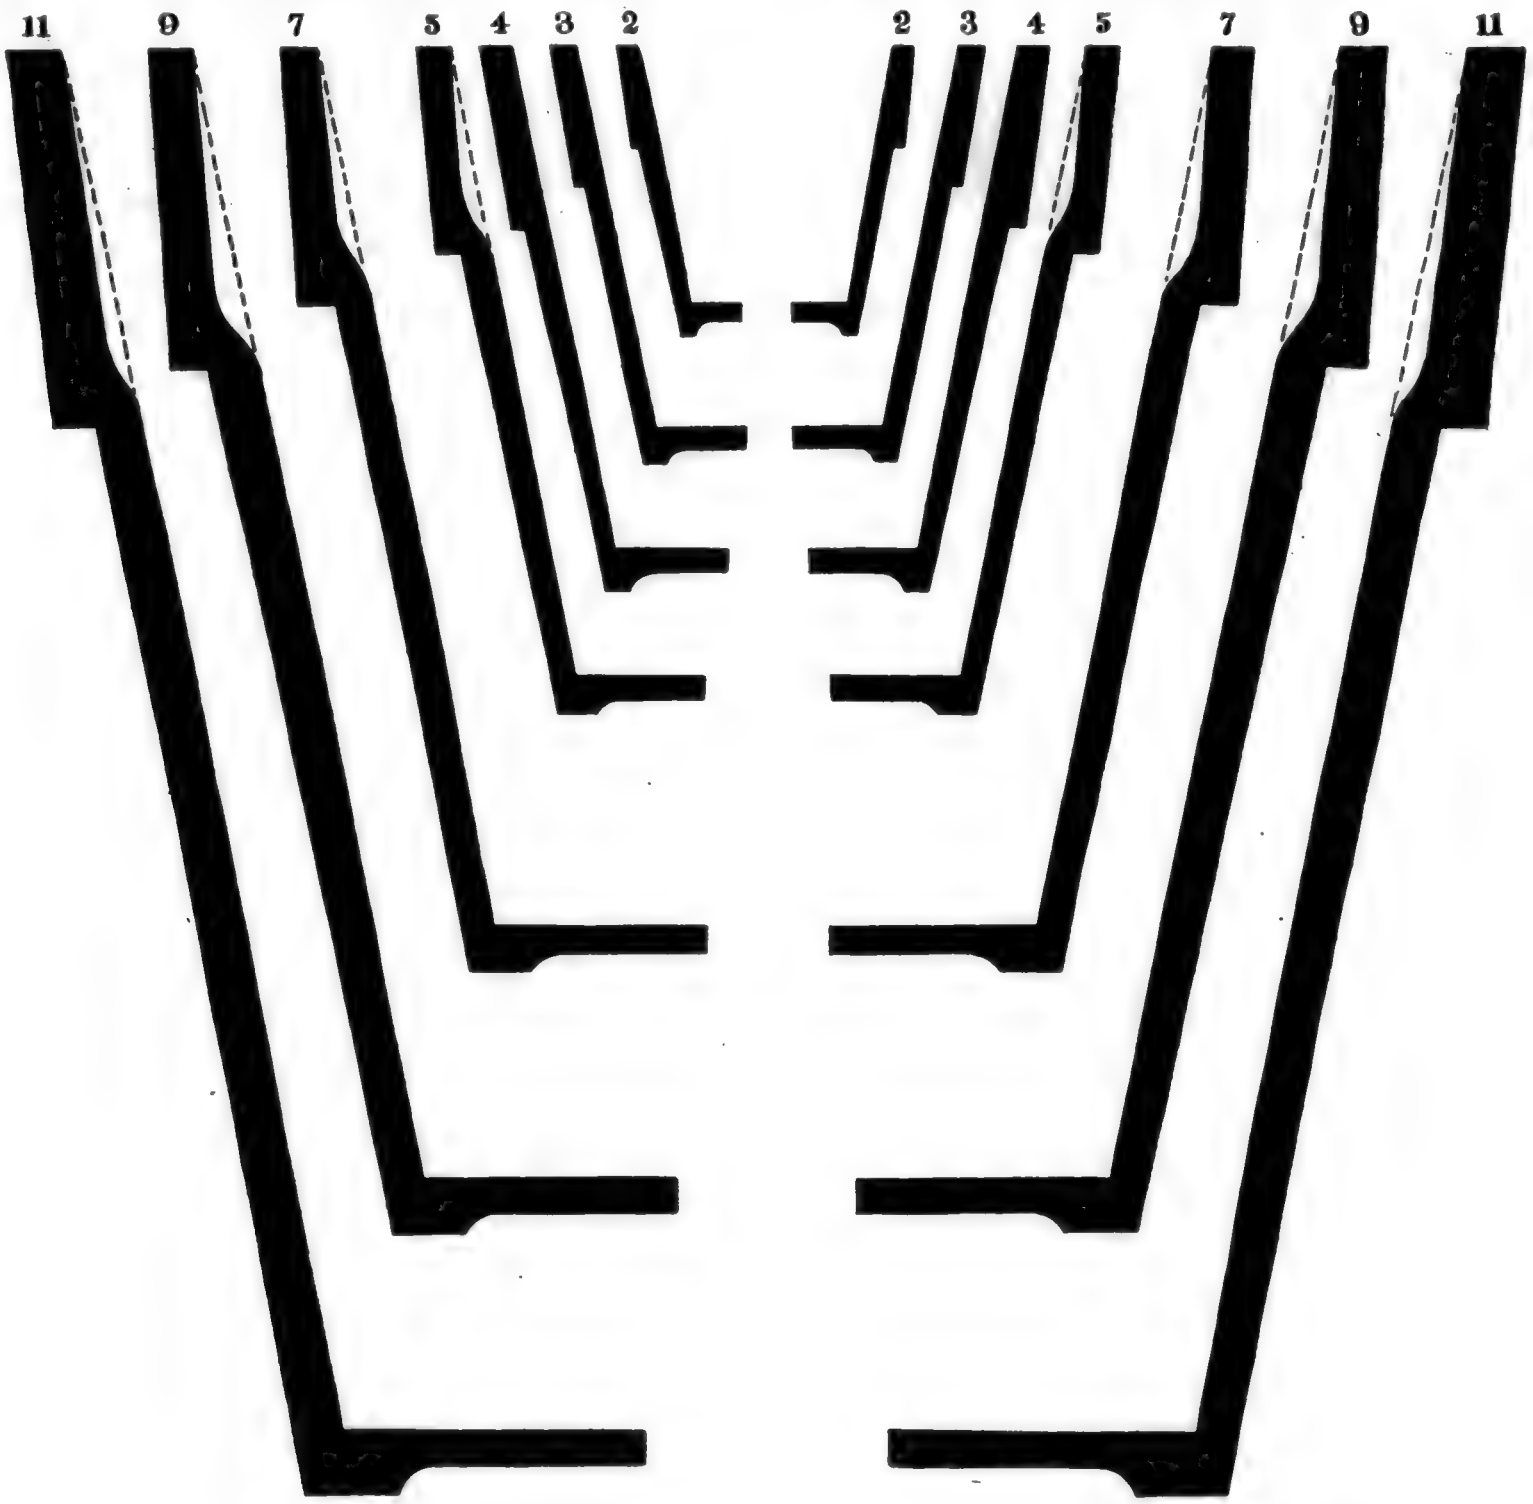
THE STANDARD FLOWER POTS

THE standard pots are all right — nobody wants a change. What is wanted is that all potters stick to the standard, so that pots from all sources will be the same size.

The subject of the standard pot, or rather, of variations from the standard, having been brought to the attention of the S. A. F., it proved difficult to determine exactly what the standard is.

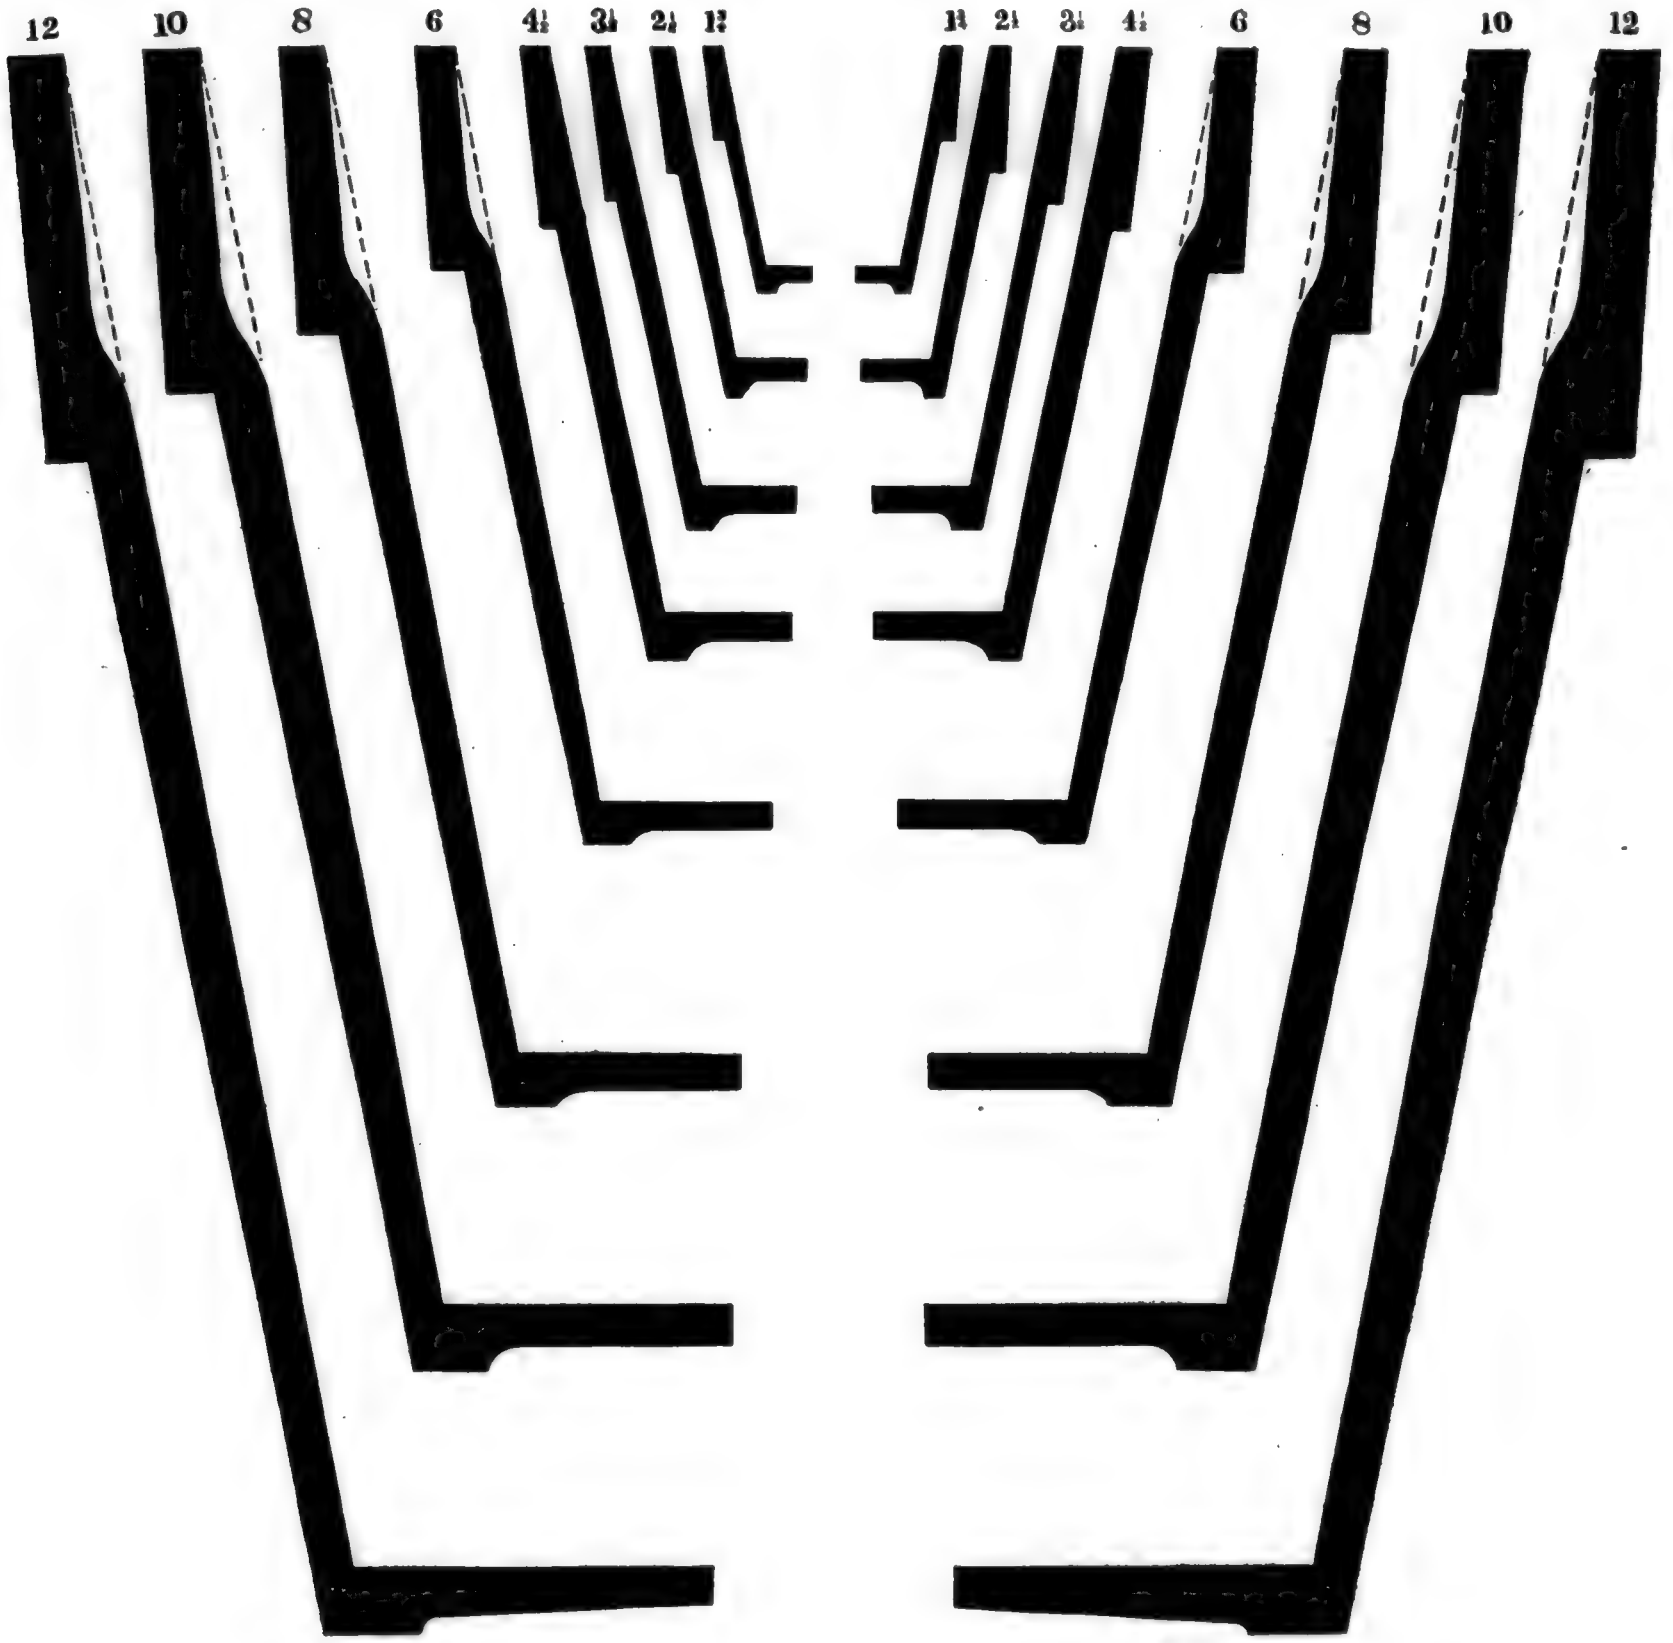
The Lost Standard.

The S. A. F. adopted a standard in 1890, but because of some oversight neither drawings nor scales were incorporated in the records of the society, so that there was no official guide. When the committee, headed by Thomas Roland, began the investigation of the subject in 1914, twenty-four years after the original standard was adopted, they found no demand whatever for a change in the standard, but an insistent demand that potters adhere to that standard—the quarter-century-old standard that is so satisfactory nobody can suggest any change that would be worth while. But the society had no record of the standard. It took search to find anyone able to say just what the standard is.



Now on Record.

The drawings reproduced herewith are the standard reduced exactly one-half in every dimension. It is a copy of the original 1890 drawings prepared by a committee headed by Robert Craig, this copy having been supplied to Mr. Roland's 1914 committee by A. H. Hews & Co., who had preserved their original for twenty-four years. Mr. Roland presented these drawings, here reproduced exactly one-half size, with his report of the facts at the Boston convention and the drawings now are a part of the official records of the society. They are reproduced in The Review, reduced exactly one-half in every dimension, for the purpose of making the standard measurements available to the whole trade.



Said Mr. Roland: "Your committee recommends that this standard now presented as a copy of the original adopted in 1890 be adopted by the various manufacturers of pots, vases and jardinieres."

Observe the Standard.

The trade will serve the general interest by insisting that all potters follow the scale. It should be made impossible for anyone to sell flower pots, vases, jardinieres or other articles of like nature unless they conform to the society's scale. The lack of readily accessible copies of the standard has led to probably unintentional variations from the standard. No doubt these will cease now that The Review has placed the scales, reduced exactly one-half in every dimension, in the hands of manufacturers and consumers alike. If in the future pots and jardinieres are not "standard" it will be because the maker does not appreciate the importance of the point and it will rest with the trade to reject all non-standard goods.

These drawings are exactly one-half the standard size in every dimension

Sectional view of "Standard" Flower pot sizes as approved by the executive committee of the Society of American Florists at Boston, January 15, 1890.

These drawings are exact (½) sizes in every dimension for the "Standard" Flower Pots, seventeen in number, from 1¾-inch to 12-inch inclusive, and are as adopted by the Society of American Florists, August 22, 1889, and approved by the executive committee January 15, 1890.

These drawings have been made especially for the committee for the use of different potters, that uniformity of size may be universally adopted.

The lines forming the top of the pot, lower section of rim and inside bottom have been left sharp angles, that exact measurements may be more easily obtained. The slight rounding of these angles will not conflict with the "Standard" shape.

On 5-inch pots and upwards two lines are given. The committee would prefer that the solid line should be the inside dimension, but either that or the dotted line will be considered "Standard."

For the Committee. 1890. Rob't Craig, Chairman.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Optimism seemed to prevail in the wholesale cut flower market at the close of last week, thanks to the ideal weather, the lessening of shipments and the awakening of life among the retailers. Prices generally have been steady, with an upward tendency for the best grades, especially of roses. American Beauties advanced to $20 per hundred for the selects on Saturday afternoon. Sunburst and Ophelia seem to grow weekly in popularity and quality. Double White Kilarney is a general favorite. Roses appeal to the public this season in wonderful variety. There are over twenty-five kinds to select from in the daily market.

The best carnations arriving do not yet sell above $1.50 per hundred. The supply of these is limited, and, in fact, of all kinds. There seem to be only the standard varieties this season. Novelties in carnations will be few. Cosmos and celosias are here, and already a great abundance of low-grade dahlias, for which there is no demand at all.

The late shipments of gladioli are larger than expected and good stock had advanced to $1.50 per hundred as the week ended. The closing days of the aster distribution show still a great abundance of all grades, with only the new and selected stock selling at profitable prices for the grower. Both asters and gladioli will last as a feature in the market until October.

The mums are coming. For several weeks we have had Golden Glow. Now Smith's early white is here. Some fancy prices were realized for the best Golden Glow on Saturday. Valley is firm at last week's quotation, and longiflorums are on the move to a higher plane at last. Some of the wholesale houses were asking $6 per hundred last Saturday. An unexpected flood of orchids arrived Saturday. Prices fell rapidly. Even the best cattleyas fell to $35 per hundred. Oncidiums remained unsold, though quoted everywhere at 50 cents per hundred.

Various Notes.

The Country Life Permanent Exposition continues in the Grand Central Terminal. Moon and Marshall & Co. continue their exhibits. W. H. Lutton has a model greenhouse there.

J. K. Allen visited last week the nurseries and greenhouse establishment of Thos. W. Head, of Bergenfield, N. J.

Considerable space has been added to the store of Gunther Bros., the offices enlarged, and the whole place redecorated. Mr. Gunther predicts smaller shipments of dahlias this year than usual.

With this week begin the Jewish holidays. The market is expected to make a generous response, as usual.

Frank H. Traendly and family returned Monday, September 14, from their summer home at Rowayton, Conn.

Improvements in the store of the Walter Siebrecht Co. are completed and the office room greatly enlarged.

John Wilson, of Short Hills, N. J., is now at Jupiter, Fla., in charge of the Jupiter fern farms. The entire output of the fifty-two acres is handled by the Growers' Cut Flower Co.

Louis Hanfling, representing Russin & Hanfling, has returned from a successful trip through New England and reports general prosperity there.

Herman B. Rosens, owing to the rapid increase of his business, has been compelled to remove his headquarters to 112 West Twenty-eighth street. His display of original creations and French copies of fine flower novelties is large and unique.

According to Ralph M. Ward & Co., azalea shipments from Belgium are coming forward regularly now and no trouble is anticipated. The freight rates have advanced, and also insurance rates. French bulb shipments are still coming; the Patria arrived September 17, and the Sant' Anna is due September 26. These steamers are calling at several ports in the Azores, taking a longer time than usual in reaching New York.

Abraham Rosen is now with Clarence Slinn, the violet specialist, at 112 West Twenty-eighth street.

Samuel Woodrow, of Woodrow & Marketos, visited Boston last week, completing a contract for some extensive landscape work. A fine assortment of plants and palms are already installed in their big store, including some immense kentias from private estates.

It is rumored that C. C. Trepel will open three more retail stores in Manhattan in October. Manuel M. Voit, formerly manager at Gimbel Bros.' for Mr. Trepel, is now financial secretary of his New York enterprises.

Singapore rugs grace the floor of G. E. M. Stumpp's beautiful store, at Fifty-eighth street and Fifth avenue. Many novelties in Austrian and English ware are on exhibition and the window decorations are always original and attractive. George Stumpp is still in Germany.

The auctions of bulbs, plants, etc., on Vesey street, are already attracting "crowded houses." A sale of orchid plants by the MacNiff Horticultural Co. drew the experts, Messrs. Roehrs, Manda and Lager, into competition.

Max Schling is building a greenhouse, 14x60, at his home grounds in Bronxville. It will be completed by November 1 and is being constructed by Mr. Schling for the creation of new varieties and the illustration of new methods of culture.

C. H. Totty is sending blooms of the rose, Mme. Edouard Herrott, to Henshaw & Fenrich. J. Austin Shaw.

DRANK TO-BAK-INE AND DIED.

Those in the trade generally understand the deadly nature of all the nicotine extracts used as insecticides, but every now and then someone not acquainted with the trade meets an accidental death through attempting to swallow nicotine, mistaking it for something else.

The latest sudden death from this cause is reported from St. Paul, where a baker named Joseph Horejs, visiting his friend, Carl Nedved, 900 Palmer street, undertook to sample a bottle of liquid found standing in the boiler-shed.

It was To-bak-ine liquid, sure death to human beings as well as to insects. The bottle was properly labeled "Poison," but the visitor did not stop to look at the label. His death was almost instantaneous. The coroner's jury rendered a verdict of accidental poisoning.

Bridgeport, Conn.—Fred Kolb is building. Part of his frontage may be taken off to conform to new lines surveyed by the city. There is ample room in the rear for a good-sized range of glass.

OBITUARY

Peter J. Krug.

Peter J. Krug, a retired florist, died September 18 at his home in Wallington, N. J., after a year's illness. He was born sixty-six years ago in Liverpool and came to America with his parents when he was 8 years old. For a number of years he conducted a business in Wallington and grew cut flowers and plants which won many prizes at horticultural shows. He was penniless when he started in business, but he accumulated an estate estimated at $250,000. Mr. Krug served throughout the Civil war as a member of the Thirty-third New Jersey Regiment in a division commanded by General Sherman. He fought in many engagements. He is survived by his wife and seven children.

Mrs. C. Loveridge.

Mrs. Jessie E. Loveridge, wife of C. Loveridge, of Peoria, Ill., died September 19, at the age of 48 years, 5 months and 17 days, and was buried September 21 in Springdale cemetery. Mr. and Mrs. Loveridge were married October 26, 1892. Ten children were born to them. One died in infancy and nine are left with their father to mourn her loss.

Mrs. Mary Zuber.

Mrs. Mary Zuber, wife of Frank Zuber, the florist of Whitestone, N. Y., died Sunday, September 13, in the Long Island hospital, after a lingering illness. Besides her husband she leaves four stepsons and four stepdaughters.

Charles R. Koch.

Charles R. Koch, the Philadelphia seedsman, died September 9, at the age of 75, at his home in Philadelphia. Mr. Koch was born in New Ringgold, Pa. He fought in the Civil war. After the crisis he engaged in the seed business under the firm name of Girvin & Koch in Philadelphia. About twenty-five years ago he bought the seed business of the P. B. Mingle Co. and remained active in the business until the last. Mr. Koch was a former vice-president of the Commercial Exchange and a director of the Mutual Trust Co. He was a member of the G. A. R. and of the Messiah Lutheran church. He leaves his wife; a son, John W. Koch; and three daughters, Mrs. J. Frank Shellenberger, Jr.; Mrs. William R. Thompson and Mrs. John W. Althouse.

George Rauchert.

George Rauchert, 53 years old, of 31 East One Hundred Twenty-fifth street, Manhattan, New York, dropped unconscious on Ziedler avenue, Maspeth, Sunday afternoon, September 13, and died before a physician reached him. The cause was given as an epileptic stroke. The body was taken to Skelton's morgue, Elmhurst, and later removed to the man's home. Identification was made by means of cards in the man's pockets and confirmed by his relatives.

Evanston, Ill.—Lightning struck the brick smokestack at the greenhouse establishment of Richard F. Gloede during a recent storm, knocking down about two-thirds of the 55-foot stack. The bricks fell on the boiler shed and practically demolished the roof.

...NEWS NOTES...

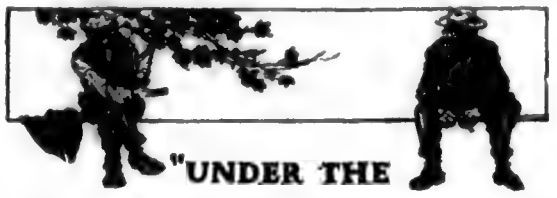
Rushville, N. Y.—A. N. Twitchell has built a greenhouse and will grow a general stock, including lettuce, for local trade.

Lima, O.—E. N. Zetlitz joined with five other stores in a community opening at the intersection of Market and Elizabeth streets Wednesday evening, September 16. A 16-piece band furnished music for the occasion.

La Crosse, Wis.—John H. Forrer, superintendent of parks, and Charles E. Schaefer, of the La Crosse Floral Co., were the judges at the annual flower show held under the auspices of the Twentieth Century Club September 11.

Watseka, Ill.—F. L. Henry has just installed a new No. 5 Kroeschell boiler and is ready for winter. He says everything is looking good since the summer drought was broken and looks forward to an excellent season. Mums will be fine.

Hartford, Conn.—On society stationery adorned by a crest, Coombs the Florist is announcing the opening of a new store, at 364 Asylum street, about October 1, to be operated in connection with the Main street store. Mr. Olmstead will have charge.



Mt. Sterling, Ky.—David Harris, until recently at Columbia, S. C., has leased for a term of years the Corbett greenhouses, at the corner of Clay street and Corbett avenue, and expects to improve them and grow plants and flowers for this town and the vicinity.

Painesville, O.—A. B. Wilson, formerly secretary of the Wilson Florist Co., at Cleveland, has opened a store at 124 North St. Clair street, known as Wilson's Flower Shop. The opening was held September 12. A greenhouse is being built at the rear of the store and two or three more are being planned for erection next spring, on Sanford street.

La Crosse, Wis.—The new store of the La Crosse Floral Co., which was opened to the public September 5, is one of the neatest and best equipped in town. The woodwork in the store is of fumed oak, the walls are lined with mirrors, and an inverted lighting system adds to the soft tone of the decorations. Modern refrigerators are cooled by an ice machine in the basement.

Kewanee, Ill.—Jacob Thurwanger & Son start the season with practically a new plant, as the repairs and improvements made necessary by the heavy hail storms of last spring have amounted to the rebuilding of the two old buildings, and two new structures have been added. To avoid a repetition of the hail losses, all the glass of the range has been covered by half-inch mesh netting.

Lake Charles, La.—C. D. Otis, proprietor of the Lake Charles Nursery, has built a small greenhouse for ferns. He recently received a carload of Washingtonia robusta and Phœnix Canariensis from California. The former will be used largely for parking the sides of the two streets of Lake Charles just paved. This is the second full car of palms Mr. Otis has bought, besides smaller shipments enough to total a third carload.

"UNDER THE SPREADING CHESTNUT TREE"

[Readers are invited to contribute to this column. No story so old that it isn't new to someone, but the fresher the better. No bar against originality. If clippings are sent, add name of paper.]

From a Seedsman's Catalogue.

The flowers that grow from the seeds you sow,
For beauty can't be beaten;
And the garden truck that is yours to pluck,
Is the best you've ever eaten.

A New Brand.

The proprietor of a candy store permitted a florist to put posters in his show window. In the autumn a specially gay, flowered one stood among the sedate boxes of tempting chocolates and candied fruits.

Evidently the poster attracted attention, for a would-be purchaser entered and said, "Give me a box of your Dutch Bulb candy." Varah A. Armstrong.

A Good-hearted Irishman.

Pat applied to a florist for a job. The florist looked him over and then said:

"You are an Irishman."

"Shure I am," says Pat; "an' what diff'rence does that make?"

"Well," said the florist, "I hired an Irishman last year and he got sick and died, and I had to pay his funeral expenses."

"Shure," says Pat, "an' I niver played a trick like that on a man in me life." J. N. S.

Just to Save Time.

One young man who was highly sensitive about an impediment which he had in his speech went to a stammerers' institute and asked for a course of treatments. The professor asked him if he wanted a full or a partial course.

"A p-p-partial c-c-course."

"To what extent would you like a partial course?"

"Enough s-so that wh-when I go to a f-f-florist's and ask for a c-c-c-chrchrys-s-anth (whistle) e-m-mum, the th-thing won't w-wilt b-before I g-get it!"—Ladies' Home Journal.

Unsettled.

BY BEATRICE PLUMB.

Her name it was Mrs. O'Raily; she purchased our flowers at will;
She ordered our men around gaily, with glances intended to kill;
She paid us a compliment daily, but never once paid us her bill.

She came and gushed over our roses, this customer, early and late.
She'd say, "Why, that fellow who grows is the cleverest man in the state!"
While we, with the meekness of Moses, would send in accounts, and then—wait.

Till up in his wrath spoke Rob Murray: "There's someone I'm going to hurt!
An' if she gets sore, I should worry! We don't grow for love, that's a cert;
An' if she don't pay in a hurry—why, darn it! I'll dine off my shirt!"

Next morning, while walking together, the lady herself fell in line.
She straightened her hat with its feather, and simpered, her eyes searching mine,
"You're such a fine judge of the weather—D'ye think that today will be fine?"

Our Robbie got hot 'neath his collar, and butted right in with his say.
"I betcher," he said, "half a dollar, this sunshine ain't framing to stay;
Today will—I hope you can foller—resemble your bill, all the way."

The lady was Irish and mettled . . . She wrote: "You have brains, quite a few.
Although I'm exceedingly nettled, I mail you the check that's your due;
My bill and the weather are SETTLED; be thankful I've not settled you!"

...NEWS NOTES...

Janesville, Wis.—Charles Rathjen, who conducts the Center Street Greenhouse, states that the recent heavy rains have done considerable damage to the stock outdoors.

Knoxville, Tenn.—At the last meeting of the Knoxville Florists' Club, at the home of President C. L. Baum, September 7, it was proposed that the society hold a chrysanthemum show this coming autumn.

Omaha, Neb.—George H. Swoboda, of Hess & Swoboda, arrived home September 15, full of war news. He saw the Kaiser make his speech at the opening of hostilities and was much impressed with the ruler of his native land.

Toledo, O.—Mrs. J. B. Freeman, of 336 Superior street, has a neat circular calling the attention of her patrons to the telegraph delivery service. A touch of humor appears in one corner in the shape of a punning sentence, "Our business is growing."

Beatrice, Neb.—An iron-frame greenhouse, 32x110 feet, is nearing completion at the range of the Dole Floral Co. At the salesroom on Ella street a large icebox is being installed. This company is advertising Dutch bulbs, urging its patrons to plant them in larger supply than ever, as they will be plentiful.

St. Joseph, Mo.—Ernst Mueller grows carnations and mums, but most of his attention is given to vegetables, both as a field crop and under glass. He recently has added two large houses to his area for vegetable forcing. A big Pierce-Arrow motor truck has been purchased to haul the crop to market.

Toronto, Ont.—George Bonnett is busy remodeling one of his show houses. He started in business five years ago with one small house and now has 30,000 feet of glass at his establishment at 1564 Queen street west, almost in the heart of the city. Everything in the florists' and nursery lines is handled; business is especially good in design work just now.

Madison, N. J.—The nineteenth annual flower show of the Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society will be held at Assembly hall, October 28 and 29. The exhibition committee is W. H. Duckham, C. H. Totty, R. M. Schultz and Arthur Herrington. The schedule has been issued in pamphlet form and copies may be had by addressing Edward Reagan, secretary, Morristown, N. J.

Hartford, Conn.—At the Connecticut state fair the best showing in the horticultural department was made by nurserymen and private gardeners. The list of awards included W. W. Hunt & Co., Hartford; James W. Scott, Hartford; John Huss, Hartford; A. Nelson, Hartford; H. F. Whiting, Hartford; Bon Ton Flower Shop, Hartford; W. S. Mason, Farmington; W. H. McKenzie, Bristol; Alfred Cebelius, Hartford; A. B. Howard & Son, Belchertown, Mass.; James A. Alliston, New Britain; John Lewis Childs, Flowerfield, N. Y.; C. W. Brown, Ashland, Mass.; N. Nelson, Hartford; W. D. Hathaway, New Bedford, Mass.; George L. Stillman, Westerly, R. I., and John H. Slocombe, New Haven.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Incorporated by Act of Congress, March 4, 1901.

Officers for 1914: President, Theodore Wirth, Minneapolis; vice-president, Patrick Welch, Boston; secretary, John Young, 53 W. 28th St., New York City; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo.

Officers for 1915: President, Patrick Welch, Boston; vice-president, Daniel MacRorie, San Francisco; secretary, John Young, 53 W. 28th St., New York City; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo.

Thirty-first annual convention, San Francisco, Cal., August 17 to 20, 1915.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

THERE is nothing that so stimulates business as making it easy to buy.

CLEVELAND will ask for the S. A. F. convention in 1916, but it is rumored the society will be urged to stop off in Texas that year on its way back from the coast.

THERE will be, from all indications, a tremendous demand this winter for young stock of the Mrs. Russell rose. Everybody seems to like it and all the growers will plant it heavily next season.

THE florists through the middle west are preparing for the best season ever known, basing their expectations on the magnificent crops just harvested and on the big prices being received for them.

AN advertising expert, writing for System, has it figured out that "full pages in newspapers usually pull six or eight times as much as half pages," and that "circularization, on the average, is more expensive than newspaper advertising."

THERE are those who have begun to fear that, instead of there being no azaleas this year, the market will be overcrowded just as and for the same reasons that the Dutch bulb market already has been. If Europe does not take its usual quota of the azaleas this year America will be the only market for them, and transportation is open.

IN spite of frequent repetitions of the statement that anonymous letters can not be noticed, The Review continues to receive many inquiries that are neither dated nor signed, with nothing by which the sender can be identified. Such inquiries go to the waste basket.

THE New York Florists' Club was the first of the trade organizations to accept the new plan of affiliation adopted by the S. A. F. at the Boston convention. The New York club has 156 members, as reported in last week's issue of The Review, who also are members of the S. A. F. and has applied to have its president appointed as a member of the S. A. F. board of directors. What organization will be next?

HOW ABOUT IT?

It is quite the regular thing for subscribers, in remitting for renewal, to write the editor a few words of encouragement, like this:

In sending in my dollar for another year I want to say I still consider The Review the best in the bunch.—H. E. Meader, Dover, N. H., September 14, 1914.

If that was the case when The Review still was using the common pamphlet make-up, doesn't the new Review deserve to be classed by itself—not with "the bunch"?

ROLL A FEW DOLLARS, PLEASE.

All things considered, business is not bad with florists. In certain places local conditions cause a falling off in sales, but in other sections local conditions have resulted in better business than usual, so that on the whole this is turning out about an average September.

But there is general complaint of slow collections. People who are almost as good as gold have suspended payment. Consumers of our products failing to pay as promptly as usual, the retailer's embarrassment runs through every stratum of the trade. Everybody becomes short.

It is a time when united action by the trade will work immense general good.

Let everybody who deals with the public make a special effort at collection and pass the money on, promptly, to the wholesalers and the growers.

If everyone in the trade makes just a little extra effort in the next week to put a few more dollars cash in circulation in the trade it will loosen up the tension all around and do an immense amount of good.

Let everybody help.

EUROPEAN SHIPMENTS.

It has been pointed out in The Review from the first issue after the war that it was entirely without justification to jump to the conclusion that imports would be shut off. The Review repeatedly has pointed out that transportation was gradually reopening and from week to week has sought to make the real conditions clear, to the end that the trade might not miscalculate. Last week it was made apparent that practically everything, even Belgian and German stock, will get here almost on time. Belgian shipments are arriving via Rotterdam, shipped from Ghent via canals to Ternuizen, thence via more canals to Rotterdam. An importing house stated September 19 that it had between 800 and 900 packages of Belgian plants on the water in five steamers. Holland shipments are sure, if not in; English and Japanese shipments are reasonably sure; French shipments are expected to be made. The only serious doubt is as to being able to make German shipments of valley pips owing to the difficulty of securing refrigeration on steamers from Copenhagen or Rotterdam, but it has been suggested that importers combine to hire their own steamer to take care of this shipment and install refrigeration service in it.

IMMORTELLES ARRIVING.

The immortelles have begun to arrive from southern France, relieving another of war's alarms, for it seems likely that, now shipments have commenced, the total for the season will run larger than usual, just as it is doing with other European trade articles.

The boat from Marseilles that arrived at New York September 19 brought 185 cases of immortelles consigned as follows:

Consignee.	Cases.
Thompson	1
Allister	8
Bayersdorfer, H., & Co.	170
Maltus & Ware	11

STAMP TAXES COMING.

The decrease in the revenues of the United States government, which has followed the European war, necessitates either a reduction in expenditures, which is unthinkable, or emergency taxation to make up the deficit. Congress of course is planning the latter.

A bill was introduced September 21 to restore the stamp taxes of the Spanish war, with some changes. The plan is to put the stamp taxes into operation immediately and continue until December 31, 1915. There is to be no tax on checks, but certain provisions will hit florists rather generally. Among these it is provided that freight and express receipts shall carry a revenue stamp of 1 cent each, with a mandatory provision that the shippers must pay this tax. Telephone messages are to be taxed 1 cent on all tolls of 15 cents or more, and telegrams 1 cent a message. There are many other stamp taxes, but these will be the principal ones affecting florists, except, perhaps, that a tax of 2 cents per gallon on gasoline is proposed.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

A heat wave, which increased in intensity daily for nearly a week, culminated September 20 and 21 in temperatures of 88 degrees and set the market back to midsummer conditions.

Stimulated by autumn weather, business had been on the up grade and the market was beginning to assume appearances of activity, but the beginning of the present week found everything under the influence of the high heat. The supply was increased, probably doubled, by the heat, and the same factor resulted in a decrease in the demand. The market seldom has been more stagnant than it was September 21. Fortunately, the heat wave broke the following day and a steady improvement is anticipated.

Probably roses suffered more severely than anything else as the result of the summer temperature. The stock is fine this fall, but the heat resulted in the majority of it reaching the market so

WE ARE IN POSITION TO SUPPLY EXCELLENT EARLY

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

YOU WILL FIND THEM READY SELLERS

Yellow and white are ready in quantity. Usually we can fill orders of good size without notice—always on notice that gives time to get the stock in from the greenhouses. These are from the same good growers who supplied the fine stock we shipped in other seasons. Golden Glow and Smith's Advance are the two leading varieties. Recommend them to your customers and get your stock of us.

HOME-GROWN GIGANTEUM LILIES

If you haven't had good lilies, it was because you have not ordered of us. The lily, cut right, is a good shipper, but there is a limit. The lilies you get from us are home-grown, fresh cut, and you get them with only one handling. Our supply is so large no one need be content with any less good lilies.

FANCY ROSES

There may be some roses as good as Amling's, but there are none better. Our effort for years has been to build up a supply that would average better quality than the ordinary run of roses. That's why we now have first call on the business of the buyers who appreciate that the best roses are decidedly the most profitable to them. Of course, we have short and medium lengths, and are glad to have orders for them, but our specialty is roses of extra length and quality. A full list of varieties:

AMERICAN BEAUTIES

For a long time the marvel of this market was the quality of our Beauties. Now that the market has become accustomed to the quality, the marvel is the steadiness of our cuts. We always have them. If you order of us throughout the season, your needs always will be taken care of.

CARNATIONS

Our early carnations are excellent. The flowers are good and the stems improve daily. Cut increasing rapidly.

ORCHIDS

We again are in good crop with fancy home-grown Cattleyas of the best quality. Can furnish in quantity.

If you look to us for your supply of green goods, you will be well pleased. Fancy ferns, good smilax, fine adiantum, plumosus and Sprengeri bunches, galax, leucothoe, boxwood—we have them all.

Better Beauties

We would be justified in saying there are no better Beauties than Randall's—but the fact is Randall's Beauties are getting better and better. The plants are making splendid growth and the flowers and stems get bigger and better every day. We have a big supply and shall have it regularly—so we are as glad to get your orders as you will be to get our Beauties.

fully developed that it could not be used for shipping orders. It has taken a great deal of sorting to pick out the tight buds for shipping and the balance of the stock necessarily has suffered in value. It is worth while noting in this connection that the city business is extremely light, with shipping trade the principal reliance of many houses. The result has been that the soft stock left on hand after the shipping orders have been picked out was sold at extremely low prices. There are fewer white roses than of any other color, but all varieties have been plentiful. Mrs. Russell is being cut in large quantity and is extremely popular.

The supply of Beauties has increased along with the supply of roses. The quality is fine, the size of bud having increased rapidly of late. Those who can use Beauties are doing a good business with them, for prices continue low for quantities.

Chrysanthemums are much more abundant than earlier in the season. Moderate quantities of superfine flowers are seen, but a good deal of the Golden Glow is of only medium quality. The Smith's Advance is not so good as the yellow. The best grade of mums is selling fairly well and a little cool weather would mean a good market, it is thought.

Carnations continue to sell quite well. The supply increases daily and the quality improves. It is good for the time of year. There are not so many asters. Locally the season is about over, but considerable quantities continue to come from New York and farther east. The good stock sells well, but many of the asters are too poor to be useful.

There is no change in Easter lilies; they are overabundant. Gladioli are steadily on the wane. There has been enough even of valley this week. Cattleyas are coming in much more plentifully. All green goods are abundant.

Terms of Sale: 40% on Subscription, 30% on Jan. 1, 1915, 30% on April 1, 1915

Bankers: ROYAL BANK OF CANADA, Grand Forks, B. C.

With the proceeds of the sale of shares we propose at once to erect an additional large range of greenhouses.

The present business is well established (since 1902) and has paid in the past 12% on the investment.

The market for the produce such as we grow is practically unlimited, situated as we are in the center of southern B. C.; with three railways entering, our shipping facilities are unexcelled, and the climate is ideal for a business of this nature.

This affords an opportunity for the small investor to invest in what is probably the most profitable business in Canada today.

We will allow, as a commission, 10% to anyone securing subscriptions.

Do it now, as this ad will not appear many times, and you may lose an opportunity that may not be offered you again in a lifetime.

Remember, you have until April 1915 to pay.

Ronsley Announces Opening.

The opening of the new retail store in the Westminster building, 106 South Dearborn street, is announced for September 24. Considerable delay has been experienced, owing to failures in the delivery of fixtures and inside decorating. This shop is to be known as Ronsley the Florist and will be conducted by Fred Ronsley, formerly with J. A. Raske, who will be assisted by Mrs. John Fielding, Jr., and Mrs. E. W. Gan[illegible] both of whom have also been connected with Raske. The decorations will be in silver and gold and no effort has been spared to make the shop complete in every detail. A large refrigerator with plate glass on three sides is at the back of the store and a fine workroom is in the basement, which is fitted up with every modern convenience, including a large storage refrigerator built by the United Refrigerator & Ice Machine Co., of Kenosha, Wis.

Field's Florists.

It is reported on good authority that the ruling powers of Marshall Field & Co., which will open flower sections about October 1, are opposed to handling funeral orders and it is for that reason the flower sections have been so meagerly equipped, without workroom facilities. Of course every florist will appreciate the difficulty of cleaning up regularly on a general line of cut flower purchases without funeral work as a means of using up stock that becomes too open for other sales, but this feature does not appeal to those who have not tried it. Nor does Field plan to handle weddings and decorations, it is said.

Field's will no doubt sell large quantities of cut flowers, but competition of this character will not be calculated to cut into the sales of the regular florists of the better class; rather to educate the public for the benefit of the fully equipped florists.

pleasure of Mr. Johnson's marriage, September 22, at Bedford, Pa. His bride was Miss Laura Shanefelt, whose acquaintance he made during one of the first of her frequent visits with relatives in Chicago. After a honeymoon in the east, Mr. and Mrs. Johnson will take up their residence in Rosemont.

It is customary in such instances to congratulate the groom, but those who do business with Mr. Johnson hold him in such high esteem that perhaps this time they may be permitted also to offer felicitations to the bride.

Association Meeting.

The meeting of the Cook County Florists' Association, September 17, was largely given to consideration of the tour to the Pacific coast for the S. A. F. convention of 1915. It was decided to go by way of the Northwestern to Denver, the Denver & Rio Grande to Salt Lake City, and the Western Pacific to San Francisco, each person to choose his own route returning. The cost is to be $152 for each person. This covers all necessary expenses. Secretary Pyfer was instructed to invite other florists' clubs to join with the association to make up a special train.

Michael Freres, with the Chicago Carnation Co., was elected to membership.

Various Notes.

While business thus far this autumn has not been rushing, it has been at least as good as last season, according to the E. Wienhoeber Co. There has been steady improvement since September 1.

The Frank Floral Co., Frank Potocka, manager, has been open for several days at the southeast corner of Wabash avenue and Lake street, but the formal opening will not be held until September 26. The first sale produced a dollar bill, which has been framed as a souvenir.

At Winterson's Seed Store, J. P. Degnan comments on the number of out-of-town people who are dropping in to leave retail orders for bulbs. He thinks the country florists can not be pushing bulb sales the way they should.

Jack Byers, who returned from Toledo last week, went to Galesburg September 22, to take charge of the florists' department for the O. T. Johnson Co.

The arrival of the first bouvardia of the season was reported last week, by John Kruchten.

Arrangements have been completed to manufacture in the east to supply that territory. D. D. Johnson is in charge of the eastern office.

September 21 the streets and alleys committee of the city council denied the request of the McCormick estate, owner of the Atlas block, for an extension of time in which to comply with the ordinance requiring the clearing of sidewalks in the loop district. bons. It is Mr. Gibbons' first experience in the florists' business, but he says he is well pleased with the outlook.

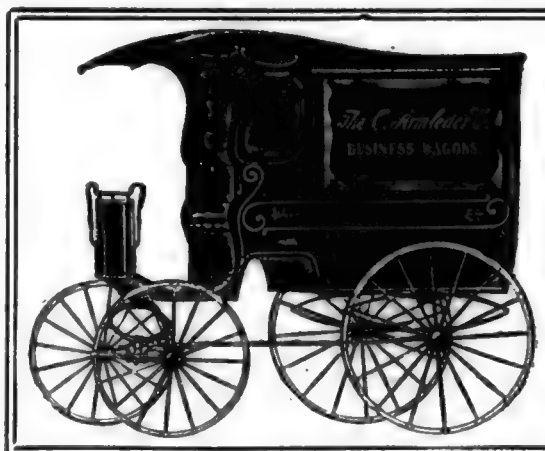
The first year's business has exceeded epectations at the Corner Florist Shop, according to Frank F. Storck. The store, at 2901 Cottage Grove avenue, caters principally to hospitals in that vicinity and is managed by Mrs. Storck.

Fred J. Dittberner, the Gross Park florist whose store is at 2016 Roscoe boulevard, is a firm believer in window advertising. Recently he had his window made up to represent a wedding scene. Dolls, correctly dressed for the occasion, with plants and flowers carefully arranged, made an excellent effect. Mr. Dittberner says the results were well worth the time and expense.

Miss Carolyn Haas, who assists her brother, Edson Haas, in his store at 5463 West Lake street, has returned after a month's visit at her old home in Titusville, Pa.

There has been a heavier call for Boston ferns this fall than ever before, reports David Hammer, 2014 West Division street.

Tony Wolniewicz, 3301 North Claremont avenue, says he had a little hard luck with his Boston ferns this season, losing over 1,000 on account of some trouble with the soil.



Frank Evert has recently purchased the store and greenhouses at 2010 Melrose street from Mrs. Joseph T. Lang.

The flower garden in front of the store of Charles Grabig, 1843 Irving Park boulevard, is attracting the attention of all who pass. Mr. Grabig has planted cannas and salvias with a border of geraniums, which adds greatly to the appearance of his place.

Work of repairing benches and reglazing is going on at the establishment of Charles Schleif, 5655 Ravenswood avenue.

H. C. Mulder, who trades as the University Florist at 1121 East Fifty-fifth street, reports he is well satisfied with the first six months' business there. A few minor changes are being made in the arrangement of the interior of the store in order to better handle the fall trade.

foreign birth, says the war in Europe has affected his trade this autumn.

The Week's Visitors.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Carr, of Columbus, Miss., associated with the Idlewild Floral Co., of Memphis, were here last week. Felix Reichling took them in Peter Reinberg's big six-cylinder to visit the greenhouses.

J. U. McKay and wife, of Jackson, Miss., were in town for several days last week and visited a number of the larger growers' establishments.

Walter Scott, of Grand Haven, Mich., was in town this week, looking for a chance to go into business. He was with the Hancocks many years ago and called on James Hancock during his visit.

H. A. Barnard, of the English firm of Stuart, Low & Co., is here this week.

Walter Mott, representing Benj. Hammond, Beacon, N. Y., paid The Review a visit September 20.

H. P. Oliver, of Farmington, Utah, passed through Chicago last week on his way home from the east. He reports business as unusually good in his section of the country.

After a fortnight's visit with relatives here, Mrs. A. P. Raja, of the Arcade Flower Shop, has returned to her home at Duluth.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

During the last week the flower stores have resumed a businesslike aspect, with a good demand for all stock but a somewhat poor supply. Roses form the bulk of the stock. Dahlias are in good demand, but are not plentiful on account of the unfavorable season. The stems are rather short and the flowers have not the keeping qualities they usually have. Carnations are more plentiful, but are not up to the average quality. A few asters are still coming in, but are mostly of poor grade, being the last of the cutting. Greens are plentiful, with a good demand. The wholesale houses are unusually busy after the summer period of inactivity.

Club Meeting.

The regular meeting of the Florists' Club was held September 14. President Johnston had returned from his vacation and occupied the chair. N. F. Flitton, the secretary, was absent on account of illness. C. H. Wagner was appointed secretary pro tem. On motion of R. Vincent, Jr., a letter was sent to Mr. Flitton, wishing him a speedy recovery.

Some discussion was indulged in relative to the American Rose Society's exhibition and convention, to be held in the coming spring. A committee was appointed, consisting of Messrs. Graham, Perry, Moss, Burger and Morrison, to investigate ways and means and to report at the next meeting, September 28.

Professors Aspon and Symons, of College Park, were present and the former gave an entertaining talk on subjects interesting to the trade in general. Professor Symons spoke on the annual fall show of the Maryland Horticultural Society, to be held at the Fifth Regiment armory, November 17 to 21. He spoke of the favorable progress being made and stated that, as twice the amount of space of former shows will be given over to the florists' exhibits, a good display will no doubt be made.

Richard Vincent, Jr., extended a personal invitation to every member of the club to attend the firm's annual dahlia show, to be held at White Marsh, September 29 to October 3. A special train will be run from Washington to convey the florists from that city, October 1, and they will be joined on their arrival here by the local club and all will proceed to the grounds.

Various Notes.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. J. Johnston have returned from their annual vacation, spent in the north.

Lohr & Fritze's new rose house is looking fine and gives every indication of producing a heavy winter cut.

John P. Willheim, of Belair road, is erecting a house, 30x200, for carnations. It will be finished in a short time.

John A. Nuth, of Belair road and Franklin avenue, is working on his new house, but has been delayed because of the non-arrival of some gutters, which were lost in transportation.

The annual dahlia show of R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co. will be held, as usual, at their place at White Marsh, Md., from September 29 to October 3. This is on the line of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, and trains leave Camden station for Cowenton, which is the station nearest to White Marsh, as follows: 8:15 a. m., 12:30 p. m., 2:05 p. m. and 5:00 p. m. Conveyances will meet all trains and carry passengers to the grounds free. Trains also stop at Mount Royal and Gay street stations, from five to nine minutes later than the time given above. Trains leave Cowenton for Baltimore at 10:18 a. m., 5:11 p. m., 6:00 p. m. and 7:22 p. m. From Philadelphia, leave the Broad street station at 7:50 a. m., changing at Newark, Del., for local trains stopping at Cowenton. Returning, leave Cowenton for Philadelphia at 5:33 p. m. On Thursday, October 1, the Washington Florists' Club will come over on a special train, be joined at Baltimore by the local club and proceed to the destination, where an enjoyable and instructive visit is promised, as the acreage devoted to dahlias, cannas and geraniums is hardly equaled in the east, if anywhere.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The difference between the outdoor and indoor flowers is even more marked this week than it was a week ago. The continued drought has wound up the gladioli and most of the local asters. It has put many of the outdoor flowers of miscellaneous sorts on the back track, and it has shortened the dahlia crop. The dahlias that are coming in are of fair quality, particularly from the skillful growers, and they are selling quite well. So, too, are the asters from a cooler clime. Many of these are fine indeed.

Of the indoor flowers, roses are far and away the most plentiful. The rose novelties, such as Mock, Russell, Hadley, etc., are in rather better demand than the standard varieties, or at least it seems so, with the smaller supply. We have had some record heat for September and it has brought in an enormous number of roses. The poor ones have little chance.

The advance of valley to $5 per hundred for extras, due to the necessity of making the stock in this country go as far as possible, marks a point not reached since the palmy days of Aldrich J. Pennock. Golden Glow chrysanthemums are reappearing here and there after an absence of a fortnight or so. Just a few Smith's Advance add variety. Carnations are a trifle more plentiful. Most of them are rather short in the stem, but a few of good

The Main Line Floral Guide.

A little booklet published monthly for distribution among flower lovers living in the suburbs of Philadelphia, from Overbrook to Paoli, is interesting to florists chiefly because it marks a distinct line of thought in the mind of one of us. This little book, published by the Strafford Flower Farm, of Strafford, Pa., is aimed especially to hold the patronage of all those who drew their plants and flowers from the Overbrook nurseries. Edward A. Stroud, who owned and operated both places, has just completed the removal of his greenhouses from Overbrook to Strafford, combining two places in one. The Overbrook place has been used chiefly for retailing, the Strafford place chiefly for wholesaling. The crops at Overbrook have varied with the season; the crop at Strafford has varied little. Carnations all the year around are the mainstay. After convincing the reader that perennials, ferneries, plants and flowers can be just as readily secured at Strafford as at Overbrook by the post or telephone, the book proceeds to broaden the field. There is a leading article by Mr. Stroud on September flowers, which will be read with interest at Broad and Walnut and at Eighteenth and Chestnut streets. Then follows a clever article by Joseph Russell, the manager, who loyally promises to give up all his evenings to talking business with Main-liners on the telephone. After that there are several other good articles by unknown authorities and a final plea for floral fellowship. The execution of the idea with the aid of the telephone and the motor car delivery is full of promise.

Holland Bulbs.

The following dispatch received last week from London will give courage to the bulb market in this country:

On account of the scarcity of wheat in Holland, the Association of Dutch Bakers has sanctioned the use of a so-called tulip bread, in which one-third of the flour used is made from ground tulip bulbs. The bread is said to be nourishing, and the war ministry has recommended its use in the army.

Various Notes.

Samuel S. Pennock returned from Maine September 19. He has resumed active charge of his company's affairs.

William F. Dreer is expected home, by way of Marseilles, September 27.

Raymond Kester has purchased the retail florists' business of Kester & Hardin, Williamsport, Pa. His friends look for a repetition of the success achieved by H. H. Battles when he took over the business of Evans & Battles.

The Leo Niessen Co. opened a branch in Washington, D. C., September 16, purchasing the Washington Florists' Exchange. The business will continue in charge of Manager Schnell.

Pennock Bros. have this week what is probably the largest order for a single piece of floral work that they have ever received. It is a casket cover of beautiful design, made with 5,000 sprays of lily of the valley and 500 cattleyas. There are wreaths and crosses.

The Chalfont Cut Flower Co. will erect a second greenhouse 35x125 at Chalfont, Pa., using material from the King Construction Co. It is significant that the first carnation bloom from the first house, which is twice as long as the second will be, should be Beacon. It was brought to this city September 19 by Samuel F. Lilley. The new house will be planted with sweet peas.

Emil H. Gerschick and Mrs. Gerschick have just returned from a long planned visit to New Orleans, where two of Mr. Gerschick's brothers are engaged in the business.

Mrs. Drew-Bear has recovered from her illness and is once more greeting her friends at the London Flower Shop.

W. Atlee Burpee entertained the Poor Richard Club at his farm, Fordhook, near Doylestown, Pa., September 19, when eighty guests enjoyed sports and collation. Country pulled City over the line in the tug of war. It is nice to know when brawn beats brain. Among the florists present were Howard M. Earl, Walter Van Cort, Charles Henry Fox, Alexander B. Scott and John Washburne.

Victor Ridenour has completed the improvements to his store at Thirty-third and Dauphin street, which is now extremely handsome.

John L. Ratcliffe, of Richmond, Va., was a recent visitor.

H. Bayersdorfer wishes his friends to know that, while goods are coming from abroad, excessive freight rates, unusual hauling charges and cost of cabling prevent conditions from being normal.

Fred Cowperthwaite judged the Swarthmore flower show, held by the Woman's Club September 19, and in the afternoon that of the Norwood Horticultural Society, at Norwood, Pa.

Recent visitors at Michell's nurseries at Andalusia included John Scott, Huntsville, Ala.; B. L. Elliott, of Pittsburgh, Pa.; W. F. Gude, of Washington, D. C., and Miss M. Meinhardt, of St. Louis, Mo.

There was a great game of quoits at Lansdowne this week, when Jacques Gillmet, the noted violet grower of Media, and his friend, Aubrey Hampshire, played with Emil Lieker and George Auegle. The first pair, who are experts, won the first two games, but after that things did not seem to come their way. Maybe it was because they played thirteen games.

The Market.

Business has been exceedingly good for this time of year, and the quality of stock on the market has been excellent. Last week was fashion show week and it helped business considerably. There has been ready sale for Beauties, as a number of openings of the stores required flowers and decorative plants of all kinds. Short and medium length Beauties have also been of fine quality and they clean up by evening. The supply of roses, as well as the quality, is the best it has been for several years during September. Weddings are becoming more numerous, and the call for roses is heavier. At times it is a little hard to get enough white roses to fill orders. Asters are still plentiful and fine, and sell at good prices. Gladioli are exceptionally fine and bring a fair price. Dahlias for the last week have

BUDDLEIA ASIATICA

A New Winter Cut Flower Plant

This new Greenhouse Shrub is without a doubt one of the most interesting and attractive flowering plants in existence. It is of exceptional beauty, and wherever exhibited has been greatly admired by every flower-lover. It grows about 3 feet tall, is of free branching habit and produces, in abundance, long spikes of pure white flowers, with a delicate fragrance, resembling lilac. They can be forced with little heat, a carnation house temperature being the most suitable. and can be brought into bloom by Christmas; used in combination with poinsettias, they are especia_ly effective; valuable as a pot plant or for cut flowers. We predict a big sale for this novelty, and every progressive florist should try at least a few.

Strong plants in 2½-inch pots, $2.00 per dozen; per 100, $15.00. Extra large specimen plants in 6-inch pots, 50c each; per dozen, $5.00.

The Supply Is Limited—Order Early been arriving in heavy supply. Chrysanthemums are now on the market in yellow and white. This summer has been good for outdoor cut stock especially, for it has been fairly dry, and there has been little inferior stock seen on the market. The supply of good stock has been plentiful, but not more than the market required.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club met at the store of T. J. Noll & Co. Monday evening, September 21, to decide on a permanent place to meet.

Arthur Newell reports business is increasing rapidly and the advance over last year at this time is good. He was busy all last week with funeral work.

Samuel Murray had a pretty window display for fashion week. He had a big bank of crotons in one corner of the window and around the edge English forcing grapes that were immense. In the center was a buffet table trimmed to perfection. Mr. Murray went to Chicago last week.

W. J. Barnes decorated as usual for the fashion week, the store of Emery, Bird & Thayer Dry Goods Co. using over 500 palms, ferns and decorative plants. Mr. Barnes has made big improvements in his greenhouses this summer and every greenhouse has been painted.

R. S. Brown & Son have their greenhouses in good condition. Their chrysanthemums, carnations and spring stock are in excellent shape, and business for the summer was the best they have ever had since in business. They have made a great many repairs this summer to the old range in the city.

A. F. Barbe has started to grow roses again. It has been several years since there were roses at this place. He has some nice houses of carnations and mums and a fine lot of ferns from those in 5-inch pots up to those in 12-inch pans.

The Alpha Floral Co. reports a big business in decorating for fashion show week. A. S. Elberfield has taken a trip through Kansas in an automobile for two weeks.

W. L. Rock has a pretty window display, in which are a large number of yellow mums; everything else is in autumn colors.

The Geo. M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co. has had a heavy run on out-of-town orders in cut flowers and funeral work. Mr. Parker was at the greenhouses last week and he reports that the stock is in excellent condition.

T. J. Noll & Co. have been busy. The firm has doubled its floor space and is preparing to get in its winter supplies.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

With the cooler weather and the opening of the schools, causing a general return to town from seashore and country-side, there has been a noticeable improvement in the local trade during the last week. The annual September show of the horticultural society and one or two early society weddings assisted in the business stimulation.

Roses and asters continue to furnish the principal market supply, but there are some carnations and chrysanthemums. Prices have stiffened slightly since the beginning of the month.

Horticultural Society Show.

The annual September exhibition of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society, held last week in the Mathewson Street church parlors, was one of the finest held in several years. Two especially noticeable features were a collection of decorative plants from the William Appleton greenhouses and the vegetable display from the estate of Senator R. Livingston Beeckman, of Newport.

New dahlias were shown by H. V. Mayo and Arthur Sellew. The former's was a hybrid cactus dahlia, orange pink, called the Ethel Mayo, in honor of Mrs. Mayo. Mr. Sellew showed a new seedling dahlia, yellow base, shading to scarlet, named in honor of Mrs. Sellew; and a decorative dahlia, color of Geisha, which is to be known as Fire King.

Prizes were awarded on dahlias in the commercial growers' and professional gardeners' classes to Sisson & Thurston, W. D. Hathaway and W. F. Hall, and for the collection of 100 named varieties Lewis A. Jillson was awarded first prize, William Steel second, and George H. Walker was highly commended. Special prize of bronze plaque went to A. E. Johnson for exhibit of fifty varieties.

Various Notes.

Thomas Kennedy, of Pascoag, returned recently from a two weeks' motorcycle trip through the White mountains, having had an enjoyable vacation.

Leo Engel was a recent business visitor in Philadelphia.

William Doel, of Pascoag, has finished the foundations for a large addition to his greenhouses. In this addition he is installing a new steam heater, which will be used as an auxiliary to the hot water heater in the coldest weather. The new section will be especially for carnations.

Cedric Pearson, of Crompton, who was seriously burned while cleaning his motorcycle at the Quidnick Greenhouses a short time ago, having to be removed to the hospital, is convalescing.

Bernard J. Farrell, with W. E. Barrett Co., has been on a vacation trip to New York, Jersey City and vicinity.

George L. Stillman, of Westerly, had a fine display of show, pompon, cactus and single dahlias at the North Stonington fair last week. W. H. M.

Flower Show.

Cold weather prevailed all through the week in which the Northeastern Michigan Association held its fair at Bay City. This, in some measure, had an effect on the attendance, but the florists had large displays. Boehringer Bros. carried off the most prizes, while J. B. Goetz Sons and the Wm. Roethke Floral Co. were tied for the second place. The displays were by far the best held at any flower show in the state. This is probably saying a good deal, but it shows what coöperation will do. The members of the Saginaw-Bay City Floricultural Society pledged themselves to take care of the floral exhibit, which they did in a most creditable manner.

Following is the list of awards:

Palms—Boehringer Bros., Bay City, first; Wm. Roethke Floral Co., Bay City, second; J. B. Goetz Sons, Saginaw, third.

Begonias—Boehringer Bros., first; Wm. Roethke Floral Co., second; J. B. Goetz Sons, third.

FIVE PER CENT ON FREIGHT.

The eastern railroads will not be denied. Although it is only a few weeks since the Interstate Commerce Commission handed down its decision in the five per cent freight rate case, the railroads already are back, asking for all they didn't get then. The commission has announced it will reopen the case, with hearings October 19.

To florists the principal interest lies in the rate on coal. An advance of five per cent in the freight on coal will mean an extra cost of 10½ cents per ton to the big Chicago growers who use smokeless coals from West Virginia.

TULIP BREAD.

Harry A. Bunyard, manager for Arthur T. Boddington, calls attention to a good use the Hollanders are said to be making of their surplus of tulips—a much better use than shipping them to America. It is contained in a cable from London, as follows:

"On account of the scarcity of wheat in Holland the Association of Dutch Bakers has sanctioned the use of a so-called 'tulip bread,' in which one-third of the flour used is made from ground tulip bulbs. The bread is said to be nourishing, and the war ministry has recommended its use in the army."

Columbus, O.—Hellenthal, Florist, is now in his new location, at 231 South High street, corner of Rich street.

Blair, Neb.—Rodgers & Pieper, who conduct business as the Blair Floral Co., are building a 70-foot addition to their greenhouses and making other improvements.

LILIES FOR EASTER.

When shall I plant giganteum lilies to have them on time for Easter, and what temperature do they need?

A. S.

Giganteum lilies will not arrive from Japan for some time yet. If you pot them by the end of October or in the early part of November they will come along on time, provided they have sufficient heat. Give the bulbs a temperature of 55 to 60 degrees when potted. When the pots are filled with roots and the growth is making headway, let them have a warm, moist house, kept at 60 to 65 degrees at night right along. Giganteums like heat, and must have it if you want to make a success with them. C. W.

JERUSALEM CHERRIES.

I should like to get some information in regard to growing Jerusalem cherries, as this is my first attempt to grow them. I have them planted in rows in the field, here in western New Jersey. They are nice, bushy plants, some of them full of cherries, which measure about one-half inch in diameter. Will 5-inch pots be large enough for them? How long will the cherries stay on the plants after they have become red? Are the cherries poisonous? I have pinched the plants back twice. Will they be too early for the Christmas trade? H. G.

Now is the correct time to lift and pot your solanums. Endeavor to get a little ball with each and save all possible roots. Pot firmly, place in a cold-frame or on a bench in a cool greenhouse, shade from bright sunshine and spray freely until the plants cease to wilt. Then give the fullest sunshine and plenty of water. The size of pots must depend on the kind of plants you have. Large, bushy ones would need the 6-inch size, but many, no doubt, could be accommodated in 5-inch pots.

The berries are not poisonous. They will keep in perfect condition for Christmas in any ordinary greenhouse. When fully ripe the fruit will hang for six to eight weeks, sometimes even longer. If the plants get quite dry, the leaves will drop before the fruit. C. W.

PAGES OF RETAILERS' CARDS

THIS department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

Fred H. Weber,
...Florist...

St. Louis, Mo., September 5, 1914.

Florists' Review,
Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen:-

During the SIX MONTHS from March 4 to September 4 I have received from other Florists, by mail, telegraph or cable, orders to the amount of $513.25 as a result of my advertisement in the Retailers' department of The Review. With the allowance to senders the record for SIX MONTHS is:

Value of orders received----------	$513.25
Less 20% allowed senders--------	102.60
Net value of orders for SIX MONTHS--	410.65

It should be noted that this showing covers the DULL SUMMER MONTHS, when any addition to a Florists's business is decidedly welcome.

Retail Florists not advertising in The Review should profit by this letter.

Respectfully,

F. H. Weber

The Market.

Following closely in the wake of one of the coldest spells of September weather ever known here, we were treated to some days of tropical heat, the maximum September 18 rising to 87 degrees. This seemed to rather knock the life out of the cut flower trade and conditions are not any better than a week ago. We have had practically no rain during September and outdoor flowers of all kinds continue unusually plentiful and good. Asters still are of grand quality, but low in price. Gladioli are nearing the end and selling somewhat better. It has been an unprofitable year for growers of gladioli.

Roses, with the warmer weather, are dragging again. On occasional days there is a little spurt, but they will not sell really well until a killing frost wipes out the outdoor flowers. Ophelia is coming in good from several growers. Taft, Ward and Sunburst are each now of good quality. Beauties sell spasmodically. Carnations are increasing in numbers, but do not sell well. They will improve shortly, however. Quite a lot of Golden Glow chrysanthemums are seen, most of them only mediocre in quality. Valley meets with a moderate sale. Local specialists are planning to grow more freesias and other flowers to take its place. Lilies are abundant. Some Cattleya labiata is coming in. Prices are good on these. Hunnemannia and salpiglossis are two quite popular annuals for window decorations. Small lots of Bouvardia Humboldtii are coming in. More of this, however, could be sold. Pot plant trade remains quiet.

Various Notes.

A delegation from the North Shore Horticultural Society visited the nurseries of the Breck-Robinson Co., Lexington, Mass., September 17. Lunch was served at the Lexington Inn before the inspection. The visitors were agreeably surprised at the great work accomplished here in so short a time and the splendid condition of the stock drew much praise. Remarks were made by Albert E. Robinson, one of the firm and manager of the nursery, C. H. Brackett and T. J. Grey.

The Montgomery Co. is sending the Boston Rose Co., among other roses, extra fine Hadley, Double White Killarney, Taft and Ophelia.

Peter Fisher reports orders for over 150,000 rooted cuttings of his new light pink carnation, Alice, with orders coming in by every mail. Mr. Fisher is cutting fine flowers of this wonderfully free new variety.

Among the new stall holders at the Boston Flower Exchange are: J. R. Shield, of Woburn; J. E. Long, of Holliston; Mrs. French, of Tewksbury, and the South Shore Greenhouses. The corporation will hold its annual meeting early in October and ladies will for the first time be invited guests.

Peter Hylen, of Randolph, is cutting a grand lot of Mrs. F. King gladioli after the gladiolus flood tide has ebbed. He did particularly well early in the season with Pink Beauty which he started in pots.

The Sutermeister Estate, of Readville, has received its full consignment of Dutch bulbs, which are of a superior quality. All hands are busy getting them into flats and pans. They are cutting quantities of gladioli and asters.

Neal Boyle, of Malden, one of our rose specialists, has a fine crop of Sunburst, Ward, Richmond and Killarney. His plants all look unusually well.

Among the principal topics at the wholesale markets are the exploits of W. H. Carr and Charles E. Evans, two prominent salesmen, on a recent fishing trip to Marblehead. The first capture was a huge skate fish, which so alarmed one of the crew that Carr with difficulty prevented him from jumping overboard. The day's capture included twenty-one sculpins, ten sponge fish and two perch. Both fishermen were eager for lunch after their strenuous labors, but alas to relate, they had brought a bundle of sweaters in lieu of lunch! An 8-mile row home with the anchor dragging was somewhat enervating after a six hours' fast, and supper was never more enjoyed. The two fishermen remembered their brother salesmen with some of their catch. One recipient displayed a T wharf fish dealer's card taken from the inside of one of his fish. Both fishermen are convalescing nicely.

The Mishawum Flower Co., of Woburn, is in the market with a superior lot of Golden Glow mums, in addition to a fine lot of Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri.

Thomas F. Galvin had the decorations for the Jordan, Marsh & Co. opening September 21. It kept twenty men busily employed for two days. Among other material they used 20,000 gladioli and 600 strings of Asparagus plumosus.

J. Leach & Son, of North Easton, have started to cut a fine lot of their Pink Supreme carnation, also nice Beacon. They are still cutting superior greenhouse grown asters.

Duncan Finlayson is spending a week in New York and Washington, doing some planting at the Larz Anderson home in the latter city while there.

Local bulb dealers have received practically all their Dutch stock and are busy filling orders. The quality seems to be unusually good. French Lilium candidum averages much smaller than usual.

W. R. Morris, of Wellesley, through B. J. McGinty, is disposing of a fine cut of Richmond, Killarney and White Killarney roses, in addition to Asparagus Sprengeri.

Norris F. Comley paid $250 at the recent auction of the Boston Coöperative Market for a space adjoining William Sim's stand. W. H. Elliott has rented a space in the basement with ice chest, in addition to his stands in the regular market.

In Penn's windows at present some fine plants from the Azores of St. Nicholas pineapples, carrying ripe fruit, are a feature. Another interesting exhibit is a group of cotton plants grown north of Boston by F. H. Shumway, Melrose. They have some grand specimen plants of coleus.

At the Harvard Botanic Gardens Robert Cameron is busy putting concrete benches in some of his greenhouses. An interesting addition outside here is a new rockery. Seedling rock plants have been raised in large numbers.

A. S. Parker, of Stoneham, one of our most successful aster specialists, started last week to cut from an acre of extra fine plants. These have large flowers and long stems and come in at a time when flowers from other growers are on the wane.

Flower trade in Boston and vicinity was somewhat adversely affected by the Jewish holidays September 20 to 22. This kept quite a few buyers away from the markets.

At H. R. Comley's, on Park street, Bouvardia Humboldtii is well displayed. Mr. Comley seems to have nearly the entire output of this beautiful flower this season. Colchicums in bloom in square earthenware pans are selling well.

A. H. Hews & Co., of North Cambridge, report pot trade as brisk and they are having hard work to keep abreast of their orders.

At the last meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club William Sim gave it as his opinion that from October 12 to 15 was usually a good time in Massachusetts to house single violets.

There seems to be a little more life to business, but it is not what one would call rushing. Funeral work is plentiful. There is a considerable number of store decorations and more transient trade than for some time, but business is still far from satisfactory. The steady demand among retailers has, as yet, not arrived. The few cool days last week caused a better demand, but the warm days during the latter part of the week caused business to slacken up again. Stock is plentiful, but the prices received some days cause great worry among the growers. Roses in all varieties are in abundance; especially so are Killarneys and Richmonds. Russells hurt the sale of Beauties. The supply of Wards is large; only a few specials bring anything like a price. The lower grades have little demand even at cheap prices in thousand lots. Carnations are beginning to come in heavily. Dahlias are in heavy supply. There seems to be no let-up on gladioli and tuberose stalks. Asters are not so abundant as they were. These conditions, with the expected large consignments of chrysanthemums, will cause more worry for both the wholesalers and growers, unless conditions improve among the retailers. A few violets are coming in, but they are pale and short-stemmed. Easter lilies and valley hold their own. The supply of greens is equal to the demand.

Various Notes.

The officers of the St. Louis Florists' Club held a meeting September 18 at the home of Vice-president W. S. Wells, 4158 Flad avenue. The object of this meeting was to plan interesting meetings for the members during the coming season. A spring flower show, an entertainment, a dance and essays were talked over. Plans for increasing the membership to 150 were made. After the meeting a luncheon was served by Mrs. Wells, at which more good things for the club were talked over. A pleasant evening was spent, which will result in much benefit to the club.

The St. Louis Seed Co. has filed suit against the Boatman's bank for $70,000 damages, alleged to have been sustained when the wall of the bank building fell over on the seed company's store, at Washington avenue, a few months ago, as a result of the Missouri Athletic Club fire, which caused great damage to their fixtures and stock.

John T. Milliken. In talking of their trip, they said it was worth any man's time to pay a visit to this well-kept place.

Henry Emunds' new yellow canna, Queen Helen, is a sight to behold alongside of the other varieties of cannas, which include King Humbert. Mr. Emunds says he will have 25,000 plants of Queen Helen to sell this year.

Frank Windler and Oscar Huettemann made an automobile trip to Belleville, Ill., last week to view the pageant and visit the florists. They found the florists busy and their houses in readiness for the winter season. Brother Ogle showed them a bit of the "high life" he promised, and they enjoyed it immensely.

Alexander Johnson, at Wellston, who has about 20,000 feet of glass, has his young stock looking its best. "Alexander the Great," as he is known by his friends, says he will be in great shape this season.

Joseph Hauser, of Webster Groves, has commenced cutting his new single red dahlia, which was in such great demand last year. At present the Windler Wholesale Floral Co., to whom the cuts are consigned, clean them up daily.

Frank Buckshot, manager of the floral department of the Grand Leader, has opened the cut flower stand after the usual summer lay-off. Thousands of cut roses were disposed of at cheap prices last week. These sales will continue as long as the glut lasts.

Chas. Young, manager of the cut flower department of the C. Young & Sons Co., says that while the local trade was dull the shipping trade kept the force busy. The fall bulb business has opened up briskly with this concern.

The automobile show, which takes place next week at Forest Park Highlands, will have the usual decorations. The job this year was awarded to Mullanphy, Florist.

Floral Co., says his chrysanthemum plants, both for cut flowers and pot plants, are in better shape than ever. He will soon be cutting some of his early varieties for the local trade.

Fred C. Weber has made a great improvement in his show house at the west end of his store. When filled with decorative and blooming plants, this place will attract considerable attention.

Martin Reukauf, representing H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, had a large representation of the local trade visit him at Hotel Jefferson to look over his samples of florists' supplies. Martin's familiar phrase, "Do you get me?" was heard quite often.

Paddy Patton has hurled a challenge at Al Gumz to play for the world's pinochle championship and we thought all the pinochlists were greasing cannonballs these days.

Miss Louisa Guy, the talented daughter of E. W. Guy, took a prominent part in the Belleville pageant last week and made a great hit in the part she took.

Carl Sampson, foreman, and Geo. Schmidt, rose grower for John T. Milliken, at Crescent, Mo., have filed applications for membership in the St. Louis Florists' Club.

J. J. Karins, representing H. A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, is calling on the trade. Mr. Karins says his trip west from the convention has been a great success.

The stock of cut flowers grown by W. H. Gullett & Sons, Lincoln, Ill., will be consigned to H. G. Berning. The consignments promise to be large and of extra good quality.

E. W. Stark, president of the Stark Bros. Nurseries & Orchards Co., of Louisiana, Mo., has sent his check for $50 to the Buy-a-bale-of-cotton committee, which was applied to the purchase of an Oklahoma-grown bale.

Edward Kalisch, of Kalisch Bros. Floral Co., left September 16 for a ten days' fishing trip in Wisconsin. Mr. Kalisch is never satisfied unless he is pulling out the big fellows which are found in the northern lakes.

During the summer, plants were about

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

The improvement in the flower trade has not been so marked as was hoped for this week. The depression is caused chiefly, it would seem, by the war. People cannot tell how long the conflict may last and they seem rather loath to part with their money. This seems to be the general cry all around. Business has improved a little and September weddings are keeping us busy, but general counter trade is quiet indeed. Stock is plentiful. Asters and gladioli are more than abundant, but the "blessing of the graves," a yearly function of the Roman Catholic churches in this locality, which will take place Sunday, September 27, will just about clean up most of the outdoor stock. So far only one frost has come and little damage was done. A few good dahlias are in the market. Some extra fine sweet peas are arriving each day and sell fairly well.

Roses of all varieties are now good. Fine American Beauties are on the market and bring fair prices. Plenty of yellow roses are seen and are in good condition. Sunburst and Aaron Ward are especially fine. Extra good Kaiserin are with us and are used profusely for wedding bouquets. Valley was somewhat scarce last week, being hardly sufficient to fill orders. Chrysanthemums are still selling well and bring from $2 to $3 per dozen. There promises to be a good supply of blooms this fall. Carnations are improving and are being cut from new stock. Orchids are scarce. Cosmos, daisies, tuberoses, candytuft,

Various Notes.

Charles W. Curtis, of Irondequoit, N. Y., is cutting some good Pink Supreme carnations. In stems, size and color they are far in advance of what has been brought into the market for several weeks. He is also cutting good yellow, pink and salmon-colored snapdragons.

Visitors last week included Milton Selinka, of Schloss Bros., New York, who reports good business, and W. P. Craig, of the Robert Craig Co., Philadelphia, Pa., who is also well satisfied with his business trip.

The members of the Rochester Florists' Association have decided to hold the clambake at Aster Farm, September 25. They will go in a body to the Vick farm in Ogden, where the aster, Rochester's flower, grows in profusion. Invitations have been sent to all members and the committee has spared neither time, labor nor expense to make this event the most enjoyable and successful yet held. It is hoped every member will make a special effort to attend.

In the face of bad business conditions, the Lord & Burnham Co. reports a good month. The firm has just completed an iron-frame house, 40x183, for F. C. Hewlett, of Irondequoit, N. Y.; has commenced work on two houses, 40x200, for the Hike-Allen Co., of Cortland, N. Y., and is about to start work on William Thomas' new iron-framer, 40x150, at Barnard, N. Y. Orders have been booked for an extension to S. D. Prichard's house, at Phelps; a new pipe-frame house for David McGregor, of Rochester; two houses, 14x106, for Mrs. Sarah E. Howard, of Irondequoit; a new hot-

...THE...
Chrysanthemum
By Arthur Herrington
Formerly president Chrysanthemum Society of America.

The most complete and comprehensive work on the cultivation of the chrysanthemum that has yet been published in America. Its scope and character may be gleaned from the list of contents, which comprises chapters on composts; planting; benches, boxes or pots; general cultural details; crown and terminal buds; feeding, its object and application; care of the buds; exhibition and judging; specimen plants, plants in pots; raising from seed and hybridizing; sports; hardy chrysanthemums; chrysanthemums for south and west; insect pests and diseases; classification and selection of varieties for special purposes; history of the chrysanthemum, etc. The book will be welcomed for the lucid, comprehensive, as well as the practical character of its contents. Handsomely illustrated. 168 pages, 5x7 inches. Price 50c postpaid.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

President, Lester L. Morse, San Francisco, Cal.; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. Thirty-third annual convention, San Francisco, Cal., June, 1915.

It is the general report that this has been a big year for insecticides. Manufacturers, jobbers and seed stores all agree on it.

The death of Charles R. Koch, head of the P. B. Mingle Co., the Philadelphia seed concern, is recorded in this week's obituary column.

The new order blanks and address labels have spaces for filling in the zone. If the mailing clerk does not have to stop to look this up, the mail goes about as fast as ever.

The North of France candidum bulbs that were in warehouses when the Germans swept up on Paris now are coming to hand, shipment having followed close on the advance of the allies.

Incorporation papers have been issued to the Nowata Seed Co., of Nowata, Okla., with a capital stock of $1,500. The incorporators are A. C. McComic, D. D. Howell and E. R. Chesman, of Nowata.

It is said that the Danish crop of lily of the valley pips is increased each year, the stock having proved as satisfactory as the best German pips. Most of the Danish crop will come to America this year.

The Rudy-Patrick Seed Co., Kansas City, has removed to the northeast corner of Ninth and Santa Fe streets, where larger quarters will permit installing additional cleaning machinery and other facilities for handling increased business.

Troubles have multiplied because seeds sold by dry measure do not always conform to the varying legal weights for the quantity. All this will be avoided by selling by weight only, as already is the general practice in the trade on the Pacific coast.

No special concern is manifest over the condition of the pea crops, which are not so fine as they might be—the alarm is all on the score of the beans. Last year there was a good pea and a bad bean crop, with a similar situation this season to add to last spring's troubles.

E. S. Gunn has resigned his position as manager of the mail-order seed house of Galloway Bros.-Bowman Co., of Waterloo, Ia. He says he will rest for a while. It will be remembered that Mr. Gunn formerly was vice-president and manager of the Griswold Seed Co., Lincoln, Neb.

W. Atlee Burpee entertained eighty members of the Poor Richard Club, of Philadelphia, at Fordhook Farm, near Doylestown, September 19. Among the members of the trade present were Alexander Forbes, Charles Henry Fox, Howard M. Earl, W. F. Therkildson, A. B. Scott, Walter Van Cort and John Washburne.

That matter of germination is not the vital thing the would-be law-makers thought it was, and with increased knowledge a more reasonable trend in legislation is apparent. A planter often is better served by certain seeds of low germination than by others of much higher vitality, but the man who does not know

GIGANTEUM BULBS COMING.

All the steamers of the Canadian Pacific railway have been withdrawn from the trans-Pacific service. These steamers were chiefly relied upon for shipments of giganteum lily bulbs from Yokohama, as they make by far the fastest time to the United States. Some steamers of the Japanese lines have also been withdrawn and some delay in shipments may be expected as a consequence. The first shipments left Yokohama on the Aki Maru August 24, the Minnesota, an American boat, August 29, and the Manchuria August 29. These shipments consist of multiflorum and giganteum. They are due in New York from September 25 to October 10.

FRENCH BULBS.

The early shipments of French bulbs, prior to August 16, exceeded the total arrivals at New York for either of the preceding two years. Then for a month there were no arrivals, but the Patria, which came in from Marseilles last week, brought a big shipment. The total now reaches a record figure. Never before have there been so many French bulbs in this country as at present, and it is said there are more to come.

The shipment on the Patria was as follows:

DUTCH BULB RECEIPTS.

Not so strong as in the few weeks just past, but still in fairly good numbers, shipments of Dutch bulbs continue to arrive. The receipts through the port of New York have already exceeded those through the same port in each of the last two years. There are more bulbs on the way, and by the time the dwindling shipments of the next month have all been received this year's receipts will hold the record by several thousand cases. This is certainly the year to use all efforts to make bulbs and bulbous stock popular with the

NOT HOW CHEAP
BUT HOW GOOD

Only One

Next to sunlight is a cheerful face. The bright eye, smooth brow, the sunny smile—all tell the caliber of the man. Among your acquaintances just one man will stand out that way above all others—a regular living dispenser of good cheer. He is the fellow most missed when the black wagon comes to take him away in a wooden kimono. There is usually only one of his kind in the community—and there are many things made distinctive by lack of company in the same class. There is only one Panama Canal, only one Niagara Falls, only one New York, only one Paris, only one Japan, only one Sphinx, and in respect of most phenomena, be they cities, things or institutions, there is generally only one in each class which the world recognizes above all others as the only one. And extending this to include lily bulbs—there is only one HORSESHOE BRAND. There is no other brand just like it anywhere—none so good. Remember this—it will save you money some day.

CHINESE LILY BULBS.

Consul Maynard, at Amoy, China, has sent the following report to the State Department at Washington on narcissus bulb shipments from China:

"For some years one firm at Amoy has been the principal shipper of narcissus bulbs. These bulbs come entirely from this district, and the great bulk of the shipments go to the United States, $7,658 worth being invoiced thereto last year through this consulate. Once each year, during the month of July, one of the large Pacific Mail steamers calls at Amoy for a big shipment of narcissus bulbs to the United States direct, practically all of which are forwarded by this firm.

"Some months ago it was anticipated that the narcissus harvest this year would be a record one, but climatic and other adverse conditions have done much to damage the bulbs and reduce the quantity, and prices have greatly advanced. It is also claimed that the local buyers refuse to meet the high prices demanded by the growers, which has caused dispute and may result in shipments being held up. The matter of quality also causes dispute. In 1912 regular bulbs were worth $9.40 Mexican per thousand. (Mexican silver dollar in far east has fluctuating value, and July 1, 1914, was worth about $0.458 U. S. currency.) The price increased to $11.60 Mexican in 1913, and this year bulbs are quoted at $14.45 Mexican per thousand. These prices do not include the high transportation charges from the interior to Amoy."

WAR AND THE DUTCH BULBS.

The U. S. Department of Commerce at Washington has given out the following information on the bulb industry of Holland and the effect of the war upon it:

"Rumors have been circulating recently that the war has given almost a deathblow to the Dutch bulb trade, and that the consequence will be the greatest disappointment to those engaged in the trade.

"The growers have held a consultation, and as a result the laborers are to be paid lower wages, and it is proposed, says a correspondent, to destroy a third of the crop.

"It is certain that the war will do much damage to this branch of industry, yet whether this will be in the same proportion as in other businesses may be doubted. If we turn to the figures for last year, we find that the total export amounted to 55,000,000 pounds. It may perhaps be granted that the export to Great Britain, Germany, Russia, France and Belgium will be considerably smaller, yet the export to America will probably not be less than 11,000,000 pounds—last year it was 12,000,000—and to Scandinavia and Denmark will go another 4,400,000 pounds, which, with 2,200,000 added, say, for all other countries, makes an aggregate of 17,600,000 pounds.

"From these figures it is clear that a third of last year's total will still be exported, so that the trade will in nowise be at a standstill. The big advance which the trade has made and the good business which the dealers have enjoyed in recent years may be regarded as a support for the coming troublous times.

"Bulb shipments from the Netherlands to the United States are mostly invoiced at the American consulate general at Rotterdam, the totals for 1912 and 1913 having been in value $927,202 and $996,205, respectively. The Amsterdam consulate invoiced $63,142 and $65,580 worth during the last two years."

The department's information is, of course, a little old. The records published by The Review show that already more Holland bulbs have been brought to this country this year than in the entire season of either of the last two years.

TURKESTAN ALFALFA INFERIOR.

A warning to alfalfa growers to avoid the use of commercial Turkestan seed is contained in Bulletin No. 138, of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, which is shortly to be issued under the title, "Commercial Turkestan Alfalfa Seed."

Specialists of the department have been investigating the comparative merits of different kinds of alfalfa seeds and have reached the conclusion that there is nothing to recommend the Turkestan variety for general use in this country. It is, they say, particularly unsuited to the humid climate of the east, which, as a matter of fact, uses most of the Turkestan seed imported into this country. This seed is also not sufficiently hardy to warrant its general use in the upper Mississippi valley, where hardiness is an important factor.

At the present time, approximately one-fifth of the alfalfa seed used in the United States is imported. Of this quantity, practically all—ninety-five per cent in the last twelve months—comes from Russian Turkestan. In the European market, commercial Turkestan is the cheapest seed available; in this country its wholesale price is less than that of domestic seed.

Those who wish to avoid this variety can readily identify it by the presence of Russian knapweed seeds. These seeds have not been found anywhere except in commercial Turkestan seed, and here they are practically always present. The knapweed seeds, however, are not usually found in large quantities and any lot of alfalfa should, therefore, be examined in bulk. The examination of small samples is not sufficient to show whether the alfalfa comes from Turkestan or not.

DANISH SEED CROPS.

The seed crops in Denmark are of unusual importance this year from the fact that they come more directly than any other into competition with the crop of Germany that will be moved with difficulty, and because there still is a fortnightly service between Copenhagen and New York. Information recently to hand indicates that the Danish harvest has been proceeding as usual in spite of the mobilization of the military forces there and that shipments probably will be made at about the usual date.

From their principals at Copenhagen, Loechner & Co., New York, have the following report of crop conditions as of September 1:

"The harvest of turnip is finished and gives a normal crop of high quality. The cultures of radish have been much checked by the drought and subsequent attacks of insects. Later on rain caused a new growing period. The plants are now standing with partly ripened seed of first flowering, while the second flowering is not over. The harvest will therefore be rather difficult and we dare not count on more than half the crop.

"Of Erfurter Dwarf cauliflower, the earliest and later varieties will probably give normal crops and, as last year's crop was large, the stocks will be ample. Danish Giant, which is developing slower, has suffered from the continued drought in June and July. The crop will be small, about one-fourth of the normal.

"The result with beets is rather doubtful. The roots planted out came into growth late and have, on account of the drought in June and July, only developed rather weak seed stalks. Later on, there were strong attacks of insects, which checked the formation revolutionized the cut flower market last winter. It has brought higher prices than the best carnation, from the start to finish. They will be more sought for this year.

My Original Winter-flowering Orchid or Spencer Sweet Pea

Mr. A. C. Zvolanek, Lompoc, Cal. Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 29, 1914.

Dear Sir: We handled your Winter-flowering Orchid Peas last year in quantity. We sold nearly all of the Peas from Messrs. A. Harvey & Sons, which firm no doubt you know very well. There was nothing in the cut flower line last winter that sold more readily than the Orchid Peas. We believe that all the growers who had your Orchid-flowering Peas last winter had a most profitable crop. As you know, some of the retailers are rather slow to take up something new. After the first purchase of Orchid Peas, however, they invariably bought them in preference. * * *

THE LEO NIESSEN COMPANY.

On account of the War, I will not take any chances to ship many of my foreign orders. This will enable me to send all American orders in full of the following varieties, besides having some to spare:

Pink and White Orchid, White Orchid, Mrs. A. A. Skach (clear pink), Orchid Beauty (dark rose), Venus (white, pink blush), Mrs. M. Spanolin (white), Mrs. Jos. Manda (light pink), all, 1 oz., $4.00.
Lavender Nora, the best and largest clear lavender in cultivation, 1 oz., $1.50.

WINTER-FLOWERING SPENCER MIXTURE

This consists only of the best light pink, pink, white, salmon, lavender and very few dark. Every commercial grower should plant at least one house of these, and he will be taking no risk. 1 oz., $3.00; 4 oz., $10.00; 1 lb., $30.00. Ask for special prices on 10 lbs. or more.

You need one ounce of the Winter Orchid Sweet Pea seed for 100-foot row.

of the seeds. After the rainy period at the end of July the plants came into growth again, and the formation of the seeds has, therefore, taken place twice, which will retard the harvest and does not promise any good result.

"Cabbages will, as far as we can see, give generally a little below a normal crop, but some varieties will give more, especially on places where the attacks of insects have not been so serious.

"The summer has been rather favorable for carrots. We count on an earlier crop and an extra fine quality. Brussels sprouts have given a fine crop.

"The harvest of swedes has been finished under the best conditions. The crop, however, is only about half, because quite a few pieces were totally plowed up on account of bad wintering."

CATALOGUES RECEIVED.

Henry F. Michell Co., Philadelphia, Pa.—Two bulb catalogues, retail and wholesale, entirely distinct from each other in general arrangement, but each complete in its way. Both are fully illustrated. Besides bulbs, seeds, plants and roots, the books contain comprehensive lists of tools and other supplies for greenhouse, garden and lawn. The retail catalogue includes a list of flowering shrubs, small fruits and other nursery stock.

Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, Pa.—"New Floral Guide," comprising lists of bulbs, plants, seeds, palms and other ornamentals, roses, flowering shrubs, self-watering plant boxes, etc.; thirty-six pages, illustrated.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

Business is gradually improving and the call for all classes of stock is better. Roses and carnations are still of summer quality, and asters, dahlias, gladioli and centaureas are joining hands with the chrysanthemums, which are coming in rapidly. A few more weeks and we shall have early Paper Whites and bulbous stock. Funeral work has not been so plentiful this week, yet stock has been cleaning up well—a healthy sign.

Various Notes.

The Los Angeles Flower Market filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy September 15, after an attachment had been served by George Watson for $47.70 and another by Walter Armacost & Co., for $190. A chain of unfortunate circumstances led up to this event, which everyone in the trade regrets, for both C. E. Morton and Fred Sperry, who were the principal stockholders in the corporation, were greatly liked. Pioneer work, too far south in the city to stand the high rent, was in some measure the cause of the failure, though had the creditors given them time it is probable that all would have gone well. At any rate, it was thought best to take this step rather than fritter away what money was in the hands of the corporation in paying the small and importunate creditors and leaving the bigger ones, who were willing to wait, in the hole. There is a valuable lease to be disposed of and a lot of new fixtures, stock and supplies, so that it is thought that these will pay nearly 100 cents on the dollar, provided the book debts can be collected at all promptly. Both Mr. Morton and Mr. Sperry will be far heavier losers than any of the creditors. Mr. Morton will probably now carry out his original intention of going to Arizona to recuperate his health, which has been another drawback to business and a source of much expense.

A visit to J. B. Wagner's place at Pasadena last week proved interesting. Mr. Wagner is a specialist in rhubarb and the originator of the now famous variety which bears his name. He also grows largely edible varieties of asparagus and the many kinds of spineless cactus now on the market. The method of propagating the rhubarb is especially interesting, the roots being split up lengthwise almost like kindling wood, with a few eyes left on each. These are planted and the old portion soon decays, leaving a clean, new root, so much like a seedling that Mr. Wagner has at times some difficulty in persuading his customers that they are really divisions and not grown from seed.

A few friends, taking a trip to Ocean Park for Sunday and incidentally to call on our old friend, Leonard Kill, were having lunch in the sands, when one of the party noted that all were old Chicagoans. The party consisted of Fred Hills, Mrs. Hills and family, C. E. Morton and his wife and daughter, H. R. Richards and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Kill and Dr. and Mrs. Houghton. Mr. Kill is still in the real estate business here and has an elegant home in Ocean Park. Pleasant and jocular as ever, he looks as though southern California agreed with him. But the exceedingly pleasant day came near having a serious termination. Negotiating a bad corner near his home, Mr. Kill's car turned turtle, throwing his wife out and pinning him and his little girl underneath it. How they all escaped without serious injury is little short of miraculous, but the only injuries were a shaking up and a slight cut on Mr. Kill's face. The machine was badly smashed up.

H. Lindley, until recently manager of the flower department at Howard & Smith's, at Ninth and Olive streets, has left to go in with Smith & Dieterich in the new store at Seventh and Figueroa streets.

The call for vegetable plants at the trial grounds and nursery of the Germain Seed & Plant Co., on the Whittier road, has been heavy and taxed the growers to the utmost to keep up with it. Retail trade, both in the store and at the nursery, has picked up considerably earlier than last year.

The Aggeler & Musser Seed Co. has leased the big warehouse recently occupied by a large fruit and commission house, in the market here, giving the firm much needed additional space.

Walter Garbett, of Darling's Flower Shop, has returned from his vacation, looking as though his rest had done him good. He has had an elegant time, he says.

H. R. Richards.

TACOMA, WASH.

The Market.

The heavy rains of the last week have destroyed the outdoor flowers, thus causing a shortage of all kinds of stock. The indoor crops are not yet being cut to any great extent. Carnations are arriving only in limited quantities. Chrysanthemums have made their appearance on the market, but are of poor quality and in limited supply. Most of the white Romans and Paper Whites are now planted. Tulips and hyacinths have not arrived as yet. There will be less of this stock grown this year, as there has been an oversupply in the last two years.

Various Notes.

On a recent visit to the establishment of Van Slyke & Seamons, the crops were found to be looking fine under the care of Mr. Burton. One house of carnations looked especially promising.

The Acme Floral Co. is erecting a

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The inactivity of the summer flower trade is now a thing of the past. In every line there is a decided increase in business, and the retail florists are pleased with the prospects of the coming winter trade.

With the Panama-Pacific International Exposition so close upon us, there is no question that every retailer and every grower located about the bay will reap a harvest, and everything is in readiness to handle a large amount of trade.

At this writing the market is well supplied, particularly with greenhouse-grown stock. The new-crop carnations, while not long-stemmed, are stiff and vigorous, and there is a good supply of them in all colors except red. The reds are a little scarce, but will be more plentiful shortly.

The best Killarney roses of the season were in evidence last week. American Beauties are poor, with short stems and poor foliage. Aaron Ward is a trifle better than last week and is improving rapidly. There are not so many My Marylands as we have had in the last two weeks. Winter prices are beginning to adjust themselves on all indoor commodities. The best of the My Maryland, Enchantress and Aaron Ward retail for $1.50 per dozen. Beauties are uncertain in price.

Chrysanthemums are the leading staple of the week. We have some excellent Queens, fine long-stemmed, large-flowered Monrovia, and good Unaka; October Frost, and Rose, pink, are also plentiful. Chrysanthemums are not bringing such high prices as they did last year, nor are they in oversupply. In a month they will be at their best.

There is a plentiful supply of scabiosas and asters. White asters, how-

NEW SWEET PEA

MONROVIA

For several years this has been the best seller on the Los Angeles and other local markets, and I have decided to offer it to the trade as long as the stock lasts at $5.00 per ounce.

Monrovia begins to flower when only about one foot high and continues to bloom profusely until it reaches 8 feet high outdoors. It will make a splendid greenhouse variety, as the buds do not drop under any conditions. The color is a deep purple outside, inside heliotrope, and it is unquestionably the finest winter-blooming purple in existence. The seed has been carefully reselected from large pods only. It was gathered in April and May in the foothill section, and is consequently mature and of high germinating power. It is an exceptionally stout grower and throws long stemmed flowers all through the season, four to six flowers to the stem. This offer will be withdrawn as soon as present stock is exhausted.

ever, are scarce, as they are the best funeral commodity. There are a great many gardenias, good, large flowers, available.

Cattleyas are at a premium, and there are practically none to be had. We see here and there odd sprays of Vanda cœrulea and Epidendrum O'Brieni. Odd orchids are finding a good place in basket arrangements among our local florists, more so this season than ever before. The public is beginning to appreciate other orchids than the cattleya, of which we always have an abundance throughout the year.

A few Bermuda lilies work in well at this season. Lilium rubrum is on the decline, but there is still enough to be had.

Violets, which really are of little merit until they have received the early rains, sell well, but do not last long. There are a few cyclamens available, but

The Market.

There has been a good demand for flowers of late and storekeepers are hard pressed to fill orders, as the stock of most staple varieties has been scarce. To relieve the situation, liberal orders for chrysanthemums have been sent to California and the quality of the flowers now coming from there leaves nothing to complain of. With no local stock of mums yet in the market, the shipping in of outside flowers is unavoidable. Carnations continue scarce and of secondary quality. Roses are more plentiful than they have been and the quality improves. Asters are fine and are selling well. Of flowering plants in pots, only small quantities can be seen in stores or houses, but this stimulates the sale of ferns and other foliage plants, of which there are good numbers.

Various Notes.

Mrs. L. W. McCoy had the decorations for the fall openings in the Bon Marche and Frederick E. Nelson department stores last week. The handsome store on Third avenue is under process of renovation. Fred H. Rowe, the genial manager here, is wearing a broad smile at the prospect of increasing business.

The H. Harrington Co. has relinquished the store on Pike street and now conducts all business from the Fourth avenue establishment.

Fred Smith, of the Smith Floral Co., Tacoma, was judge of the florists' exhibit at the dahlia show here last week. Mr. Brown, of Brown Bros. & Co., Vancouver, B. C., had consented to officiate in this capacity, but word received September 16 notified the society that he was in the hospital.

Ralph D. Richardson is doing considerable business in shipping flowers and plants to outside points. His stock of carnations, chrysanthemums, etc., is looking fine in his two ranges at Brighton.

After one of the driest seasons on record, the rain is with us once more. Outside flowers were in many cases beyond recovery, but where a moderate amount of care has been taken they are looking refreshed and rejuvenated.

H. E. Richards, the West Queen Ann florist, has just completed the erection of a new store at his greenhouses on Queen Ann hill. The business here had suffered from neglect, but under Mr. Richards' careful attention a good busi-

Field Roses

It is quite within the line of possibilities that Nurserymen and Florists who depend upon a stock of ROSES FROM EUROPE will be without roses this season if that is their only source of supply. It may be that American-grown stock at fair prices will look awfully good to many of you. How would it be to engage a fair stock now, before the unusually heavy demand clean up the market on choice sorts?

SPOKANE, WASH.

The Market.

The cooler weather is bringing much more satisfactory market conditions, all the retailers reporting a decided increase in business during the last week. Chrysanthemums of splendid quality are on the market, bringing as high as $6 per dozen and finding a ready sale at that figure. Most of the mums have been California-grown stock, but good home-grown flowers are now appearing and will soon displace the California stock entirely. Roses are plentiful, with the quality in most cases good. There is a marked scarcity of carnations of all kinds, high-grade stock being unobtainable.

Various Notes.

Donart & Louis are shipping good Golden Glow from their Coeur d'Alene greenhouses. They are devoting less space to flowers than formerly and are putting in lettuce, cucumbers and tomatoes instead.

The formal openings of the New Davenport hotel and of the new Union depot of the O. W. R. & N. and Milwaukee railroads brought considerable work to the florists. Practically all the florists filled orders for congratulatory floral pieces for the hotel opening, one especially large and well executed piece coming from the Spokane Florist Co. It was a panel about 4x12 feet in size. This company also had the contract for the decoration of the depot and of the O. W. R. & N. railroad's crack train, which was open for the public's inspection. Probably the most elaborate decorations were in the crack train of the Milwaukee road, which were supplied by A. J. Burt, red roses and yellow mums being used in the cars.

Hoyt Bros. Co. boosted the interstate fair by a window display which showed a life-sized figure of a polo player mounted on a pony, the entire design being worked in flowers on a large panel. The whole effect was remarkably true to life. L. B. H.

NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

THE Hillside Nursery, at Atlantic, Ia., which was established by L. Fancolly in 1907, is now owned and managed by his son, Roy L. Fancolly.

THE Oklahoma Nurserymen's Association is holding its annual meeting this week, September 22 and 23, at the Lee Huckins hotel, Oklahoma City.

ADVERTISING men of the large Denver stores were addressed by W. G. Sutherland, head of the Sutherland Nursery, at Boulder, Colo., at a luncheon at the Adams hotel Thursday, September 17. His subject was "Selling Gardens by Mail."

ON the program of the Gulf Coast Horticultural Society's meeting at Gulfport, Miss., September 17, were the president and secretary of the Mississippi Nurserymen's Association, Theodore Bechtel, of Ocean Springs, and Prof. R. W. Harned, of Agricultural College.

PROGRAM FOR TEXAS MEETING.

The annual meeting of the Texas Nurserymen's Association will be held at Fort Worth October 14 and 15 in the auditorium of the Chamber of Commerce building. Efforts are being made to secure a large attendance, and the fact that the meeting occurs during stock show week, when there are reduced rates to Fort Worth from all points in the state, is expected to help swell the number of those present. Nurserymen of Fort Worth, with the cooperation of the Chamber of Commerce, are preparing to make the visitors' stay a pleasant one, and entertainment features are being planned by the local committee on arrangements, composed of L. J. Tackett, J. B. Baker and Secretary R. O. McCormack, of the Chamber of Commerce. It is expected that there will be a good number of exhibits of nursery stock, etc. The following tentative program has been drafted by the executive committee, which consists of President John S. Kerr, of Sherman; Will B. Munson, of Denison, and J. M. Ramsey, of Austin:

Address of welcome, J. B. Baker, Fort Worth.
Response, F. E. McGinnis, Dallas.
President's address, John S. Kerr, Sherman.
Appointment of committees.
"The Probable Effect of European Wars on Southwestern Tree Planting," J. R. Mayhew, Waxahachie.
"The Most Important Subjects Solved at the National Convention of Nurserymen Last June by Those Who Attended," J. B. Baker, C. C. Mayhew, W. B. Munson, John S. Kerr.
Special report of committee on state botanical garden of Texas, J. S. Kerr, chairman.
"In What Way Can Our Association Render a Better Service?" Mr. Locke, Jr., New Braunfels; G. A. Schattenberg, Boerne.
"The Benefits to Our Citrus and Ornamental Industries Afforded by the New Freight Rate on Balled Evergreens," W. D. Griffing, Port Arthur.
"The Leading Classes and Varieties of Nursery Stock to Be Found in the Lower Rio Grande Valley," Eltweed Pomeroy, Donna.
"In Case Burlap Becomes Prohibitive in Price and Supply, What Substitutes or Methods of Packing May Best Be Used?" John F. Sneed, Tyler; C. C. Mayhew, Sherman.
"The Value of a Publicity Organization in the Education of the People in the Work of the Nurserymen," J. M. Ramsey, Austin; R. E. Hall, Sherman.
"Coöperation of the Florists and Nurserymen of Texas," R. C. Kerr, Houston; C. E. Papworth, Fort Worth.

CEDRUS ATLANTICA.

Cedrus Atlantica is not often seen in this country save on the Pacific coast, where it grows splendidly. It is, however, fairly hardy and can be grown in a sheltered position as far north as New York. It is one of the finest evergreens, of vigorous growth, pyramidal in form, and has dense, light silvery foliage. In its native territory, the Atlas mountains of Algeria, it reaches a great height, occasionally attaining 120 feet. The specimen shown in the illustration on this page is an example of its fine form on the Pacific coast.

More commonly seen is C. Atlantica glauca, sometimes called the blue Atlantic cedar, from the steel-blue color of its leaves, not far from that of the Colorado blue spruce. This is grown in many parts of the country and is considered one of the most beautiful of the cedars. The Himalaya or Indian cedar, C. Deodara, is grown in California and in some places in the south, but the Lebanon cedar, C. Libani, is not so common.

DELIVERY OF NURSERY STOCK.

Under a contract to sell a shipment of peach trees and to "forward" them November 20, or within twenty days thereafter, the selling nursery company is held by the Alabama Supreme Court, in the recent case of Copeland vs. Union Nursery Co., 65 Southern Reporter 834, to have been required to make delivery within a reasonable time after the twenty days had expired. And the court further holds that, in order to recover the price, on the buyer refusing to receive the shipment, the company was bound to show delivery within a reasonable time, without reference to whether any delay resulted in injury to the buyer or not. Parts of the Supreme Court's opinion read as follows:

"The writing set forth in the fifth count (plaintiff's complaint) shows an obligation assumed by the plaintiff (the nursery company) to 'forward'—meaning to send or ship—the trees 'November 20, 1911, or within twenty days thereafter,' at Cordova, Ala. There is no limitation or stipulation as to the time for delivery, though, of course, as to that, the contract being silent, the law would and did require delivery within a reasonable time after the twenty days had expired.* * * Certainly the stipulation as to time * * * was a material condition in the contract, and the plaintiff could not recover unless he had complied with the stipulation as to time of delivery. Whether defendant suffered damage in consequence of failure of, or delay in, delivery of the goods was, manifestly,'' unimportant. ''A plaintiff seller cannot maintain his action against the buyer if he himself was in default in the performance of his contract, unless his default was waived by the buyer.'' S.

COLUMBUS, O.

The Market.

Trade has been rather spasmodic for the last two weeks. There is little doing, as a rule, outside of funeral work, which is rather lively at times, while at other times there is scarcely any business except a few orders for the sick. Stock is becoming a little more plentiful. Beauties are more abundant and the demand is increasing somewhat; some good stock is coming in. Roses are fairly plentiful and some good stock is to be had in nearly all varieties. Bulgarie has been especially fine lately, with good stems. Carnations are improving and it will not be long till the stems are about what they should be.

Asters are about over here and they have proved rather a sad failure in about nine cases out of ten. Lilies have been scarce lately, with a light demand. Valley has been about equal to the demand, which has been light. Mums are beginning to make their appearance, but the weather for the last few days has been more like July weather than mum weather. Gladioli are about over. Snapdragons are more plentiful and are used considerably in funeral work.

Various Notes.

The Livingston Seed Co. has been making a good showing of dahlias, etc., and also in the vegetable line.

The Munk Floral Co. is cutting some mums, and other stock is coming along nicely.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. is cutting its first roses out of the new house and the stock is in excellent shape.

Carl Knopf, son of Albert Knopf, was a recent caller here. The elder Mr. Knopf was formerly connected with the Franklin Park Floral Co., in this city, but for several years has been in Los Angeles, Cal. His son, Carl, is now a preacher and he filled the pulpit at his family's church here on his visit. He was welcomed by all of his old friends in Columbus. J. M.

they are poor in quality. The foliage particularly is undeveloped. There are not many dahlias, and Minnie Burgle is the only one worthy of comment; it sells well, although it is not lasting. We have a few Hydrangea paniculata and gloxinias.

Club Meeting.

The regular meeting of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society was postponed from the first Saturday in the month to the second Saturday, September 12, in order that the travelers might report on the convention of the S. A. F. Daniel MacRorie reported in detail on the work of securing the 1915 convention of the S. A. F., as well as the conventions of the National Association of Gardeners and of the American Association of Park Superintendents.

The convention of the S. A. F. in San Francisco in 1915 was a matter of great interest to all associated in the local craft. H. Plath, president of the society, immediately named a committee of ways and means, which beyond a doubt will show our eastern visitors that San Francisco is as much of a convention city as any in the east. Mr. Plath called the attention of the society to the good work done by John Fotheringham and Robert Newcomb.

The society also decided to give a dahlia show early in the month of October.

Among the new members admitted to the society were A. Podesta, E. Goep, M. S. Malis, H. Breen and Otto Eggers.

Various Notes.

The Art Floral Co. is doing some effective advertising by pasting rows of flower telegram orders on the windows and by displaying large fruit baskets, etc. The company reports an active trade.

Podesta & Baldocchi are featuring a basket arrangement of cactus dahlias, scabiosas and valley.

The California Seed Co. has been showing a dahlia of a beautiful orange color, known as Souvenir de Gustav Doazon. They report that they are selling a great quantity of vetch, and have booked many advance orders for Holland bulbs.

Miss Alice Eastwood, who is well versed on California native plants and shrubs, delivered an interesting lecture before the Golden Gate Park botany class on her trip through Alaska. The

Mme. Paul Dutrie (Tall). A delicate lilac-rose, reminding one of some of the beautiful soft pink Orchids.
Mrs. Jenkins (Tall). The best tall early white for massing.
Obergartner Wittig (Medium). Bright magenta, with crimson-carmine eye; large flower and truss; one of the best.
Professor Virchow (Medium). Bright carmine, overlaid with orange scarlet.
R. P. Struthers (Tall). Rosy carmine, with claret-red eye, fine.
Selma (Tall). Large flower, pale rose mauve, with claret-red eye.
Siebold (Tall). Bright vermilion-red overlaid with orange scarlet; crimson-red eye, 85 cts. per doz.; $6.00 per 100.
Sunshine (Dwarf). Large, aniline-red with crimson-red eye and light halo.
Von Hochberg (Tall). Bright French purple, one of the finest dark colored varieties. $1.00 per doz.; $7.00 per 100.
Von Lassburg (Medium). The purest white in cultivation, individual flowers larger than any other white.
Vesuvius (Dwarf). Pure red, with bright purple eye.
Price. Any of the above General Collection, except where noted, 75 cts. per doz.; $5.00 per 100; $40.00 per 1000.

New Varieties of Phlox

Europa. A white variety with very decided crimson-carmine eye; the individual flowers as well as the trusses are very large, entirely distinct.
Elizabeth Campbell. Very bright salmon-pink, with lighter shadings and dark crimson eye; an entirely new and much-wanted shade in Phlox.
Frau Anton Buchner. The finest white variety yet introduced, having the largest truss and individual flower; of dwarf habit.
Gefion. A new color in Phloxes, a tender peach-blossom pink with bright rose eye. $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100.
Manzelbrunner. A very large bright soft pink, with a large white eye.
Rynstrom. An improved form of the popular variety Pantheon; fine for massing, of a Paul Neyron Rose color.
Rosenberg. Bright reddish-violet, with blood-red eye, large truss and individual flowers as large as a silver dollar.
Rheinlander. A beautiful salmon-pink with flowers and trusses of immense size, the color of the flower is intensified by a very decided eye of a deep claret-red. $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100.
W. C. Egan. One of the best and largest flowering varieties in our collection, panicles of immense size, of a delicate pleasing soft shade of lilac which is illuminated by a large bright solferino-red eye. $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100.
Thor. Bright orange scarlet, overlaid with salmon pink with deep claret-red eye. $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100.
Widar. A splendid improvement on Edmond Rostand; in color a light reddish-violet, with very large white center, which intensifies the color.
Tragedie. Deep brilliant carmine with blood-red eye. $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100.
Wanadis. Entirely distinct, a mottling of white and light violet, reminding one of the native Phlox Divaricata Canadensis. The color is intensified by a bright reddish-purple eye, a strong grower, producing trusses of immense size. $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100.
Price. Any of the above varieties, except where noted, $1.00 per doz.; $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

Early Flowering Hardy Phloxes (P. Suffruticosa).

While this type does not contain the rich colors which are a feature of the other well-known sorts, it is invaluable on account of coming into bloom in May, or fully six weeks earlier than the others, and continuing throughout the season.
Miss Lingard. The grand, free-flowering early white.
Hercules. Bright rosy lilac.
Mrs. Dalrymple. White shaded rose; scarlet eye.
Ninon. Deep rosy lilac.
$1.00 per doz.; $7.00 per 100; $60.00 per 1000.

lecture was delivered under the auspices of the Arnold Arboretum.

Hogan, Kooyman & Co., who have been specializing on freesia bulbs during the last few weeks, reported that the commodity has sold well. A flowering bulb of Colchicum autumnalis in their window attracted much attention.

A. J. Rossi, of Pelicano, Rossi & Co., has just been appointed chairman of the Columbus day celebration in San Francisco. These annual Columbus days in San Francisco attract a great deal of interest and Mr. Rossi's association with municipal celebrations has made him one of the leading factors in local politics.

Frank Pelicano, of the same firm, is at Byron Springs. Mr. Pelicano is suffering from rheumatism.

Visitors last week were Walter Schmitz, of Schmitz & Dobner, landscape gardeners of Stockton, and F. C. Mindach, superintendent of parks, Stockton; both gentlemen were the guests of H. Plath and D. MacRorie.

H. Plath has been bringing in a holly-like fern, Cyrtomium Rochfordianum. Mr. Plath is growing an excellent lot of primulas, Roman hyacinths and ferns for the Christmas trade. He has reached home just in time to see the completion of his new greenhouses.

Gus Taylor has now opened the Union Flower Shop, at 2179 Union street. Mr. Taylor reports excellent business for the opening of his firm. Particularly worthy of mention was the decoration for the Mexican ball. Great masses of tree ferns and tropical foliage plants were used for the huge floral flag.

Canepa & Markie, who have taken over the Grant Avenue Floral Co., report a good week. Their store has been well decorated with plants of Hydrangea paniculata and displays of Lilum rubrum.

George E. Hogan, of Hogan, Kooyman & Co., surprised the trade by slipping off and getting married.

D. MacRorie has also surprised the craft by informing them of his marriage.

Patrick Orr, who has been associated with the Fairmont Floral Co. for many years, is now connected with the A. O. Stein shop. Mr. Orr is one of our most talented local florists and in Mr. Stein's newly remodeled establishment will undoubtedly make good.

Dan T. Raymond has just returned from a few weeks' outing in the Santa Clara valley. Mr. Raymond reports an active advance order trade for the Garden City Pottery Co. W. A. H.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

Considerable difficulty is being experienced by growers of dahlias in this locality in producing stock of good quality. There are far more blind eyes than have ever before been noticed, and it seems as though some sort of rot prevents the buds from opening up. The stems are so brittle that they have to be handled extremely carefully. Just what the cause of this condition is cannot be ascertained. The foliage is fine, but there is far too much of it. As a result, but little locally grown stock is to be had. In other years at about this period the market was literally swamped with dahlias, but now it is fairly hard to fill orders.

Aside from dahlias, the local market has far more fall flowers than it can readily take care of. Tuberoses are among the new arrivals, but meet with no demand. Cosmos is to be had in large quantities and is meeting with a good sale. Orchids are more plentiful; some of the finest cattleyas ever seen in this market are now to be had. The first Lilium rubrum and auratum are offered at $10 per hundred and for these there is a limited demand. The market for Easter lilies is sluggish, due to the decrease in the amount of funeral work.

Various Notes.

S. C. Briggs is sending in exceptionally fine orchids. His cattleyas, oncidiums, vandas and Dendrobium formosum are receiving favorable comment.

The Washington Florists Co. is beginning to cut some choice roses, and especially good are Russell, Shawyer and Mrs. Aaron Ward.

The Leo Niessen Co., of Baltimore and Philadelphia, last Friday, September 18, completed the transfer of the business formerly operated as the Washington Florists' Exchange, at 1214 H street, northwest. The new owners plan to greatly enlarge the scope of this business and its facilities. Albert Schnell, who has been the manager of this establishment, will continue in that position.

William Marche has returned from a trip to Philadelphia, where he made numerous purchases of stock, including palms and ferns, in preparation for his fall business.

Charles E. Meehan, of the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia, spent several days at the local store of that concern. Arthur Niessen, of the Leo Niessen Co., was also a visitor here last week.

While cranking his automobile last week, Frank Bolgiano, son of F. W. Bolgiano, broke his right wrist. He is reported to be getting along nicely.

To check what is said to be a growing tendency of business houses to omit the street and number from their addresses, First Assistant Postmaster-general Roper has issued an order to postmasters directing that hereafter mail addressed to such persons shall not be given the benefit of directory and carrier service, but shall be placed in the general delivery.

At the flower show to be held at Petworth, D. C., September 28 and 29, George W. Hess, George H. Cooke and Thomas Grant will be the judges.

HONOR TO WHOM HONOR IS DUE.

Godfrey Aschmann, the Philadelphia plantsman, at the age of 60, is as active as ever (a visit to his establishment will convince you). He is a native of Switzerland, of the right thinking, active, fiery type, and, like the Deutsche Kaiser, full of courage and ambition. He is not afraid of the combined armies of the so-called florists, and he is sure he will carry the field when other florists are down-hearted and holding back on account of hard times and afraid to invest a dollar. Godfrey Aschmann has his eyes open—he watches and looks into the future—buys up all the good stock he can get, fills his houses with the choicest and is prepared when the rush comes.

Country Fairs

are going on now. Do you wish to win a prize? Godfrey Aschmann's Novelties are always prize-winners—they never fail.

ARAUCARIA

OUR SPECIALTY

WAR ABROAD will make the Araucarias scarce this fall and winter. But look, it won't affect Godfrey Aschmann. Why? We were not afraid to invest thousands of dollars in importing the plants in the spring of 1914, hence we do not care for the war, and are prepared to fill all orders—4 houses are filled with the choice ARAUCARIA EXCELSA. We are again able to fill all orders. 5½ and 6-inch pots, 2, 3, 4, 5 years old, 14, 15, 20 to 25 in. high, well established, 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. EXCELSA GLAUCA and ROBUSTA COMPACTA, large plants, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00.

AZALEA INDICA, beautiful strong plants, full of foliage and buds, in good shape, the best commercial varieties, Christmas or Easter blooming, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00.

PALMS.

The Market.

Business, while nothing to boast of, has shown a slight improvement and many florists have disposed of large quantities of stock. Asters sold well during the week; so did roses, although the latter showed the effects of the few hot days. Carnations have made their appearance in the market, and, though small, are of good quality. A slight frost was reported by the growers in the outlying sections of the city.

Various Notes.

C. A. Bellows, of Adamsdale, Mass., declares that he will not run his carnation houses this fall.

Neil Ward, of Lonsdale, who has become famous as a prize-winner, has added two more to his list, receiving both first and second prizes for asters at the flower show held by the Rhode Island Horticultural Society in Providence.

John J. Kelley, of Valley Falls, disposed of several thousand asters during the week. Mr. Kelley has announced his candidacy for representative from his district. He has been popular in politics, serving in the council for a number of years.

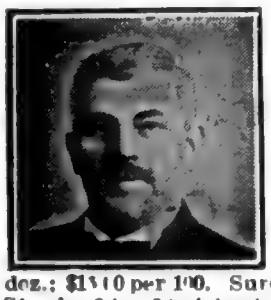
Park Commissioner Potter has returned from Europe, after a delay of several weeks.

The school children of North Attleboro held a flower show recently and made a great showing. Suitable prizes were awarded and the judges were florists in that vicinity.

W. Thornton, of F. Hoffman's force, has returned from a vacation spent in New York.

Simon Colitz, proprietor of the Rustic Flower Store, at Woonsocket, had a large wedding in that city recently, using hundreds of orchids, valley and roses.

George L. Stillman, of Westerly, was a winner at the recent dahlia show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, held in Boston. T. F. B.



AUSTIN, TEX.

The Austin Florists' Club held the largest meeting in its history September 9. A November flower show is being planned, in which only the amateurs are to receive prizes for their exhibits. The florists will do their best to increase business by staging exhibits that will show the latest ideas in designing and in house plant effects.

E. Friedrich is finishing a new greenhouse, 40x90, with iron pipe truss, cypress frame and lapped glass.

Chas. H. Alff has a great bed of chrysanthemums, closely set and putting on buds. He is hoping to win the Houston flower show prizes.

Mrs. A. J. Seiders is filling her carnation houses with Furrow's Oklahoma plants and they are fine. H. B. B.

Greenhouse Heating.

Subscribers are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. But please do not ask The Review to make a choice of apparatus for you. The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

THE FUEL MARKET.

The coal trade is not active; there is a fair volume of business, but nothing that warrants increasing production. Florists have taken in about the usual quantities of fuel this summer, but seem to be about the only ones who have done so. Consequently, a brisk demand is expected with the arrival of cold weather, but it has not started yet.

Milder weather last week took the keen edge off the smokeless market. However, the operators have been watching the market so carefully that they have not overestimated its absorptive capacity. Hence the slight recession in buying found no great amount of free coal on hand. As a consequence, the easier buying period did not bring any reduction in price. The major operators are still holding for $1.40 for mine-run and the shippers of off-grade coal are accepting $1.25 as their minimum.

HOUSES, STORE AND RESIDENCE.

Please tell us how to pipe our greenhouses so as to maintain the right temperature. We have a new greenhouse which is to be used for mixed plants and we shall want to run it at a temperature of 60 to 70 degrees. The old greenhouse, south of the new one, will be used for pansies, violets and bulbous stock and will require a temperature of 40 to 50 degrees. The salesroom, adjoining the east end of the greenhouses, will need a temperature of 60 to 70 degrees. We also wish to run hot water pipes to the kitchen and bathroom of our residence, which is connected to the salesroom by means of a porch. We expect to get a Wilks hot water heater and will place it in a shed at the west end of the new greenhouse. Please tell us the right size and number of pipes, and where to put them in order to have the best results. The outside temperature in this part of Kansas sometimes drops as low as 20 degrees below zero, but not often. M. G. A.

The sketch accompanying this inquiry shows that the new house is 20x54 feet. It is fourteen feet high to the ridge and has two feet of glass in the side walls. The old house is 16x24 feet and ten feet high to the ridge, with cement walls two and a half feet high. The salesroom is 16x18 feet, with six and a half feet of glass in the ends and one side.

MARTIN GRATE CO., 848 S. Dearborn St. CHICAGO.

CONSERVE YOUR COAL PRESERVE YOUR MONEY

WE are stanch advocates of the nation-wide movement for the conservation of all natural resources, and have designed a boiler for greenhouses that will produce the most heat at minimum amount of coal consumed. ¶ The proper placing of the tubes in the Gem City Boilers has been scientifically developed. They are so arranged that the heated gases make two complete passes through the water in the boiler shell, allowing absolute combustion of the gases, and permitting water to absorb the greatest amount of heat before finally passing into the stack. This is a decided contrast to the usual wasteful method of having gases enter the stack at a high temperature. ¶ By actual comparison, our boilers contain more tube area per horse-power than any competitor's. A steel water leg entirely surrounds the fire-box. In our boilers there are no cast-iron surfaces in contact with the fire, consequently no liability of a fractured section, a condition which is especially disastrous when occurring in cold weather, causing at least a temporary discontinuance of heat in the greenhouses, with the accompanying loss in frozen plants. ¶ Our boiler is substantially built in all details, and subjected to a hydraulic test of 150 pounds before leaving our shops. ¶ One of the prominent florists of Baltimore, Md., Mr. James Hamilton, has given us his unsolicited statement that, after installing one of our 50 horse-power boilers, he heated 40,000 square feet of glass at a 50% saving in his coal bill, as compared to the type we replaced.

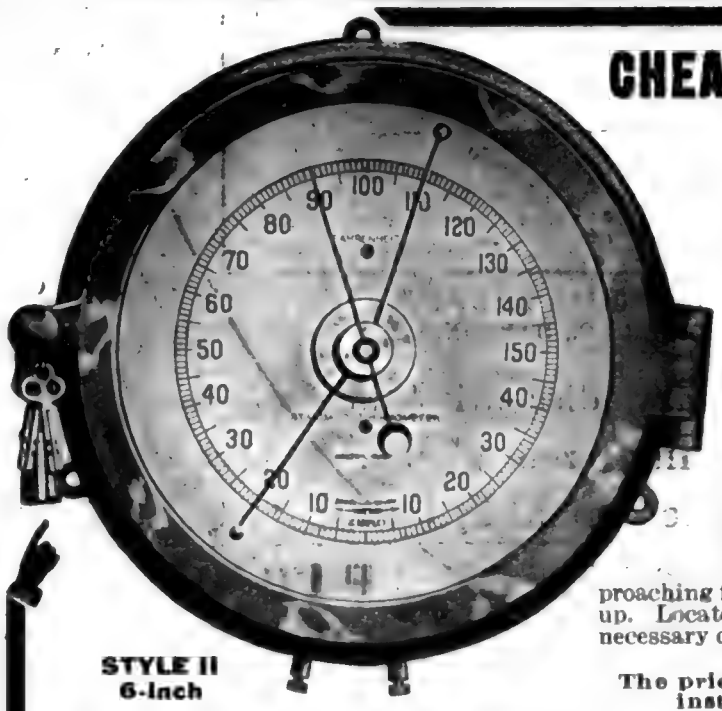
For 60 to 70 degrees in the new house, run three 2½-inch flow pipes to the east end. Place one of them four feet below the ridge and one on each of the plates. Extend the middle flow into the salesroom as a 2-inch pipe and take off a 2-inch flow from the end of the flow pipe carried on the south plate, and run it into the old house through the salesroom. For returns use ten 2-inch pipes in the new house and eight in the old house. In the new house locate three returns on each wall and connect four with the center flow pipe.



There should be two radiators, each containing sixty square feet of radiation, in the salesroom, and a 1½-inch pipe should be extended into the kitchen to supply the radiation needed there; from there a 1-inch pipe should be run into the bathroom. For use with a Wilks heater, I would advise installing some form of circulator.

CAPACITY OF BOILER.

What is the horse-power of a boiler which is eighteen feet long and five feet in diameter, and which contains forty-two 3½-inch flues and a grate surface of twenty square feet? How much glass would such a boiler take care of in this climate, in southeastern Missouri?

R. C. S.

A boiler of the size mentioned is rated at about sixty horse-power and it would handle about 5,000 square feet of radiation. The amount of glass that could be heated by the boiler would depend upon the temperature to be maintained, ranging from about 30,000 to 40,000 square feet.

How shall I pipe this house for hot water heat, in this Indiana climate? What size of pipes will be best? The house is to be used for lettuce in early winter and for cucumbers in the spring. To heat the main house, 30x75, to 55 degrees in zero weather, using hot water, I would suggest the use of three 2½-inch flow pipes and ten 2-inch returns. One of the flows should be on each of the plates and the other about three feet below the ridge. Place three returns on each wall, and the others in the walks on the sides of the beds, in two coils. INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

Trade has improved somewhat in the last week. Stock is fairly abundant and is cleaned up reasonably well. Carnations and roses are improving. Dahlias are of good quality and are becoming more plentiful.

Various Notes.

Otto Laverins, formerly with E. A. Nelson, is back from an extended trip in Germany and other parts of Europe. He has many interesting stories regarding his experiences there. The last few weeks were spent principally in trying to keep out of the German army, but he says he had a fine trip, notwithstanding all the difficulties.

Guy Reburn, of A. Henderson & Co., Chicago, called on the trade here last week. He says business is good and he is working overtime sharpening his pencil.

There were a couple of errors in my report last week of the awards at the state fair. Baur & Steinkamp won first premium for fifty flesh-colored pink carnations, instead of third as stated, and first for the fifty scarlet instead of second.

Harry Balsley, of the Detroit Flower Pot Co., spent several days with the trade last week.

A. Wiegand's Sons Co. had a serious accident last week. One of their wagons, driven by Nicholas Gentleman and David Morris, was struck by a street car, which was traveling at the rate of about thirty-five miles per hour. Both men were hurled some distance and David Morris was seriously injured, suffering from a probable fracture of the skull. Nicholas Gentleman was severely bruised, but was able to go home after being treated at the hospital. The wagon was demolished.

The Bertermann Bros. Co. was busy last week with store decorations.

Herman Junge made a flying trip to New Castle last week.

Albert Pittet is back on the job after an extended trip in the west.

The Market.

Trade continues good. The retailers find it hard to procure enough good stock to supply their customers. The demand for funeral work keeps up well. Nearly all the outdoor stock is gone. A few asters and gladioli are still to be had, but they are poor. Roses are good, but not enough are coming in to supply the demand. Carnations are scarce. The flowers are fairly good, but the stems are short.

Pot plants are daily increasing in popularity, Owing to the shortage in cut flowers, all the retailers are pushing potted plants. Several of the stores have had window decorations of Primula obconica, begonias and cyclamens.

Various Notes.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Ernst are receiving congratulations on the arrival of a boy. Both mother and baby are doing well.

His friends are alarmed over the illness of Joe Wood, for eighteen years one of the night firemen of the Park Floral Co. He is at present in the County hospital and little hope is entertained for his recovery.

Visitors during the last week included A. Gardner, of Greeley, Colo.

The regular monthly meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held September 9, in Pembroke hall, with President Henry Gaut in the chair. Angus McGregor was elected to active membership.

J. W. Everitt, James Duthie and Angus McGregor were judges of the monthly exhibits and the awards were as follows: First prizes to Harry Jones for twelve mixed asters, to Alfred Walker for twelve mixed gladioli and to George Ashworth for one muskmelon. Harry Jones received a cultural certificate for a vase of Gladiolus America.

The schedule for the chrysanthemum show, October 29 and 30, was read and adopted. John W. Everitt was appointed as manager of the dahlia show, to be held October 6.

The exhibits at the next meeting, October 14, will be three bunches of outdoor grapes in three varieties, twelve apples in two varieties and six pears, one variety. Harry Jones, Sec'y.

Club Meeting.

At the September meeting of the Lancaster County Florists' Club, Thursday evening, September 17, there was a good attendance of members. Charles F. Edgar's paper on "The Florists' Business from a Retailer's Point of View" was full of strong points and brought out a lively discussion. Albert M. Herr gave an interesting report of his trip to Boston to the S. A. F. convention. He was most favorably impressed with a bed of the new My Maryland geranium and also spoke enthusiastically of the wonderful new gladioli shown. Alice, Peter Fisher's new pink carnation, looked to him like a winner and one of the coming commercial pinks.

President B. F. Barr spoke on the coming flower show, to be held November 6 and 7, as also did members of the committee. The auditorium has been leased and everything points to a most interesting exhibition at that time. At the next meeting, October 15, Elmer Weaver will speak on "Greenhouse Construction" and H. A. Schroyer will speak on "Commercial Chrysanthemums." Thursday, October 15, the members of the club will visit W. B. Girvin, at Leola, to inspect his new house erected by the King Construction Co., leaving Centre square by trolley at 3:30 p. m. T. J. Nolan spoke briefly on his S. A. F. Boston experiences, as also did D. J. Keohane, of H. F. Michell Co., Philadelphia.

Various Notes.

The fashion show, which means the united fall openings of our stores, brought out some fine decorations and benefited the florists in general.

Robert M. Rittenhouse, for many years in the employ of H. A. Schroyer, died from typhoid fever September 13.

B. F. Barr & Co. will have an elaborate display at the Lancaster county fair September 29 and 30 and October 1 and 2. H. K. R.

Hillsboro, Ill.—J. A. Wibe is entertaining his sister, Miss Margaret Wibe, who is making her first visit to this country. She will return to Denmark after a stay of several months.

Rando Brand of Fertilizers

NATURE IMPROVED

Without a doubt the best Carnations and Roses are produced by the liberal use of commercial fertilizers as compared with barnyard manures.

Judging from points—size of blooms, length and strength of stem, keeping qualities—through commercial fertilizer, the highest mark of perfection has been reached, and it's no secret.

You should improve barnyard manure with an added mixture of RANDO FERTILIZERS. Why not produce excellent flowers and in greater quantities? That's what makes greenhouses a bigger paying proposition.

A LOAD OF MANURE IN 100-LB. BAG

2000 lbs. of barnyard manure contain on an average about:
10 to 15 lbs. Nitrogen
5 to 9 lbs. Phosphoric Acid
10 to 15 lbs. Potash.

In Rando's Commercial Fertilizers these elements can be controlled at will.
Easier to Handle—Easier to Apply
Sanitary and Economical

To control Rapidity of Plant Growth, Crop Growth, Size and Strength of Stems, you must buy commercial fertilizers. Prices determined on analysis. Guaranteed and Inspected. An artificial fertilizer adds more profit, which cannot be had any other way.

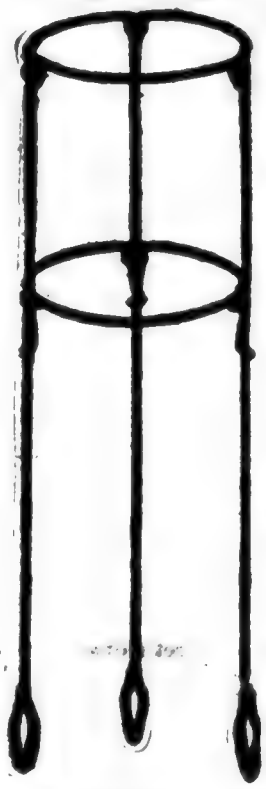
FREDERICK, MD.

The lack of a public flower garden in Frederick, Md., was the subject of much comment at the reception tendered by Frank C. Hargett, of this city, to a number of florists, horticulturists and prominent people of Frederick and the surrounding country. The occasion was the opening of a garden at his home. For some time past Mr. Hargett has been working on this scheme and with the aid of a number of large growers, who contributed a large proportion of the plants and flowers on display, he demonstrated what could be done along this line under exceptional difficulties.



The grounds were decorated with electric lights and in the center of a large bed was an electric fountain. The displays were many; among the contributors were Peter Henderson & Co., New York; Richard Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co., White Marsh, Md.; W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia; Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, Pa.; Henry F. Michell Co., Philadelphia; A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn.; Robert Craig Co., Philadelphia; John Cook, Baltimore, Md.; Gude Bros Co., Washington, D. C.; Henry Bester & Sons, Hagerstown, Md.; Jesse P. King, Mt. Airy, Md.; David Groff, Frederick, Md.; George W. Hess, superintendent United States Botanical Gardens, and the Department of Agriculture.

The opening address was made by Hon. Milton O. Urner, who introduced William F. Gude, as the master of ceremonies. F. L. Mulford, of the Department of Agriculture; George W. Hess; Prof. Bert W. Anspon, in charge of the floriculture and landscape gardening departments of the Maryland Agricultural College; Dr. Joseph H. Apple, president of Hood College; Dr. C. T. Forester and Prof. Sidney Stabler made addresses during the evening.

Those in the receiving party were Mr. and Mrs. William F. Gude, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Vincent, Jr., F. L. Mulford, Geo. Hess, Dr. Stabler, Prof. and Mrs. Sidney Stabler, Prof. Anspon, Jesse King, Robert Creager, of Thurmont, Md., and Harry Chapline.

The workroom for the greenhouse should always be placed between it and the garage, so that the gasoline and oil fumes will not reach the plants. The cellar for the heating plant ought to be under the workroom, so there will be no possibility of gasoline leaking down and becoming ignited.

Greenhouse and Garage Combinations—Their Practical Side

ECONOMY was the first factor that prompted the linking of the two. Economy in construction. Economy in heating. There is always a saving when buildings for differing purposes can be adjoined when constructed. There's a saving in both labor and materials.

No garage is complete that is not heated. The greenhouse, of course, must be; so the one heating plant answers the purpose of both, with much less coal consumption than for separate plants.

Then there also enters the advantage of grouping your buildings as compactly as possible, and the planning for their location and treatment, so as little future alterations as possible of your ground layout will be necessary—another economy well worth considering.

In addition to the building and equipping of the greenhouse, we will also erect the workroom and garage, and fully equip either or both, if you wish. If you already have a garage and want us to build a workroom and greenhouse to adjoin it, we will be glad to do that for you.

All the materials are, so far as possible, prepared at our factory, so they will go together on your grounds quickly. This is particularly the case with the greenhouse.

Perhaps quite the most satisfactory way is to give us a blanket contract covering all the work, and then you can hold us responsible for everything. It simplifies matters and generally works out satisfactorily to all.

Before coming to any direct conclusions however, it would be well to let us go into the details thoroughly with you

"We go anywhere for business." Or to talk business.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Last week the weather turned quite warm and greatly affected the quality of much of the stock, and it also brought in an increased supply, which has flooded the market again. The demand for stock was about the same as for the week previous. Prices are generally low, but shipping business is good.

The rose supply was greatly increased last week and seemed to meet a correspondingly poor market. Killarney, and other varieties quickly affected by heat, suffered greatly. Aster receipts are heavy and in excess of the market requirements. Gladioli also are in heavy supply. Both Lilium giganteum and L. rubrum are plentiful. Other offerings include dahlias, cosmos, lily of the valley and orchids. The supply of green goods is adequate for present needs.

Various Notes.

C. E. Critchell reports an active shipping business.

L. H. Kyrk was in receipt of two shipments last week, neither of which bore any mark or trace of the identity of the consignor.

The Bloomhurst Floral Co. has been sending in some of the finest carnations the market has received.

P. J. Olinger is due to return from Emerado, N. D., this week.

Visitors: A. Miller, representing A. Henderson & Co., Chicago; T. L. Metcalfe, of Hopkinsville, Ky., who has stores in Clarksville, Jackson and Union City, Tenn., and Madisonville, Ky.

C. H. H.

DOVER, N. H.

H. E. Meader is building a storehouse for gladiolus bulbs. A large and varied exhibit of his gladioli at the Dover public library is attracting much attention.

C. L. Howe has just installed a new 60-horse-power boiler, making five in all which are required to heat his large range.

Chas. A. Davis took first prize for the best decorated automobile in the recent old home week celebration and parade. The floats of C. L. Howe and of the W. H. Elliott Rose Co., of Madbury, were particularly attractive, also.

PLANT TUBS

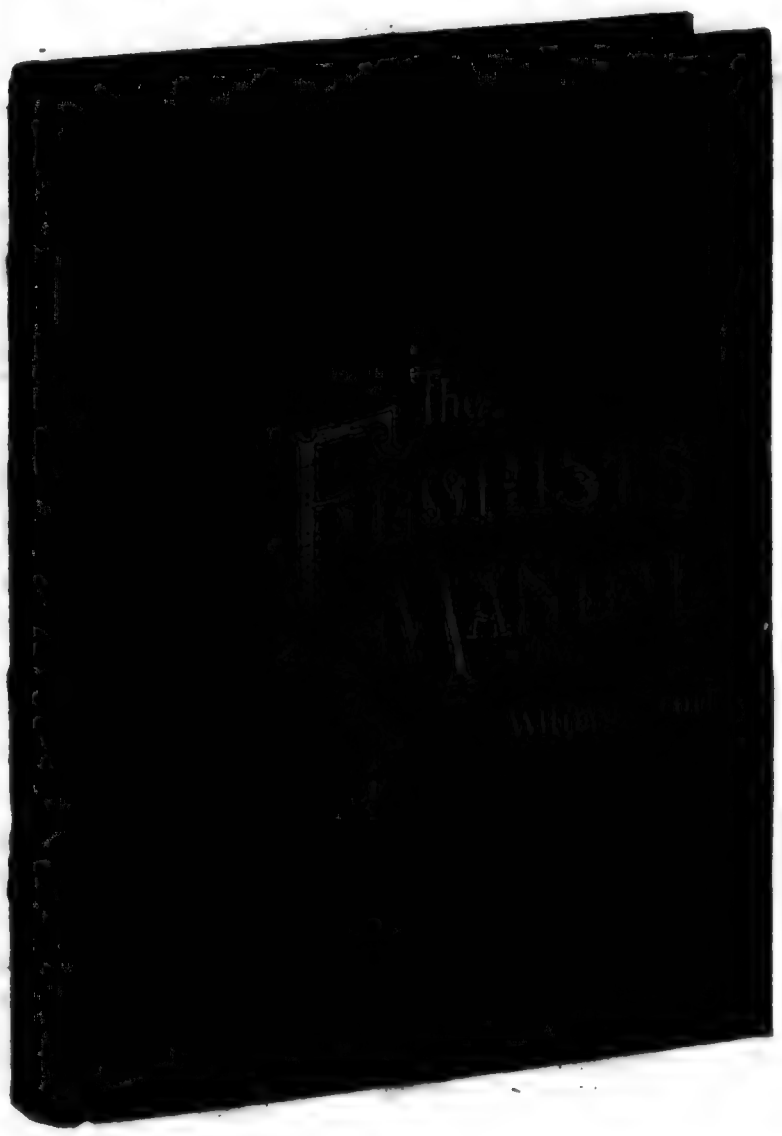
LARGE COLEUS FOR SPRING.



Please tell me about how large coleus will get by spring if started from slips about the middle of September and kept at a temperature of about 60 to 70 degrees. Is there a good sale for coleus of this size in the spring? F. C. F.

Coleus, if rooted about the middle of September, kept potted along and given a temperature of 60 to 70 degrees, will make good-sized plants in 5-inch or 6-inch pots before bedding-out time arrives. I have never found much call for plants of this size and doubt if it would pay you to grow them. Coleus is a rapid growing plant, and I am sure it will pay you much better to have a large supply in 3-inch or, at the outside, 4-inch pots for your customers rather than to grow larger ones. C. W.

THE NEW REVIEW MAKES A BIG HIT

Last week's issue of The Review, the first in the new magazine style of binding, with its striking cover, made an instantaneous hit—it was recognized that the new Review is so much the most attractive paper the trade ever has had that the wonder is it was not done before. The response has been a surprise, nearly every letter mentioning the improvement, readers and advertisers alike commending it. "The Review is in a class by itself" is the general verdict.

APPROVAL of the new Review — the magazine style trade paper — was to have been expected; the improvement was so apparent that it could not be otherwise than appreciated. But that the response should have been so prompt and so general was a surprise to the publishers, who never forget that each person is too intent on his own tribulations or triumphs to give much heed to his neighbor's sorrows or successes.

That congratulations should come by mail, by telephone, even by telegraph, was of course a source of gratification. It showed, not only that the change was noted and approved, but that The Review holds a place close to the hearts of its readers. You don't offer felicitations to the man you do not feel you know.

And the effect of the change in make-up already is beginning to be apparent in the circulation department. It seems sure no one will want to get along without the new Review — the pressroom order for 12,000 copies soon will have to be increased.

By Wire.

It is impossible to print all the letters that have come — or even the whole of the ones first to hand— but it is permitted to print the first telegram, for it came from a live wire. As follows:

Congratulations on your improved, impressive, pleasing journal. It sure is a winner.—Sprinkleproof.

"Good cover on this week's issue," writes E. F. Winterson. Pollworth, at Milwaukee, in sending an ad, says: "We like the new appearance of the paper and hope we are still in line for a cover space." "I congratulate The Review on its new dress," says Benj. Connell, of Merchantville, N. J., and "We are much pleased with the new style," says Stumpp & Walter Co., New York.

Three-quarters Better.

One reader, a grower, with a greenhouseman's sense of exactness, undertakes to measure the improvement: "I want to say a word about your latest Review," writes Joseph Kohout, of Libertyville, Ill.; "the covers improve the appearance of the paper seventy-five per cent; it looks like a 25-cent magazine now."

The Question of Color.

As was to have been expected, not all those who like the new paper approve the color of the cover. "The Review is much improved by the new binding, but I think green more appropriate than yellow for the cover," writes J. L. Johnson, of De Kalb, Ill. The John C. Moninger Co., Chicago, says:

"The new paper came today and we wish to compliment you on its general make-up. The new binding is a step forward. We wish you much success in this new dress and believe it is going to pay you handsomely. The only thing we did not like was the color. It seems you should have used some sort of pale green in keeping with the business, but the color you are using is certainly serviceable."

In this connection it may be worth while to state that it is widely recognized that yellow and black make the most striking of color combinations. These colors were chosen for the benefit of those whose ads appear on the covers, as well as to make it possible to identify The Review at a glance. The printing shows up vastly better on yellow than on any shade of green. We know, because we tried them all before deciding.

This cover stock was made to order. We have only two and a half tons of it, and the next batch probably will be a little more on the buff, as the mill did not quite get the tone we were after on this first lot.

Index and Contents.

But cover and binding were not the only changes in last week's Review. "The paper is much improved; we like the new table of contents; the only thing better would be to print it on the cover," write Hammerschmidt & Clark, Medina, O. At Auburn, R. I., the same feature impresses, for Chester R. Cranston writes:

"I thank you for the big improvement in The Review. Not only is the binding better, but by printing the Index to Advertisers and the Table of Contents on the front pages you have made the paper more serviceable to both subscribers and advertisers. You deserve all of your success."

In a Class by Itself.

J. W. Jones, foreman of the Phipps Conservatories, Schenley Park, Pittsburgh, comments: "The new fall dress is very becoming and a very progressive step; also, having the Index to Advertisements and Table of Contents on pages 2 and 3 is a great improvement. The Review now certainly deserves being classed by itself."

But J. P. Siebold, Lancaster, Pa., says: "How about it? I will tell you. The Review always deserved to be classed by itself. Today it is incomparable with any other trade journal."

Time a Factor.

Although trade papers in other lines

HOW PATRONS CAN HELP

Weekly trade papers in most lines of business require a full seven days' notice to insert, discontinue or alter an advertisement.

The Review has required only 24 hours!

Again, that's service.

But it will not be possible to publish a weekly magazine at daily newspaper speed without the cooperation of patrons.

If the bulk of the copy keeps coming on the day forms close—well, it may become necessary to close earlier.

Give us all the time you can.

usually take a full week for type-setting, printing, binding and mailing, The Review does the work in forty-eight hours. With everything turned in at 5 p. m. Tuesday, the paper is printed Wednesday, running all night, bound and mailed Thursday.

But everybody knows you can't grow a long-stemmed, fancy rose in the time it takes to grow a short one.

Of course the new magazine style of trade paper is slower to produce than the old pamphlet style. The big covering machine, though it completes a copy every three and one-half seconds, must run twelve uninterrupted hours on each edition.

The Review does not wish to advance its publication hour because of the change in style. But it is essential, with so large an edition to be printed and posted to catch trains, that printing begin early on Wednesday. It can't so begin if all the ads come in at the eleventh hour. Type-setting takes time, lots of it.

Advertisers will confer a favor on the publishers, and assist themselves to prompt service, if they send in copy as early as possible—not always at the last minute.

A CHANGE IN FASHIONS.

It is suggested that in Great Britain and France this year, those showy tulips, Keiserskroon and Prince of Austria, will be less popular than usual, but that Belle Alliance (syn. Waterloo), with a new significance, will be a favorite. As regards lilies of the valley, Berlin variety, it is not likely now to be imported into England, though the "retarded" kind might appeal to those who believe in omens. A new interest will attach to the hyacinth known as King of the Belgians, but above all other hyacinths the rose-red Victory and the Paix de l'Europe, with pure white bells, will be grown by all patriots who can afford to help to "keep trade normal," as the British slogan runs.

RETAIL STORE MANAGEMENT

WHAT THE LEADERS IN THE TRADE ARE DOING

HOW ABOUT THE PUBLIC?

"There has been a great deal said about sending flowers by wire, but not a word as to how it is done," writes a florist in a good-sized town in Canada. "Won't you instruct us on this matter?"

The Review has contended times without number that the trade expression, "Flowers by telegraph," is not understood by the public and therefore does not bring business the way a more comprehensive statement would. If, after all these years, a florist of good standing does not know how to send "flowers by telegraph," what can be expected of the great body of the public? Elementary English is a good thing to use in ads.

RIBBONS AND CHIFFONS.

The war in Europe has as yet had little affect on the ribbon market, but it has caused a flurry in chiffons, which are nearly all of French manufacture. American mills can make as good chiffons as the French, but they do not care to manufacture the cheaper grades, which are so largely used by florists. If the war is of long duration there will be first a shortage and then an adequate supply of chiffons at higher prices. The demand for ribbons has not increased, among florists, so fast as has the demand for chiffons. The latter make more show for less money and the stores catering to low-price trade use large quantities of chiffons but few ribbons. On the other hand, the best stores use ribbons almost exclusively, considering chiffons too cheap for their trade. There are plenty of ribbons. Most of the staples are of American manufacture and the war has affected them only in the sentimental way it has affected many other articles of purely domestic character. Also, most of the ribbon houses had received their French novelties before the war broke out.

WRITING ADVERTISEMENTS.

In advertising an article the talking points are of greater importance than preparing the text of the advertisement. Get hold of something to say before you worry over typography or composition.

Analyze your merchandise; pick out its features of superiority, then describe what articles you intend advertising, brilliantly if you can, in commonplace if you must, but simply and concisely.

Don't waste space on a word that is not either part of some selling argument or quickly introductory thereto. A poor introduction is worse than none at all.

You must adapt your style to varying conditions and readers. Try to visualize your advertisement before putting pen to paper. If necessary draw a diagram, put in display lines where they will do the most good and then write your text to fit.

Harry Quint, of Boston, on Vacation.

The proper headline is worth generally as much as all the rest of the advertisement. Make it tell the whole story if you can; at any rate get into it some mention of the goods to be advertised, says an experienced advertising manager.

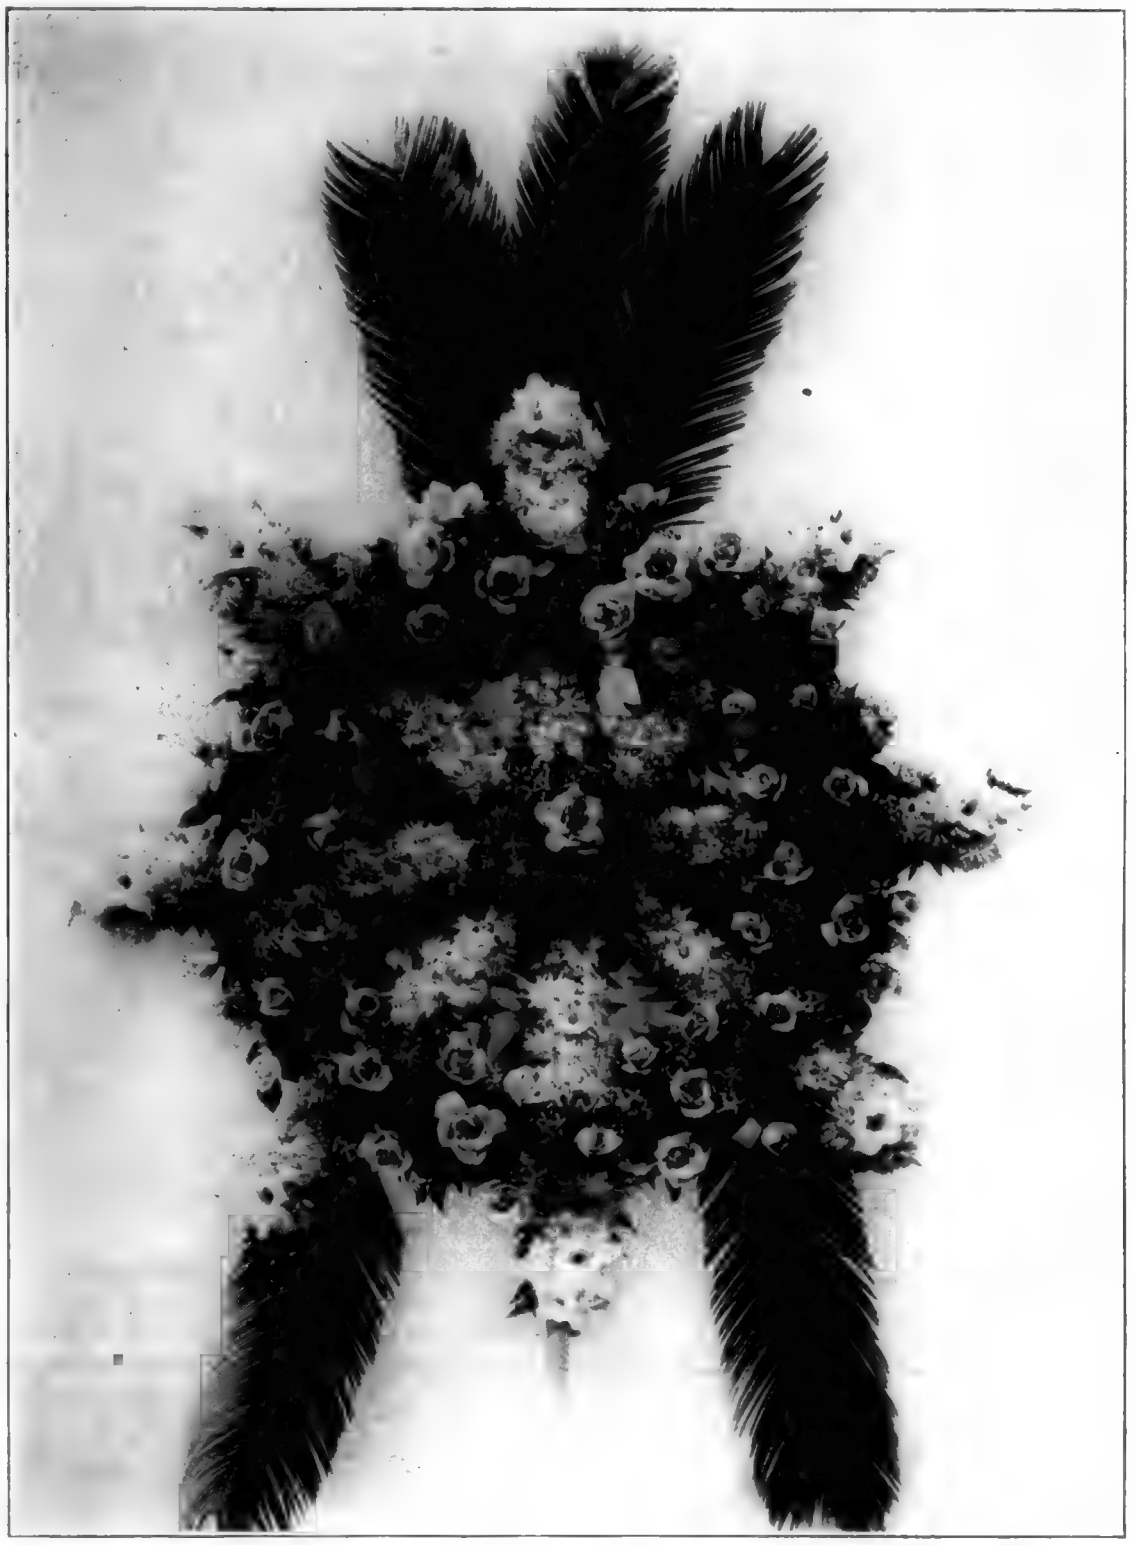
If two or more lines in an advertisement are used, be careful that they have some sequence in themselves, so that in case the eye takes in no other part of the advertisement, the headlines alone may give some hint as to what the advertisement is about.

Each man must work out his own salvation as to the style of wording. Style cannot be taught, but it can be guided and improved by studying good examples. All the power lies in brevity and clearness, and these qualities come from the choice of the right words. The simplest words are never wrong, but never be merely flippant. Treat your public precisely as you would treat some casual acquaintance on whom you wish to make a good impression.

You may be learned and dignified or you may be witty and interesting, but never be foolish, and never lose sight of the fact that the same good taste that you would display before a gathering of sensible and refined people should always be evident in advertising.

If you cannot think of anything good to say about some particular article, say nothing. Arguments that do not appeal to you as plain and forcible are not likely to affect your readers more favorably.

Don't try to "say it all" in one advertisement. Use no more of your argument than will quite easily go into the prescribed space. There will be other days and other editions. Leave some of your ammunition for the next round.



CAUGHT BY THE CAMERA.

The camera caught Harry Quint in a pretty attitude while he was on his late vacation at Old Orchard Beach, Me. Mr. Quint is still a single man, but may not remain so much longer. He is now busy overhauling his new store, at 199 Tremont street, where business continues good. He already has plan for a vacation of a more extended character in 1915, which will take in the San Francisco exposition, the Panama and other sights on the American continent.

FOR A SEA-CAPTAIN'S FUNERAL.

While some efforts to indicate the calling of the deceased in funeral pieces are clumsy and consequently inartistic, others, which have for a basis objects which more readily lend themselves to floral representation, are as comely and artistic as any florists' design. The symmetry of a steam-boat's wheel makes it well adapted to reproduction in flowers, and it is for this reason that the funeral design shown in the accompanying illustration proved so successful a one. This was furnished for the funeral of a retired steamboat captain by Fischer & McGrath, of New Castle, Pa. The wheel was five feet in diameter and, with the easel, measured seven feet in height. Roses, carnations, asters and gladioli were used in its construction, and Clematis paniculata was used for spraying in.

Ship's Wheel in Flowers, by Fischer & McGrath, New Castle, Pa.

MOLLY AND THE MOTORS.

We are frequently reminded that this is the motor age. Although this is not true in the fullest sense, there is no doubt but what the horse and horse-drawn vehicle are being gradually discarded in favor of the automobile in all industries. This change is particularly noticeable in the florists' trade.

The more or less general transference of the burdens of the horse to the motor truck and delivery automobile has its pathetic side, which many of us fail to realize or pass by lightly in the rush to secure more modern and efficient delivery equipment.

A case in point is that of Molly, an old mare owned by Sam Pearce in Jefferson. This faithful animal has seen her best days, having been a valuable asset to the florist's business in years gone by. She is now relieved from all responsibility by a big Nelson-Le Moon motor truck and spends her declining years in idle ease staked out to pasture in close proximity to the new Pearce range on Higgins avenue in Chicago.

Mr. Pearce has a small boy who sometimes rides or drives Molly down to Jefferson. He was recently asked by a neighbor's son why his father kept the old mare around the place, since there was nothing any more for her to do. "Well," said the lad, "we're keeping Molly for services rendered." The expression had been picked up by the boy from casual remarks of his father which had been overheard.

According to Mr. Pearce, he is a little worried over the fact that Molly doesn't seem to pick up any weight under these ideal conditions. He says she has the run of a good pasture and the exclusive use of a barn with plenty of feed and he can't understand why the old horse is not fat and sleek.

Meanwhile the animal remains the pet of the Pearce family and the thought of disposing of Molly seems never to have entered Sam's head.

ROMAN HYACINTHS.

Are Roman hyacinths profitable to grow for the wholesale market, and when should they be planted to bloom at Christmas? E. O. C.

Roman hyacinths are most useful and, as a general rule, are profitable bulbs to grow for cut flowers for the wholesale market, selling particularly well from December 1 until February 1. Sometimes they sell quite well for two months later. Grow them in flats the same as Paper Whites, sixty bulbs to a flat. While Paper Whites, after planting and watering, need no covering of ashes or loam, the Roman hyacinths are better covered three or four inches until they are sprouted two or three inches. They cannot be forced into flower quite so early in the season as Paper Whites, but once well sprouted they soon come into flower and you can get a crop for Christmas provided the bulbs are already planted. C. W.

WINTERING CANTERBURY BELLS.

Will you kindly give me some information in regard to Campanula Medium, or Canterbury bells, which I have planted quite extensively for sale in the spring of 1915? I have them planted in rows and they are growing rather thickly. Can I let them stand and lift them in the spring, or should I transplant them this fall? Should great care be taken as to the quantity of soil that is lifted with them? They now stand six inches apart. I have been transplanting more or less of late and the plants seem to grow well. I understand that, after blooming next spring, the plants will be of no further use. You will notice that I am located in the vicinity of Boston. H. H. R.

You will find that Canterbury bells where you are located are liable to rot in winter when kept outdoors, especially when covered heavily before the ground freezes up. While they will winter in the open if on a gentle slope and moderately mulched, I would strongly advise lifting them now and planting them in coldframes. It is better to take a ball with the plants, as they then recover quickly from the shift. Give the plants rather more space than they had outdoors, as they will grow considerably yet. Soak well after planting and spray occasionally until wilting ceases. Keep the plants fully exposed to the weather until the ground starts to freeze up; then cover the Canterbury bells with perfectly dry leaves and place sashes over them. Ventilate on all warm days and uncover about the middle of March, when the plants should be as fresh as when covered.

Canterbury bells are biennials and are of no use after flowering. If you prefer to try to keep your plants outdoors over winter, do the necessary thinning and transplanting at once and keep them well cultivated for some weeks yet. C. W.

LONG MAY IT WAVE.

So many photographs of automobiles, natural and decorated, reach The Review that, if all were printed, there would be little room for other illustrations. The feature that saves the photograph reproduced herewith is that the occupants of the vehicle are a family of widely known but modest florists, whose pictures probably never before have appeared in print. The driver is Herbert Hildesheim and at his left sits his father, Max Hildesheim, the two being the active spirits of the Imperial Seed & Plant Co., the Shellroad Greenhouses, Grange, Md., a business which was established in 1877.

The car was decorated for participation in the parade at the time of the Star Spangled Banner celebration in Baltimore, and was awarded third prize out of twenty-four. In the back seat is Miss Hilda Hildesheim, with J. Klein and Mrs. D. Jaecks, the group representing Uncle Sam, Columbia and My Maryland.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Begonia Gloire de Chatelaine.

With a shortage of azaleas a possibility there is likely to be an improved call for other flowering plants the coming winter. In addition to Lorraine and Cincinnati begonias and such new varieties as Florence Davenport and Melior, there is another variety of French introduction—one of Lemoine's, I believe—which should be far more widely grown both as a pot plant and for bedding purposes; it is B. Gloire de Chatelaine. The color is a rich pink. The plant is bushy in habit. It can be propagated with the greatest ease and is never out of flower. A well known grower of my acquaintance told me that he retailed his plants in 6-inch pots at $2 and $2.50 each for Christmas, which is as much as Lorraine would bring. For bedding purposes it is distinctly superior to all others of the fibrous-rooted section.

Peonies.

While it is much too early yet to plant the majority of hardy perennials, the peonies do far better if divided and replanted early in autumn. Planted thus early, good sized divisions will bloom quite well the following summer. Peonies, like all other perennials, delight in a deeply trenched and well manured piece of ground. I have also found it a good plan to add some quarter-inch bone to the soil. The benefit from this will be more apparent the second than the first year after planting. Be sure not to cover the crowns too deeply. On the other hand, insufficient covering will mean their upheaval by successive freezings and thawings in late winter, unless the plants are well mulched. A covering of four inches over the crowns will be found about right.

Planting Iris.

All the iris family do better if planted early; especially is this true of the German and Japanese sections. I have had even better results in planting these from the middle to the end of August than in September, but the present month will give good results. All these irises need well drained ground in winter. The Japanese section enjoys a semi-aquatic life until after flowering, but continuous wet feet in winter will cause rotting. Divided and planted carefully now, irises will become well established before freezing-up weather arrives.

Primulas for the Holidays.

While primulas will continue to make splendid growth in coldframes for some time, it is time to house a good batch in order to have them nicely in flower for the holidays. Select colored varieties for this purpose, both of the Chinese and obconica types. Give them a bench, or even a shelf, in a house where a minimum temperature of 50 degrees is maintained and they will carry a nice lot of bloom before Christmas. The Sinensis type will not stand such strong sunshine as will obconica and for this reason it should have a position where a little shade can be afforded for a few weeks longer.

Primula Malacoides.

If seeds of Primula malacoides were sown early in July, as advised, they should be in 4-inch pots and ready for a shift into 6-inch pots or pans. Use a light, moderately rich compost. Keep the plants in frames for five or six weeks longer; then give them a light, airy and cool house. Sown thus late, the plants are moderate in size and less subject to the rot which affects early sown and larger plants. This is the most beautiful of all our winter-blooming primulas for table and other decorations and it jumped into great favor last winter. It is of such easy culture that no one should be without it.

Poinsettias.

Any late propagated poinsettias should be made up into pans at once. Use a few small ferns, cyperus or Asparagus plumosus in making up these pans. As nights from this time on will get much cooler, care must be taken not to subject the plants to low temperatures. A fall in temperature, accompanied by careless watering, will soon cause a loss of foliage. The plants will do well for a while longer in a minimum temperature of 50 to 55 degrees, but as soon as the bracts show, increase the heat to 60 degrees and keep it at that figure until the bracts are well developed, when the temperature can be gradually lowered a few degrees.

Cyclamens.

It is always nice to have a good batch of cyclamens for Christmas and, in some cases, quite presentable plants carrying a few blooms may be had as early as Thanksgiving. The demand at the latter holiday, however, is more for cut flowers than for plants. To have as many flowers open as possible, the plants must have a light, sunny house, be near the glass, and have a night temperature of 52 to 55 degrees. Do not keep them any warmer than this, or the foliage will suffer. With the plants well established in the pots, a little feeding with weak liquid manure will be found of much benefit. Plants for later flowering are better kept in coldframes or a cool, airy house some time longer. Do not omit an occasional spraying or fumigation to keep the plants clean.

Begonias.

This is the season of really rapid growth with Lorraine and Cincinnati begonias. Water them carefully, remembering that it is safer to go on the dry side from this time on. If a plant once becomes overwatered it is a difficult matter to get it back into health again. Some time will now be needed to give the plants all their necessary supports. These should be light, painted green, and as inconspicuous as possible. Take this staking in hand at once, if nothing has been done so far, as when left too long it means increased labor and more or less injury to the plants. An average minimum of 60 degrees will suit these begonias. Some are already flowering moderately and an abundance will be available for Thanksgiving.

A Florist Family Ready for the Star Spangled Banner Parade at Baltimore.

Florists of Saginaw and Bay City Gathered for their Annual Outing on Neutral Territory.

Freesias.

Give the earliest batch of freesias a shelf in a carnation or other house, where it will be 52 to 54 degrees at night. Keep them well watered and give the necessary supports in good season. A large proportion of the freesias, treated thus, should flower by Christmas, at which time they always bring excellent prices. Any bulbs left over should be planted at once, as they only fritter away their strength in paper bags. Deep pans or half pots are splendid for freesias; as many as fifty can be grown in a 10-inch pan.

MICHIGAN FLORISTS' OUTING.

The annual outing of the florists of Saginaw and Bay City was held September 16 on the banks of the beautiful Saginaw river, midway between the two cities. There was an attendance of about sixty and the affair was one of the most enjoyable the east Michigan florists ever have enjoyed. As usual when the two cities get together, the feature of the day was baseball. Two games were played, Saginaw winning both, 12 to 7 in the morning and 13 to 3 in the afternoon. Walter Mott was umpire.

Bloomington, Ill.—The repairs on the exterior of the greenhouses of Hempstead & Callahan are about completed. The interior remodeling was done earlier in the summer.

Houston, Tex.—Florists of Houston expect to make the first annual flower show of the Texas Florists' Association especially strong, as the dates set for it, November 12 to 15, are the latter part of Yo-Tsu-Oh week, when the deep water celebration is expected to bring thousands of visitors to this city.

SINGLE VIOLETS.

Do not house any single violets until they have had one or two freezings. It is not wise to subject them to much frost, but minimums of 28 to 26 degrees are not in any way harmful. They check the rank leaf growth and the plants, when housed, start away to flower freely at once. Trim away all runners before lifting them and thus lessen the labor as much as possible at planting. As a general rule the middle of October is sufficiently early to lift single violets, but at more northerly points and southerly points it can be done earlier and later.

SPOT DISEASE OF VIOLETS.

I have a lot of California violets that formerly were doing well, but of late a yellow spot has appeared on some of the leaves. It seems to dry up and rot right through the leaves, causing the whole plant to wither. I am sending you one of the affected leaves. If you can tell me what the trouble is and suggest a remedy, it will be greatly appreciated. R. L.

The leaves were badly affected by the spot disease. Double violets are more delicate and more susceptible to this disease than singles. The latter, owing to their greater vigor and hardiness, are less subject to disease, but do sometimes fall a prey to it. Once the disease has become rife, there is really no cure. When it first appears, picking off the affected leaves closely helps to check it. Spraying with Bordeaux mixture or other anti-fungoid preparations will help a good deal, however, especially if applied just as soon as the trouble shows, or even before. The violets are less liable to be attacked if fresh stock is propagated and planted out each season than if old plants are carried over. If your stock is badly diseased, get rid of it all and buy some new plants, which can be got reasonably at this season. Plant Princess of Wales; you will find it a vastly superior variety to California, which is now comparatively little grown. C. W.

MEALY BUG ON COLEUS.

Will you please tell me how to get rid of what I take to be mealy bug on my coleus plants? It looks like white fuzz on the plants and is in the form of spots about one-eighth of an inch in diameter, or larger. Is there any danger of its getting onto carnations, etc?
C. S. L.

A good pressure of cold water from a spray nozzle attached to the hose is the best way to clean out the mealy bug. Lay the plants on their sides, in order to reach the pests better. You cannot well use any insecticides sufficiently strong to kill the bug without injuring the plants also. Mealy bug does not trouble carnations much; it prefers a hot, moist house, and such plants as hoyas, ixoras, crotons, dracænas, stephanotis, gardenias and many others are often badly attacked. A force of water, carefully directed, will keep it within bounds. On plants with smooth, tough leaves an insecticide can be used with perfect safety. C. W.

BY WAY OF NOVELTY.

At a recent show in London, Liatris pycnostachya was prominent among the masses of hardy flowers. It is a striking subject and should be a popular plant. The peculiarity of liatris in opening its flowers from the extremity instead of from the base, as is usual with spiked flowers, is a point of interest that, if brought to the notice of clients, is calculated to induce them to purchase it, for most people like to have plants that possess some unusual characteristic or distinctive feature.

La Fayette, Ill.—The new greenhouse, 28x200 feet, at the Inglewood Nursery is now completed and is filled with carnations and chrysanthemums.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

NO BUDS ON SAINTS' DAY MUMS.

I have a large quantity of chrysanthemums, which are looking well, but the buds have not made any appearance yet. What should I do for them? How large is the average size of buds October 1? The chrysanthemums are All Saints' day bloomers, and I am located in New Orleans. C. R.

It is difficult, with the meager information given, to say definitely why the mums have not yet made any buds. Possibly they were planted late and, in consequence, have not yet reached the point of making bud. I note C. R. says they are All Saints' day bloomers, by which I infer he means varieties that should be in bloom November 1. In order to be sure of making this date with such a variety as Mrs. Robinson, which I understand is grown in New Orleans more than any other one variety, I think the bud should show by the first week in September. It takes, on an average, from eight to ten weeks to develop a flower after bud is taken, and C. R. can figure just about where he is with regard to getting his crop by All Saints' day. When we used to grow Robinson, years ago, we would take our buds from August 18 to 20 and have them in condition to be cut about October 18. Some varieties will take a longer period than this, particularly where an early crown bud is used. In the case of F. S. Vallis, we have had buds twelve weeks or even longer before they attained their full development. Buds should be showing color October 14 to have them in good condition by the end of the month. It is hardly possible that C. R. has his mums planted in soil rich in nitrogen, but if he has, this is causing them to make the phenomenal growth. If this is the case, the only thing to do is to dry the plants off, in order to give them a check which will cause them to be thrown into bud.

LEAF-MINERS ON MUMS.

Enclosed you will find a chrysanthemum leaf. On examining it, you will find some small worms between the upper and lower parts of the leaf. Is the brown spot on the leaf caused by the worms, or is it some kind of disease? The leaves start to turn brown at the edges, but they do not all contain worms. If it is a disease, I should like to know how to check it. If it is caused by an insect, I should like to know what kind of insect it is.

J. E. S.

The worm found between the inner and outer skin of the leaf is a form of tephritis, a near relative of the celery leaf-miner. There is no way I know of to destroy this pest except by squeezing the worm between the thumb and finger. Enclosed as it is, between the two skins of the leaf, there is no insecticide strong enough to reach it without injury to the leaf. I have heard several complaints from different sections of the country regarding the prevalence of this pest, but it never seems to get particularly serious. The discoloration of the leaf is caused by this worm sucking out the chlorophyll, or greenish coloring matter, in the leaf, leaving nothing but the skin. I note that J. E. S. is using Bordeaux on the leaves, and would say that there is nothing better for the average leaf diseases. Chas. H. Totty.

INSECTS IN THE MUM HOUSE.

We, like other florists, are bothered by mealy bugs, but I think that we have more than our share. Our chrysanthemums are their favorite victims. We keep the pests pretty well under subjection by means of coal oil emulsion and lemon oil. We also use nicotine occasionally. We can kill the bugs with these remedies, but not the little white flies that deposit the eggs. Sometimes we think we have them all under our thumb, but the next morning there is a fresh supply of bugs. Of course, our ventilators are all open and the bugs appear to come in from the outside. We find them on the coleus plants in the yard. How can we get rid of them?

C. F. C.

One thing to be observed about a greenhouse is that all weeds or any other plants that may be a harbor for insects should be cut down and cleaned away. This is particularly the case with reference to the thrips family, which are such persistent enemies of roses and carnations. I mention this because C. F. C. states that the white flies appear to come in through the ventilators, and I believe they do. The only way to positively exterminate the white fly is by persistent use of cyanide gas; the directions for using this have appeared repeatedly in the columns of The Review.

The white fly is entirely distinct from the mealy bug, although C. F. C. seems to have the two confused. It has been stated by men who have studied the question that a reasonable fumigation will kill the adult insects, but that the eggs hatch out so frequently that there is a new crop every day to take the place of the ones destroyed.

News from Abroad

Marseilles, France.—The immortelles are following the bulbs from Ollioules, moving earlier than usual.

Hamburg, Germany.—August Hohman & Söhne, valley exporters, are sending their business associates throughout the world official translations of the German White-book, "How Russia and Her Ruler Betrayed Germany's Confidence and Thereby Caused the European War."

London, England.—W. Cuthbertson, head of one of the largest seed houses in Scotland and chairman of the Horticultural Trades Association of Great Britain, is quoted as having said September 8: "I think I state the case pretty accurately when I say that generally since the declaration of war the nursery and seed business has been badly hit and business has dropped off twenty-five to fifty per cent. Some sections are coming back towards normal, for example, the flower trade in Covent Garden. I was told so yesterday by Geo. Monro."

London, England.—At the annual meeting of the Horticultural Trades Association of Great Britain and Ireland, held September 8, it was reported that the Dutch growers had canceled every order for bulbs placed in this country, including a large number to Guernsey, but that some of them had refused to allow cancellations by British firms for bulbs and other goods from Holland. It was resolved to publish an official advertisement instructing members to carefully preserve all evidence and correspondence on this subject with a view to future action by the association. W. Cuthbertson was reëlected president.

Somergem, Belgium.—The Haerens Co., azalea specialist, has notified its foreign customers and agents that it expects to fill all advance orders, shipping via Holland.

Liverpool, England.—The British government is insuring all trans-Atlantic shipments of English seeds and nursery stock, the rate in the latter part of September being only two and one-half per cent, with the probability of an early reduction.

Darmstadt, Germany.—It is expected here that the Rhine soon will be open for traffic, as happened during the Franco-Prussian war of 1870-71, with the result that the grass seed crops of Baden and the Rhein province will find their way to Rotterdam.

Ghent, Belgium.—The Ghent steamers are again sailing to London, and plants can be exported to Great Britain; also to the United States, via Ghent to Rotterdam and Rotterdam to New York. The azaleas are of excellent quality this year. They have made splendid growth and are exceptionally well budded.

London, England.—Trading with the enemy has been forbidden by the government. A trade paper reports that "attempts are being made to introduce German products to England via Holland, and it is said that a Dutch firm is trying to sell statice, ruscus, beech foliage, wax, and cape flowers, prepared or made in Germany, to the British seed trade. We feel that only exposure is needed to defeat this and that our readers, when they once know the origin of the articles named, will promptly decide to manage without them."

DUTCH BULBS

HOW TO HANDLE THEM.

Late Tulips.

Do not overlook a few of the late tulips. These do not force so easily as the early section, but have much longer stems and bring better prices in the market. They cannot, however, be bought so cheaply as the early ones, except in a few cases. Here are a few cheap and useful May-flowering or cottage varieties for culture in flats: Bouton d'Or, golden yellow; Gesneriana spathulata, rich scarlet; Picotee, white, margined pink; Golden Crown, yellow edged red. The grandest of the late tulips, however, are the Darwins. Some of these force well, notably Pride of Haarlem, carmine pink, which I have seen with 24-inch stems in January. One or two other fine sorts are: Gretchen, pink; Wedding Veil, white shaded lilac; Clara Butt, rich apple blossom, a lovely color; Mme. Krelage, bright pink; Lord Duncan, carmine red.

Narcissi.

Narcissi for cutting far exceed in value all other Dutch bulbs and from the time the first yellow trumpets are in, which usually is Christmas, until the last poeticus and double gardenia-scented have passed, some five months have elapsed. The best single narcissi are Golden Spur, Emperor, Victoria, Princeps maximus, Silver Spur and Trumpet major, among the large trumpets. In the short trumpets, Sir Watkin, poeticus ornatus, Campernel rugulosus and Barri conspicuus are cheap and good. Of the doubles, Von Sion, while a big, coarse flower, still has a large sale. Sulphur Phœnix is a beautiful flower with a delicious odor, good for later blooming. The old alba plena odorata, often seen at Memorial day, is one that cannot be forced.

In addition to the well known Paper Whites, belonging to the polyanthus narcissus section, Grand Monarque, Grand Primo and Bazelman major are fine for pot culture or cutting. The poetaz narcissi are getting cheaper each year and, either in pots, pans or outdoors, are satisfactory. A good quartette are: Irene, sulphur yellow; Alsace, white; Aspasia, white, yellow cup; Elvira, white, yellow eye. This race of narcissi, the results from crossing N. poeticus on polyanthus narcissus, is perfectly hardy and increases splendidly outdoors.

Iris Hispanica.

[illegible] bulbs of Iris Hispanica need flats fiv[illegible] six inches deep. As they start to [illegible]w quickly, they must not be covered [illegible]ke tulips or narcissi, but can have light [illegible]all the time. In addition to being grown in flats, they are useful for planting [illegible] benches in any cool house and make a valuable spring and early summer crop. Good sorts are: Louise, beautiful light blue; Cajanus, golden yellow; Count of Nassau, dark blue; British Queen, pure white; Blanche Fleur, pure white, earlier than British Queen.

Gladioli.

The value of the nanus section of gladioli is being more appreciated each year. They succeed finely in flats containing four inches of soil, and, like the iris, they need no covering of coal ashes or loam. Colvillei alba The Bride, with pure white flowers, should prove of special value if a valley shortage develops. Blushing Bride, white with crimson blotches, has more vigor than The Bride and is a most satisfactory sort; Peach Blossom, of a beautiful pink color, is the most popular of all these early gladioli and forces extremely well; Mathilde, white flushed lilac, is a most beautiful variety. For Memorial day trade Ackermanni, orange red, will be found a satisfactory sort to grow.

Judge the Tree by Its Fruit

Kindly omit my advertisement of Smilax, as one (1) insertion in the Classified department did the work.

Miscellaneous Bulbs.

There are a number of miscellaneous bulbs which are eagerly bought by up-to-date florists. Some of the best are: Ixias, of which craterioides major and Wonder are the best. These and sparaxis do well in 6-inch pots of somewhat sandy soil in a cool greenhouse. Tritonia crocata and babianas can be similarly grown, doing well either in pots or pans. Ranunculi do well dotted in the benches of a cool house. They are useful to fill up gaps when violets have died out, but they must have a low temperature. The anemones, such as fulgens, coronaria The Bride and St. Brigid, can be grown like ranunculi. There always are critical customers who would much prefer a small bunch of any of these last mentioned bulbs to a larger one of the more robust and more easily grown bulbs, such as tulips, narcissi and hyacinths. Many growers may have no use for them, but some few specialists find they pay well, and growers who want a little change might do worse than try a small batch of one or two of them.

PAPER WHITE NARCISSI.

How often should I plant bulbs of Paper White narcissi to have some in bloom at all times, in a temperature of 50 degrees at night and 75 degrees in the day? If the flats are brought into the house the second week in November, will they be in bloom for Christmas? The location is Alabama. How many bulbs should be set in a 5-inch or 6-inch pot? E. O. C.

Paper White narcissi in the temperature you name may be had in flower, if necessary, early in November. They can be retarded until the early part of April, but usually with the abundance of other bulbous flowers they are not in much demand after the middle of March. There is no advantage in delaying the planting of the bulbs after this date; they only waste their strength when out of the soil, and if you have the floor of a cold cellar to stand them on they can be held back quite late.

If housed November 15 they would flower for Christmas. Later on they come along more quickly. Bulbs are more profitably grown in flats containing four to five inches of soil than in pots. A flat 5x12x24 will contain sixty to seventy-five bulbs. C. W.

SULPHUR PHŒNIX NARCISSI.

I want to plant some Sulphur Phœnix narcissi this fall, and, as I have never had any experience with them, I should like to know the best way to handle them. I want part of them to bloom about May 1 and the balance about May 18. How deeply should they be covered, and how long will it take to force them into bloom? J. E. S.

If you want Sulphur Phœnix narcissi from May 1 to 18, it will not be a question of forcing, but of retarding them until so late a date. This narcissus will flower in the open in your Pennsylvania climate from May 5 to 10. Therefore, to keep it back when grown in flats, a really cold cellar is necessary to retard it. Place the bulbs in flats four to five inches deep; one 12x24 will hold sixty to seventy-five bulbs. Merely cover the bulbs with soil. Keep them outdoors until the end of November, giving the flats a coating of coal ashes or sand. You can, if desired, place them in a dug-out, cover well with soil and later protect with straw or leaves and keep out all winter. I think you would do well to plant at least half your bulbs outdoors, covering them four inches deep. Then you are fairly certain to have the flowers when wanted in May.

There is another double narcissus, N. alba plena odorata, commonly called the gardenia-scented narcissus, which would bloom with you from May 15 to Memorial day outdoors. This is a valuable commercial sort. The bulbs need a deep soil, one which does not dry out too much, or many of the buds will not open. For a florist who can grow it, this is the most valuable of all narcissi for Memorial day trade. C. W.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS.

The outdoor trade exhibit of 1913 continues to interest the Minneapolis public and, as the signs are retained, the exhibitors must benefit by it. The garden is, at the time of writing these notes, still attractive, there having been no frost to cut down the cannas, which make a fine showing. The aquatic pond is well filled. The nymphæas are attractive, but are crowded by the water hyacinth. Dreer's Cardinal climber has covered the arches and is full of bud and bloom. Their varieties of cannas, Undine, Wm. Bates, Louisiana, Allemania, Comte de Bouchard, Burbank and Karl Kelsey, are immense. The last named variety is over eight feet tall. Eulalias and pennisetums have grown like weeds. The bed of Canna Beacon, by the Conard & Jones Co., is a brilliant torch of color. A. T. Boddington has cannas Gustav Gumpper, Pres. Meyer and King Humbert; Farquhar & Co., gladioli; Vaughan, cannas and assorted stock. Holm & Olson keep up their display, which they realize is one of the best ads they can have. The park commissioners have grand beds of Celosia Pride of Castle Gould, giving a variety and richness of color. The grass is kept close and the beds clean.

J. E. Matthewson, of Sheboygan, Wis., is making preparations for a good fall trade. Dutch bulbs are fine; azaleas are promised, but not yet in sight. The store, with one of McCray's special refrigerators, is made quite attractive under the supervision of J. E. Matthewson, Jr.

The Farmer Seed & Nursery Co., of Faribault, Minn., is working on the new catalogue. Stocks are coming in nicely and prospects are for a good season. The Review in magazine form is to be given a place in the office library.

A. H. McDonald, formerly of Cincinnati and Kansas City, will open a most up-to-date flower shop for the department store of Gimbel Bros., Milwaukee, Monday, October 5. Backed by the store's standing and facilities, Mr. McDonald expects to do a large volume of business.

L. L. May & Co., of St. Paul, are receiving reports from their travelers that merchants are conservative in placing advance seed orders. Their farmer customers are holding their stocks for higher prices and holding up the merchant instead of paying promptly, as has been the custom in recent years. Holm & Olson are working on a catalogue to be even more elaborate than the one of this year. Business warrants it. The three White cars are giving entire satisfaction.

L. L. Olds Seed Co., of Madison, Wis., has things running smoothly in the fine new building of steel and concrete, with every facility for handling the large business with convenience and dispatch.

The Haentze Co., of Fond du Lac, Wis., considers Pres. W. R. Smith the best outdoor summer rose, with Maryland for a companion. They have cut continuously. Even now there is a strong crop. W. M.

BOSTON.

The Market.

It is safe to say that last week was one of the most trying the wholesale markets have had in a long time. This was caused in a large measure by the intense heat. The maximum temperatures of 90, 92, 94 and 87 degrees were officially recorded in Boston on the four consecutive days including September 21 to 24; the worst experienced since the same days of the month in 1895. Quotations were such, for several days, that the markets might almost as well have been closed. For an example, 10,000 roses in good variety, with stems up to twenty inches, sold for $7.50; 500 carnations went for 50 cents, and so on.

Happily, we now have bracing, cool weather. Prices have stiffened and growers have again taken courage. Roses had a hard week and many thousands were wasted. At present, Taft and Killarney Queen are in rather short supply. There is a particularly good call for Cecile Brunner, Ophelia, Russell, Hadley and Sunburst. The newer or scarcer the rose, the more it seems to be wanted. Carnations are coming in more heavily, but prices continue low. Violets are arriving, but as yet only one or two growers are sending them in. Golden Glow chrysanthemums are abundant. Prices on these vary from 50 cents to $2 per dozen, the average being about $1. Asters, thanks to the continued dry weather, continue abundant and good, with prices low. Gladioli are dwindling and prices on these are a little better. Valley sells as well as anything on the market.

Dahlias are seen on some stands, but do not meet with much favor, nor does cosmos. Some indoor sweet peas are already arriving and, with a probable valley famine, white sweet peas should be in demand. The call for green stock shows an improvement.

Pot plant trade is starting up. Crotons, dracænas, araucarias and nephrolepis are good sellers.

Various Notes.

McAlpine & McDonald are cutting a fine lot of Cecile Brunner roses. This rose is popular here for use in corsages and boutonnieres. They have a fine lot of Ophelia coming in and are cutting Double White Killarney and Sunburst of extra quality, in addition to their Black Beauty.

John McFarland has a good lot of valley and it is selling particularly well. His poinsettias, gardenias and chrysanthemums are all coming along splendidly.

The Boston Cut Flower Co. had several good decorations for fall openings of the big drygoods stores. At Gilchrist's 5,000 of Tracy's gladioli, also long-stemmed Beauties and Ophelias, were used in quantity. Business is reported as improving nicely.

At the next meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, October 20, L. W. C. Tuthill, of New York, will lecture on "Advertising, the Spark Plug of Business." Chrysanthemums will be shown by several local growers.

Wm. H. Elliott is cutting a fine lot of Miller, Hadley, Sunburst, Ward, Kaiserin and Killarney Queen roses at Madbury. A. R. Hatsen, the head salesman, says he does not remember a season when roses were of better quality, or the demand for them poorer. His experience seems to be general.

Thomas Roland has been cutting Cypripedium insigne for several weeks. He was the first to ship them into the local market this season. He is having a good call for crotons, araucarias, colored dracænas and other decorative plants.

Until September 27 we had barely one-hundredth of an inch of rain in September. Last week's intense heat intensified the drought, which was by far the worst of the year. Soaking rains are needed at once, or there will be serious losses among trees and shrubs.

Robert Montgomery's rose houses never looked better than at present. He is a careful grower and turns out a splendid lot of flowers. His varieties are Richmond, Killarney Queen, Killarney, White Killarney, Russell, Hadley, Ward and Sunburst.

Carter's Tested Seeds, Inc., reports Dutch bulbs as selling well. Rumors have been circulated to the effect that W. J. Collins has severed his connection with this concern. Mr. Collins says this is entirely devoid of foundation.

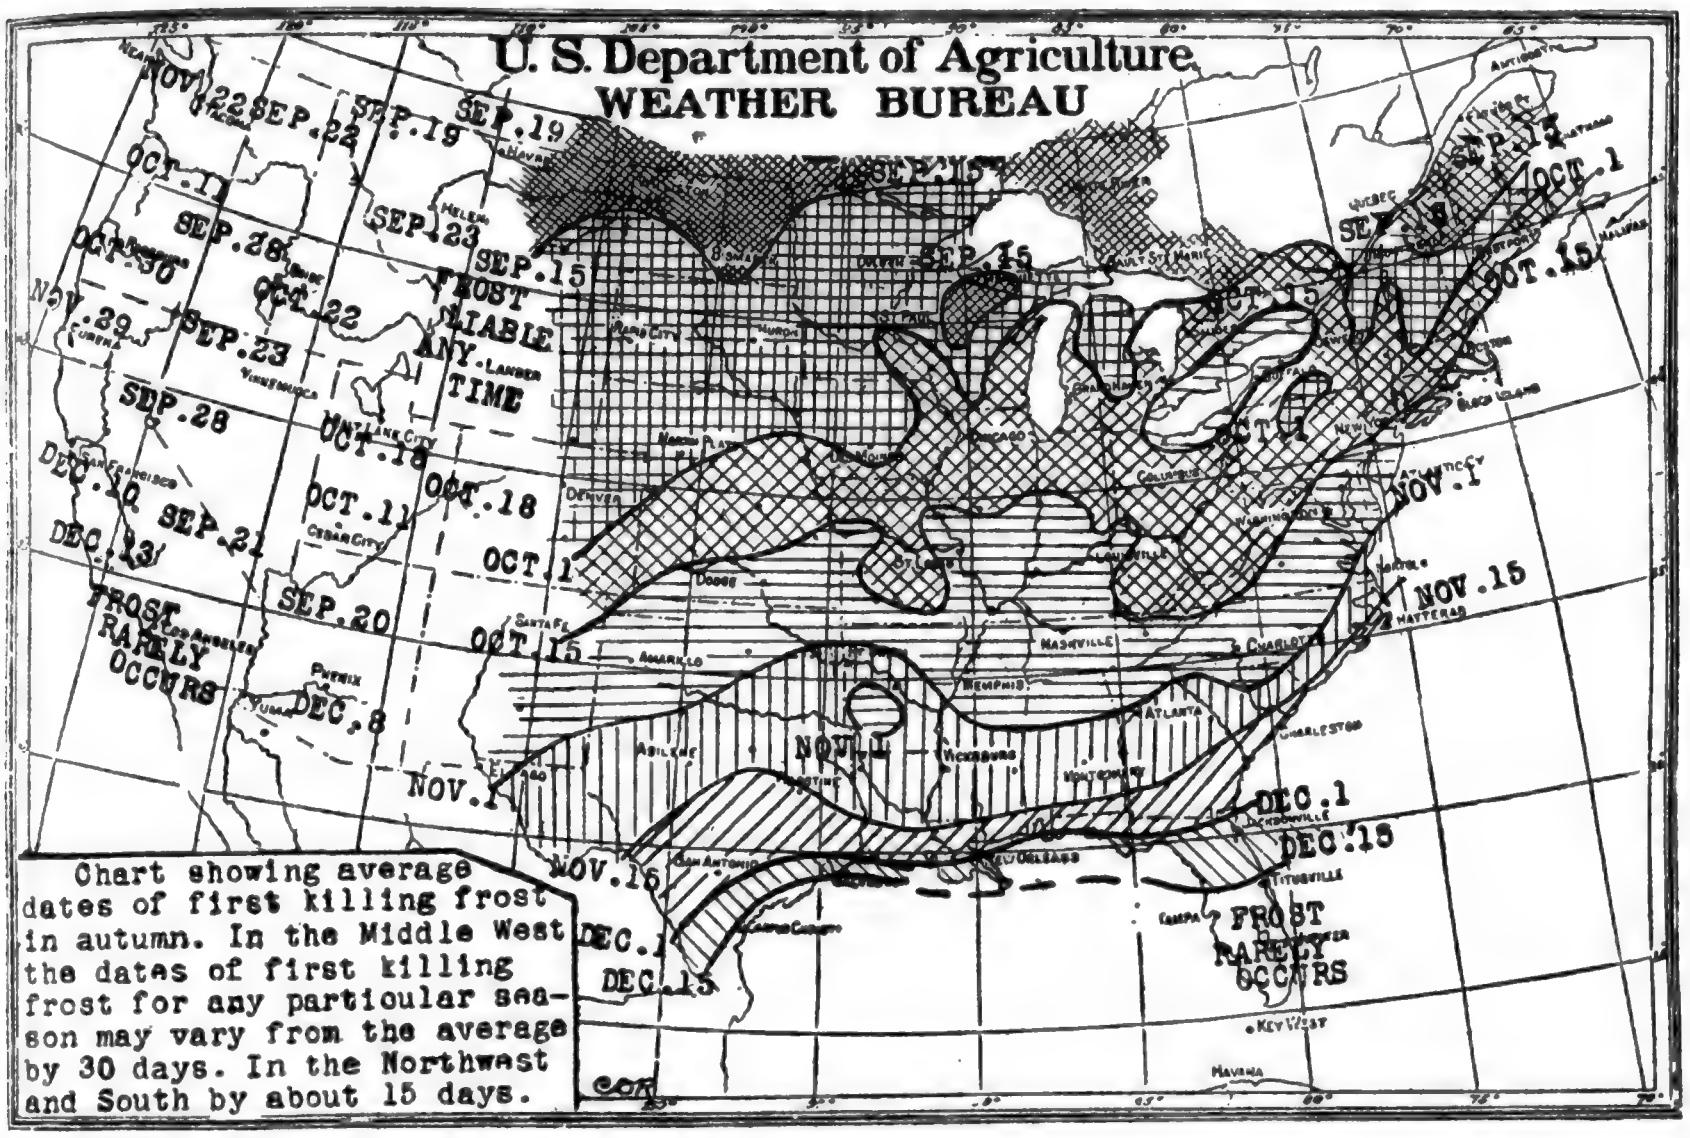
J. A. Nelson, of Framingham, is one of our neatest and most skilled carnation growers. His greenhouses are a perfect picture. He is growing Enchantress, White Enchantress, Pink Delight, Benora, White Wonder, White Perfection and Beacon. He had a surplus of 7,000 field plants, which he easily disposed of. All Mr. Nelson's flowers are handled by W. A. Hastings.

The Boston Flower Exchange will hold its annual meeting October 24. The allies, it is rumored, are already mobilizing for the occasion.

R. P. Petersen, of Framingham, has his greenhouses in fine shape for the coming season. He grows carnations principally, but quite a little miscellaneous stock as well.

Andrew Christensen, of Stoneham, has returned from a trip to Quebec, Montreal, the St. Lawrence and Saguenay rivers, White mountains, etc., and speaks most entertainingly of his trip. Among his newer carnations, Matchless and Champion look remarkably well.

Fred Bell, of Stoughton, is bringing in a fine lot of greenhouse-grown Spencer sweet peas, the first of the local growers to do so.



Paine Bros., of Randolph, are cutting a fine lot of Golden Glow chrysanthemums. They have received about all their Dutch bulbs, but still are waiting for some of their French bulbs.

The annual fruit and vegetable show at Horticultural hall takes place October 3 and 4 and promises to be an excellent one.

Local nurserymen all report fall trade as excessively dull. The severe drought has shut off the sales of evergreens, and orders for deciduous trees, shrubs and perennials are far below the average.

The Fottler, Fiske, Rawson Co. continues to have attractive dahlia displays in its windows. The dahlias are sent from the Marblehead farm and many orders are being booked for them.

The Average Date of The First Killing Frost of Autumn is Not Far Away--Study The Map and Save Your Stock.

W. J. Marshall, of Campello, has his houses mostly planted with carnations this season. They all look well.

At Penn's this week miniature Japanese gardens are being featured in one of the windows. Weddings, decorations and funerals continue to keep the staff busy.

The shipping trade of Welch Bros. Co. is improving and it is expected that cut flower conditions will soon revive.

One of our big drygoods firms had a special sale of roses last week and in one day disposed of 36,000 at the low rate of 5 cents per dozen. This brings up the question of why some of our enterprising retailers do not have some special bargain sales to help relieve the congestion in times of glut.

J. Neuman & Sons, on Tremont street, always have an attractive window. The staff here is being kept busy on wedding and funeral orders.

An attractive feature in one of Galvin's Tremont street windows is a well fruited Black Hamburg grape in a pot. Funeral and wedding orders were numerous last week. September 23, I noted a superb casket cover of valley and Killarney roses for the funeral of the late Mrs. E. J. Milton, of Brookline. September 26, they had the decorations for the wedding of Miss Marjorie Lee and F. W. Sargent, which called for a lot of choice material. The six bridesmaids carried charming bouquets of Cecile Brunner roses, which are coming into much favor.

The Waban Rose Conservatories are sending in a splendid lot of their new rose, Mrs. Moorfield Story, which is in keen demand at the high-class stores. They also have a superb cut of Hadley, Killarney Brilliant and other varieties.

The store of C. R. Dane, of Roxbury, was burglarized September 20. The burglars failed to get the cash hoped for, but threw about and damaged quantities of ribbons and other stock.

Edward Winkler, of Wakefield, is getting a nice crop of his new light pink carnation, Morning Glow. This is not a large variety, but is wonderfully productive and the color makes it sell on sight. Mr. Winkler will disseminate it next year.

While local bulb dealers have received practically their full supply of Dutch bulbs, a large part of Paper Whites and Romans from France have not yet come to hand. While bulb trade is good, a killing frost would stimulate it.

The convention garden is now better than it has been the whole season. Last week's heat wave wonderfully improved the cannas, geraniums, late gladioli and aquatics. Visitors continue to come in large crowds.

William Sim is in the market with a fine lot of single violets. He started picking September 18. His plants are exceptionally fine this season, in spite of the prolonged drought. W. N. C.

SWAINSONAS IN 3-INCH POTS.

Will swainsonas from 3-inch pots grow and bloom this winter, planted in raised beds, one foot high, in a night temperature of 45 degrees?

L. F. C.

Swainsonas in 3-inch pots will not give you many flowers the coming winter. They will do better if carried along in pots, where the root action is limited. In a bench or bed they will make growth at the expense of flowers, although they will bloom freely in spring and summer. Better grow your plants in pots and allow them to root through into the bench, rather than plant them out. C. W.

CULTURE FOR HYDRANGEAS.

Our hydrangeas are in 5-inch pots and have four to six leads. These have been summered over in the houses. They are full of roots and look as though they needed more room. How should I treat them in order to have a few for Easter and some for Memorial day? Would it do to shift into 7-inch pots for later blooming, leaving those intended for Memorial day in the 5-inch pots until time to force them? How should they be hardened off? Would withholding the water do until the leaves fall and ripen the wood? When should this be done for both batches?

H. E. & C. W. K.

Gradually decrease the water supply in order to properly ripen the wood. Do not, however, let them get too dry. The plants should not be repotted now and it would be well to allow them to start in their present pots. Shift the earliest batch into 6-inch pots and the later ones into 7-inch pots, as 5-inch is too small a size to keep properly watered. For Easter, start the plants the first week in January, and for Memorial day, the first week in March. Start at 45 to 50 degrees and run warmer as growth advances; 60 degrees at night can be given once the flower heads show, but run cooler as heads show color. It is not necessary to dry hydrangeas so severely as to cause all leaves to fall.

Vegetable Forcing

VEGETABLE MEN TO MEET.

The seventh annual convention of the Vegetable Growers' Association of America will be held in Philadelphia October 6 to 9. So impressed is the Pennsylvania railroad with the value of the movement in increasing general agricultural prosperity that it has turned practically its whole passenger soliciting staff to making a canvass of personal calls on vegetable growers along the Pennsylvania lines with a view to inducing them to attend the convention.

USE OF FORMALDEHYDE.

The Review has received the following inquiry: "Will some grower who has used formaldehyde as a sterilizer from one year to another tell me his experience with it as a sterilizer? I am not prepared to sterilize with steam and my ground is somewhat diseased."

None of The Review staff have used formaldehyde. If some lettuce grower who has experience with it will describe his method of using it and state how successful he has found it to be, it no doubt will be of general interest.

POISON SPRAYS ON CUCUMBERS.

The greenhouse culture of cucumbers is alluring, as under good conditions a quick, sure and profitable crop may be expected. In the September 10 issue of The Review, H. A. S. detailed trouble that would interfere with the profits. The effectiveness of A. Hallett's spray of cyanide of potassium, to which H. A. S. has reference, can be taken for granted, but as this contains 116⅔ grains to the gallon, its caustic action is to be feared on so delicate a foliage as that of the cucumber, particularly if the spray is applied when the vines are partly wilted; it would be prudent to try a single vine first.

The query of H. A. S. as to the danger of poisoning the cucumber fruit through the use of this spray at flowering time is pertinent. The use of two gallons of this spray on an area of 2,500 square feet would, under glass, be equivalent to its application to about sixty-six plants or hills of cucumbers, on an inclined trellis system. If the spraying be done without waste, and conceding that all the liquid be absorbed, each plant or hill would receive three and one-half grains of cyanide, certainly not enough to endanger the embryo fruit. However, if successive sprayings are made, or if sprayings are made at a later stage of the cucumbers' development, danger might result from rapidity of absorption and, through this, from the accumulation of a poisonous quantity of cyanide in one or more fruits.

One-eighth grain is the dose of cyanide for an adult, and six grains have proved fatal to an adult. It is stated that cyanide varies in quality, or strength, and trials have shown that after fourteen days' exposure to air it still retains energetic poisonous properties. So, although it might be presumed that the salt would decompose rapidly after absorption, this fact should be kept in mind.

As bees are welcome visitors, their entrance should be guarded against during a spraying period, as their presence at such a time would lead to sure death. We have had thousands of bees in cucumber houses January 19; they had made the flight across the river from a point one-half mile distant.

While on the poison topic I would like to say that the use of prussic, or hydrocyanic, acid gas (cyanogen) as a fumigant is so common and is used under such varied conditions that there is some danger of overlooking its deadly nature. So many circumstances about the average greenhouse lend themselves to the possibility of deplorable accidents—the little folks are frequently about and are in and out without one's knowledge—that locked doors should be the rule when fumigation is under way.

Artificial respiration, the application of cold water to chest, head and spine, and cautious inhalation of ammonia or chlorine, with the internal use of an extremely weak solution of ammonia water and a weak solution of chlorinated lime, are generally recommended as first aids to those who have succumbed to the influence of poisons such as these.

Theo. F. Beckert.

ANTIRRHINUM FOR CHRISTMAS.

I shall bench some pink snapdragon plants from 2½-inch pots October 1 and would like to have a good crop for Christmas, if possible. Shall I let them commence blooming at once, or when? In cutting the spikes, how low should they be cut? E. O. C.

Snapdragons planted October 1 from 2½-inch pots will not give you a Christmas crop. In order to have a crop for the holidays, strong plants should have been benched by the middle of August. Your plants will not give you much flower before the end of February, but will furnish a cut for some months, once they commence. Let the main shoot of your little plant run up to flower; then pinch back and allow a crop of young shoots, which will be starting from near the base, to come up. If you pinch back the shoots while in a tender state the plants will break weakly. Give snapdragons 45 to 48 degrees at night for the best results.

INDIANA FLORISTS TO MEET.

The autumn meeting of the State Florists' Association of Indiana will be held at Kokomo, Tuesday, October 6. The members will assemble at the St. Francis hotel at 10 a. m.

The Indianapolis florists will attend in a body, having arranged for a special car to leave the traction terminal station at 7 a. m.

Newsy Items from All Over

Cambridge, O.—Fred W. Arnold has his range of 30,000 feet of glass well under way and he hopes to complete it by October 10.

New London, Conn.—A burglar broke into the store of S. J. Reuter & Son, Sunday night, September 20, but only got about $16 for his efforts.

Elyria, O.—Non-competitive exhibits were made by the L. C. Hecock Floral Co., James McLaughlin and Smallwood & Son at the seventh annual flower show held by the Home Garden Association.

Greensburg, Pa.—Joseph Thomas has about completed the installation of new fixtures at his store. Glass, mirror-lined cases, marble-topped tables, mirrors in the windows and a new floor are some of the improvements.

Natick, Mass.—The firm of Chamberlain & Gage has been dissolved. The business of gladiolus growing will be continued by L. Merton Gage, who is widely known as secretary of the American Gladiolus Society for many years.

Spokane, Wash.—In the flower department at the state fair Hoyt Bros. received first prize for the best Spokane flag in asters. The department was said to be the best and largest in several years, twice the usual space being devoted to it.

Kokomo, Ind.—Miss Elsie Coles has purchased the retail cut flower and plant business from her father, W. W. Coles, and opened a downtown store October 1. The new store will be known as Coles' Flower Shop. A new auto delivery is part of the equipment.

Stamford, Conn.—George L. Waterbury has applied for a permit to erect a greenhouse at 150 Broad street, to cost $225. The owner will do the construction work.

Waltham, Mass.—Work is well advanced on the new greenhouse which is being erected at Mt. Feake cemetery. Its completion is due October 1, according to contract.

Kansas City, Mo.—The Kansas City Post awarded prizes to the best decorated windows for fashion show week. Samuel Murray won second prize, and the W. L. Rock Flower Co. received honorable mention.

Houghton, Mich.—At the range of the Pearce Floral Co. a greenhouse 40x175 feet has been erected. It is on a concrete foundation and Louisiana cypress was used in its construction. A large boiler has been added, as well as a cement smokestack fifty feet high and seven feet in diameter, and a new ventilating apparatus. The new house accomodates 30,000 plants, 15,000 roses and 4,000 carnations.

Salem, O.—Joseph E. Bonsall has sold the greenhouse part of his business to N. C. Glass & Sons, who will cater to both the retail and wholesale trade in cut flowers and plants. The sons, Arden and William, who have both had several years' experience, will have immediate charge of the business. The plant consists of 20,000 square feet of glass, with sufficient land for growing stock. Mr. Bonsall will continue to grow hardy stock, specializing in several kinds of perennials and annuals for the wholesale cut flower trade.

ILLINOIS STATE FAIR SHOW.

Awards on Renewal Exhibits.

One of the peculiarities of the premium list of the Illinois State Fair, at Springfield, is that it provides classes for exactly the same exhibits on different days. The reason is that the fair is of greater duration than the ordinary flower show and the idea is to keep the flower section fresh. The duplicate classes in the second half of the list are designated as renewals, but there is no obligation on the part of any exhibitor to enter in both, and it sometimes results in two exhibitors being able to claim first prize for the same thing.

The awards for the roses staged September 23 were:

Twenty-five American Beauties—Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago, first; A. T. Hey Floral Co., Maywood, Ill., second; Geo. J. Dinkle, Springfield, Ill., third.

Mainly About People

Port Washington, Wis.—Albert Brener is now in business for himself under the name of the Port Washington Floral Co.

Red Hook, N. Y.—Walter M. Van Steenburgh and John M. Ham, two violet growers of this vicinity, have formed a partnership to be known as John Ham & Co. They expect to go into the business on an enlarged scale.

Paterson, N. J.—The judges at the flower show of the Paterson Floricultural Society, held in the Second National Bank building September 12, were P. S. Van Melle, of the landscape department of Bobbink & Atkins, of Rutherford, and Russell B. Stoutenborough, of the local firm of Stoutenborough & Smith, proprietors of the Flower Shop.

Litchfield, Ill.—R. A. McPheron and his son, J. Wilton McPheron, spent several days last week at the Illinois State Fair, at Springfield, staging the retail cut flower work of the Cottage Greenhouses. They were well pleased to get five ribbons on seven entries. In the class for spray of roses there were nine entries and the McPherons were especially proud to get second in such fast company.

Norristown, Pa.—Patrick Callaghan, florist at the Norris City cemetery, has brought suit against the Lehigh Valley Transit Co. for $2,000 damages for injuries sustained when his team was struck April 26, 1914, by one of the company's cars. At the same time suit for $1,000 damages was instituted in behalf of his son, Francis, who was in the wagon with his father. It is claimed that the car was run recklessly at high speed and without warning signal when it struck the team.

New Orleans, La.—Richard Eichling, foreman for U. J. Virgin, is seriously ill and it will be many weeks before he is able to resume his duties.

Monroe, Mich.—Otto H. Cron says the summer of 1914 was the best in his experience. The business was principally funeral work, but there was a great deal of it.

Merchantville, N. J.—Leonard Smith, the local grower, and Richard Rotat, of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, were judges at the flower show held here September 25.

Springfield, O.—William E. Schmeiske has resigned his position as foreman for Alex. Maxwell and will take charge of the greenhouses being erected on the private estate of W. Murray Crane, at Dalton, Mass.

Oakland, Cal.—W. C. Kaber, formerly well known in the trade through his connection with the Kaber Co., of La Porte, Ind., has been located here and at Burlingame for the last three years. He contemplates reëntering the trade.

Portland, Ore.—Cornelius Tonseth was awarded $500 damages in his suit against the Portland Railway, Light & Power Co. for injuries received in a collision between his automobile and a street car. Responsibility for the accident was charged to the traction company.

Chambersburg, Pa.—H. P. Plasterer, who has spent the last twelve years as a grower for a Pittsburgh firm, has erected two greenhouses on Baltimore avenue and installed a hot water heating system. He plans to conduct a retail business, embracing all departments. As the stock at his greenhouse increases in supply, he may dispose of some at wholesale as well.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

Little improvement can be seen in the florists' business of the last week, but we are glad to report a good medium trade. The good weather helped along the asters, and thousands were on the market for the "blessing of the graves," which took place September 26. Medium stock sold at 10 and 15 cents per bunch, but the better grades brought 25 to 35 cents per dozen. The aster supply from now on will be slim. Fortunately carnations have been making good headway. Already Enchantress, Enchantress Supreme and whites are making a good showing, retailing at from 50 to 60 cents per dozen. Golden Glow chrysanthemums are coming in well and sell fast, but an early white variety is small and scarcely salable. Fine gladioli are selling well. Valley is arriving in good condition and has been used quite freely. There seems to be an abundance of Easter lilies. Callas have just started to come. Sweet peas hold their own, but the market for them is slow. Roses of all descriptions are of fine quality, with good stems and foliage. American Beauties are specially fine. Good orchids are on the market, but not in any great quantity. Cosmos, candytuft, zinnias and other outdoor flowers are included in our stock. The supply of green goods meets all requirements.

Various Notes.

Harry Merritt is cutting good Delight carnations from the old plants.

Among trade visitors last week were D. R. Heron, of Olean, N. Y., and Stephen Greene, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia.

H. E. Wilson's store at 88 East Main street is undergoing extensive repairs. The room at the rear of the store is being transformed into a workroom and will include a large new icebox of local make. A double floor, ceiling and walls will help to make the room warm and comfortable, so that at Christmas and Easter, when the weather is usually bad, work will not have to be done in the damp cellar.

The Lady Florists' Association was entertained by Mr. and Mrs. C. Dickinson, of Spencerport, N. Y., at a sausage and corn roast at their residence, Tuesday afternoon, September 22. The guests were met at the trolley by Mr. Dickinson with a hayrack and driven to the Dickinson home, about one-half mile from the village, where they spent a most enjoyable afternoon.

Richard Roe, of Wilson's, has been spending a two weeks' vacation with relatives in Ottawa, Canada.

Reports from the office of the Lord & Burnham Co. show that boiler business is quite brisk. Recent sales include one W-36-8 for Chas. Lee, of Barnard; one W-36-9 for Frank Bennett, of Barnard; one W-18-4 for Edwin Potter, of Phoenix; two 36-10 for T. B. Pengelly, of Irondequoit; two W-36-10 for Chas. Cole, of Irondequoit, and one W-36-8 for L. H. Neubeck, of Buffalo.

The larger part of the Rochester Florists' Association held the much talked of clam-bake Friday afternoon, September 25. The weather, unfortunately, was not of the best, owing to the sudden cold change. After a trip through the aster fields came the dinner of clams, corn, chicken and fish, under the trees. Guests of the Florists' Association present were: J. P. Rice and G. I. Colburn, of Geneva, and Robert Bard and J. Boultman, of Syracuse. The committee of arrangements was composed of C. W. Crossman, G. B. Ogston, George B. Hart, Charles H. Vick, Michael Keller and President John Dunbar. H. J. H.

A VISIT TO DAYTON, O.

As a floral center Dayton, O., is not far behind her neighboring city, Springfield, sometimes known as the "rose growing center of the world." In its lavish use of flowers and plants for civic decoration, Dayton perhaps is a model for cities of the middle west. The example of the National Cash Register plant stimulates civic endeavor and the effect of holding the S. A. F. convention in Dayton several years ago still is apparent in the gardens of the city.

September 26 and 27 I took a run around among some of the growers in and about Dayton. Schieble Bros., at Miamisburg, a few miles south of Dayton, were first visited. These men are primrose specialists and their stock proved the statement. They do a wholesale business almost entirely. It was growing dusk as I entered the place. There were indications in the air of the season's first frost, and the preparedness of the Schiebles was indicated by the smoke, which was curling from the stack, for there were poinsettias to be kept comfortable. The appearance of the place would never indicate that ten feet of water covered the site at the time of the Miami valley's big flood.

A visit to the establishment of the Advance Floral Co., near the National Soldiers' Home, revealed another well kept place. The sweet peas, just strung, looked thrifty and the mums had stems as long and sturdy as any one would care for. The manager, E. E. Schaefer, says he has quit removing soil from the benches, a dose of formaldehyde sterilizing the soil for the next crop.

Fred. W. Ritter, at his greenhouses on River street, has been hustling off his primroses and soon a big patch of variegated vincas will be moved. Mr. Ritter expects to give up the business in a year or two. One wonders why, to look at him, but he claims to be 68 years of age, and so is entitled to a rest.

Warren G. Matthews, flood sufferer, is indomitable in his determination to build a great establishment from the ruins of the wrecked greenhouses. And so today his new greenhouses, filled in every nook and corner with a thrifty, clean, bright lot of stock, are the result of his ability to overcome obstacles. The Matthews greenhouses seem to be run as much after the fashion of a systematized factory as any place I ever have visited.

The places of W. J. Engle, southeast of the city, and of C. H. Mahan & Co., just across the road, where vinca vines by the thousands were growing, show persistent and painstaking work on the part of their owners. Mr. Engle's peony fields are as clean as a Dutch garden. Mr. Mahan is in the midst of erecting six greenhouses. Three are already occupied with a thrifty lot of cyclamen plants. In nearly 100 seed flats are coming on about 40,000 seedlings.

At the place of Mr. Shoup, a mile or so from the Engle and Mahan places, were seen acres of iris, mostly of the German variety. Mr. Shoup is handling irises exclusively and his collection is one of the best in the country.

PITTSBURGH.

The Market.

Trade conditions are showing a slight improvement, although prices continue about the same on all kinds of stock. Outside flowers, gladioli and asters, are nearing the end of the season, and, while we have had no frost, the continued dry spell is showing its effect. Roses are quite plentiful and good. Carnations are a little better and have longer stems, but lilies and valley have been short of the demand. There are some good chrysanthemums coming and in a few more days we shall have them in such quantities that the shortage in other lines will not be noticeable. The retailers all seem to be doing a fair amount of small business, but large orders are scarce and probably will be so until late in October.

Various Notes.

The next meeting of the Florists' Club will be held Tuesday, October 6, at 8 p. m. in the Fort Pitt hotel. Dahlias will be on the table. There will be a talk by John W. Jones, on "What I Saw About Philadelphia," and Neil McCallum will speak on "A Trip to Boston." We are assured of an interesting and instructive evening. The club is prospering in every way and its well attended meetings are made interesting through the efforts of President Neil McCallum.

Mrs. E. A. Williams, who arrived in Europe just in time to be caught in the war troubles, arrived home Wednesday, September 23. In some respects she and her party were greatly favored, not being inconvenienced except in traveling from place to place. The passenger trains had to give way to those carrying soldiers at all times, and frequently when a train arrived at a station all were ordered out and the train was loaded with soldiers, while the passengers were compelled to wait for another train. On these occasions the scenes about them were extremely sad, particularly the parting of families.

A trip to the greenhouse establishment of Randolph & McClements shows the results of the untiring push and energy of Samuel McClements. Paint and whitewash have added much to the appearance of the place, and new boilers and a more convenient arrangement of the heating system will be appreciated this winter. Everything on the place looks well, especially his chrysanthemums and ferns. Mr. McClements never pretended to be a grower, but he has the stuff that makes growers grow.

One evening last week a couple of the "boys" were invited out to Sandy Creek to take dinner with Walter Breitenstein. He has a bungalow overlooking the river, and from his porch one can see miles and miles up and down the river, with a mountain at one's back. Walter was chef as well as host, and served up a remarkably fine dinner. Almost everything came from his own garden.

In the big fire which caused some damage by fire and smoke to the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. and the McCallum Co., the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. got a good deal the worst of it, but one good thing was that everything that was damaged was beyond repair and went to the dump, and the insurance company paid for it. The inconvenience for a day or two will probably make all the more careful, as they will not want another so close. Clarke.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

After the hot spell, cool weather has again set in, and trade conditions are much improved. Weddings and funerals are the main part of the business. Transient, or counter trade is increasing steadily as fall comes on. There is an abundance of all kinds of cut flowers, especially asters. Most of the asters show signs of frost, brown spots being visible on them. There are, however, some of first-class quality, which bring a good price.

There are a few dahlias coming in, but in another week the supply will greatly increase. Gladioli are still with us and are in excellent condition, especially America. There is a demand for chrysanthemums, but the early ones are small and soft, and do not hold up well. There are no carnations, even though the flower buyers are eagerly clamoring for them. All roses are excellent and the demand is strong. There are no violets as yet, but we hope to have them by October 10. Roses and valley are used principally for corsages, while orchids and valley are used for the finer work.

There is a big demand for flowering plants, but there are no blooming plants this early. Sales of Boston ferns are in order, and ferns for the table and living room are selling well.

Various Notes.

At the greenhouses of L. H. Neubeck, in Williamsville, Gladiolus America is being grown. It surpasses any that has been previously shown here, in beauty and size of spike and flower. Some of them are wonderful, measuring ten to twelve inches in length of flowering spike.

The Lenox Flower Shop has an unusual display of palms and ferns in the conservatory, which adjoins the main salesroom. There are kentias of the finest quality, ranging in height from three to twelve feet. The Boston ferns also are fine, being used for large decorations as well as for sale.

J. Benson Stafford's window display of Japanese gardens was most interesting. It consisted exclusively of Japanese gardens of various sizes, a large one forming the central figure. A handsome Japanese screen, done in silks of varied hues, was used as a background, and an attractive red lantern gave a mellow light to the window at night. Japanese gardens are the latest fad here, and the public is cultivating a taste for things of this kind.

Harry Bates, of the Lord & Burnham Co., Rochester, was a visitor here on the night of September 23. M. Adler, representing the famous Adler pins, was in town last week. James J. Bates and Mr. Russell, of the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, were also recent visitors.

Mrs. Edwin C. Armbrust has returned from New Britain, Conn., where she spent the summer with her parents.

J. H. Rebstock reports that business has been good during the summer and that fall trade is increasing steadily.

E. C. A.

New Haven, Conn.—A permit has been issued to George E. Tufts for the erection of a frame greenhouse at the corner of Oak and Porter streets at a cost of $200.

OBITUARY

Sidney Wusthoff.

Sidney Wusthoff, one of the oldest florists in New Orleans, died Wednesday morning, September 16, at his late residence, 5616 Tchoupitoulas street. His funeral took place Thursday afternoon, September 17, with interment in Metairie cemetery.

Mr. Wusthoff was born in New Orleans, sixty-six years ago, going into the florists' business early in life and amassing a snug competence through strict attention to his business. About five months ago Mr. Wusthoff married Miss Wilhelmina Merket and is survived by her, two nieces and four nephews.

Wilfred Brotherton.

Wilfred A. Brotherton, of Rochester, Mich., died at the Harper hospital, Detroit, Sunday morning, September 20, after suffering for several weeks from catarrhal jaundice. Mr. Brotherton spent practically all his life at Rochester, Mich., and his knowledge of the flora of the region was scarcely exceeded by anyone. He stocked the estate of Henry Ford, of automobile fame, when it was laid out near Wayne, and he also planted the flowers and shrubbery surrounding the Michigan building at the world's fair. He was a member of the Detroit Institute of Science.

After the death of his mother two years ago and the consequent division of the estate, Mr. Brotherton was under the practical guardianship of Attorney Grant Walker, of Detroit, from whom he held a life lease of the property. He was 56 years old and unmarried and is survived by a sister, Mrs. Carrie Dehate, of Rochester, and a brother, George Brotherton, a mining engineer, of Escanaba, Mich.

John Burr.

John Burr, of Freeport, Me., died Monday night, September 21, after a short illness caused by a paralytic shock.

He was born March 27, 1836, in the house in which he died, and was the son of Perez and Louise (Burnham) Burr. He received his education in the public schools of Freeport and served as selectman of Freeport from 1871 to 1878. In 1860 he started in the florists' business in a small way and his trade grew to large proportions. For sixteen years he was in charge of the flower beds of the Maine Central railroad and traveled almost constantly during that period.

Mr. Burr was a member of Freeport Lodge of Masons, the royal arch-chapter in Yarmouth, Mount Vernon Council of Brunswick, the Maine Consistory and the Order of the Mystic Shrine. He also belonged to Pejepscot Lodge of Odd Fellows in Brunswick and Harreseeket Lodge of Pythians of Freeport. He leaves a wife, Lillian Burr, a son, P. S. Burr, and three daughters, Mrs. Grace Sydleman, of Bath, Mrs. Lucy Holbrook, of Portland, and Mrs. Abbie Pierce, of Freeport.

Frank X. Fernbach.

Frank X. Fernbach, for many years connected with various greenhouse establishments of Rockford, Ill., met death by drowning September 17, when he stumbled while crossing the railroad bridge over the Rock river and fell into the swollen stream below. It is thought he hit his head against one of the piers in falling, for he only came to the surface once, and his body has not been recovered at the date of writing.

Mr. Fernbach had at different times been employed by J. J. Soper, C. H. Woolsey and Ralph Emerson. He is survived by his wife and seven children. They are: Paul Fernbach, Hay Fernbach, Irene Fernbach, Mrs. Elmer Peterson, and Percy, Jesse and Jerome Fernbach.

E. J. Chapin.

E. J. Chapin, the old-time grower of Pine Brook, N. J., died September 25, at the age of 65. He belonged to the firm of F. A. & E. J. Chapin, noted at one time in the New York market for their smilax and asparagus. They leased their greenhouses in 1909 to P. J. Schroeder.

AZALEAS ARE HERE.

The first of the shipments of azaleas which The Review last week reported were on the way arrived on the steamers Andyk and Nieuw Amsterdam, which reached New York September 21. Transportation from Belgium via Rotterdam is open, and there is no reason to believe otherwise than that the usual supply of Belgian plant stock will be received this fall. There are even those who predict that the case of this stock will be the same as that of the French and Dutch bulbs, and that there will be a larger supply on hand this season than usual. Present information, however, is too meager to allow of definite statements on this point. The most that can be said is that over 400 cases of plants from Belgium are already in this country and several hundred more are known to be on the way. The consignments of this stock on the Andyk and the Nieuw Amsterdam were as follows:

Consignee.	Cases.
Stumpp & Walter Co	7
Roehrs, J., Co	1
Lunham & Moore	11
McHutchison & Co	69

BUSINESS EMBARRASSMENTS.

Los Angeles, Cal.—According to the petition in bankruptcy filed by the Los Angeles Flower Market, the debts of the concern are $5,559.27, of which $1,062.69 are unsecured. The assets are $4,505.92; of this amount, $2,490.57 is due on open book accounts.

Kenosha, Wis.—A meeting of the creditors of the United Refrigerator & Ice Machine Co. was held at the factory offices September 29 to consider any feasible plan which will enable the company to continue in operation. This concern is well known as a producer of florists' refrigerating outfits. The cause of the trouble was the recent failure of the Commercial Savings Bank, which left the company with liabilities of $552,000, offset by $268,000 to $700,000 assets. The plan proposed involved turning over the operation of the company to a creditors' committee.

Virginia, Minn.—R. J. Koerner, of Minneapolis, has opened a retail flower store at 105 North Mesaba avenue.

Kalamazoo, Mich.—Morris Fisher is making preparations to open a flower shop here next month under his ownership and management.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Incorporated by Act of Congress, March 4, 1901.

Officers for 1914: President, Theodore Wirth, Minneapolis; vice-president, Patrick Welch, Boston; secretary, John Young, 53 W. 28th St., New York City; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo.

Officers for 1915: President, Patrick Welch, Boston; vice-president, Daniel MacRorie, San Francisco; secretary, John Young, 53 W. 28th St., New York City; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo.

Thirty-first annual convention, San Francisco, Cal., August 17 to 20, 1915.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

CANARY birds, loose in the conservatory, are an attraction in the Breitmeyer store in Detroit. The little music-makers know no fear.

OUR European friends are bending every effort to secure the early shipment of the largest possible quantity of every article America buys.

A STEADILY increasing number of women are engaging in the florists' business, especially in the south, where the number of women in the trade already has become large.

IT may as well be recognized at once that competition in the trade never again will be less than it is today, with the probability that it will grow keener from year to year.

STRANGE as it may seem, every now and then someone wraps up a photograph with great care but neglects to mark either picture or package with anything by which it can be identified when it reaches The Review. A number of unidentified photographs are still on hand.

IMMENSE sums of money are flowing into the middle west in return for the big crops now being marketed at high prices, with the result that all florists in that great territory are confident the season of 1914-15 will break all records for the consumption of plants, flowers and accessories.

PUSH THE BULB SALES.

Every florist in the United States should have a special sale of bulbs this month and next.

During October and November, and even in December, bulbs can be sold for bedding and the quantity planted will depend largely on the push the florists put into clearing the surplus. If every florist tries he can sell 50 cents worth, at least, to almost every customer who has even a little strip of outdoors. And what will become of the surplus? There won't be any!

There are more Dutch bulbs in this country than ever before, but they can easily be sold to the public, and put away in the ground, if everybody helps.

Turn the menace into a profit these next sixty days.

WAR PRICES.

There is some criticism of the immediate advance in price on trade commodities which followed the outbreak of the war, those who consider that the advances were unjustified contending that regular prices should have been maintained on stock on hand, as the cost of this was not affected by the war.

But there is another side to the question that should have consideration. It is true that the war did not add to the cost of stock that had been bought and warehoused before hostilities broke out. The advance in price was due to the impossibility of getting further supplies at the old prices. New stock will cost considerably more money. Now, having replenished stock at war prices, what will happen when the war ends? Prices will fall at least as rapidly and perhaps faster than they have advanced. The man who has any considerable stock on hand at that time will be in line to lose money.

The man who did not advance his prices on stock on hand, supposing his further supply is affected by the war, will have to sail close to the wind to avoid a loss on the stock he is carrying when the war ends. The man who went up with the market can come down with the market without getting hurt, his loss being made good by the gain made in the beginning.

A PROTEST WITHDRAWN.

I am directed by the chairman of the executive committee of the Gladiolus Society of Ohio to state that, after taking time for consideration, the Cleveland Florists' Club has withdrawn its protest in regard to the award of the silver cup offered by the club in connection with the second annual flower show of the Gladiolus Society of Ohio, and the action of the judges is sustained, thus giving the prize to J. Thomann & Sons, Rochester, N. Y., for the best display of new varieties.

Wilbur A. Christy, Sec'y.

BUSINESS RUNNING ALONG.

Harry A. Barnard, who has spent more than fifty years in the employ of Stuart Low & Co., the English nurserymen and plantsmen, is making one of his annual trips through "the States." He was in Chicago last week. Always an interesting talker, Mr. Barnard had many things of importance to say this trip. He left home when the war was a month old. At first the trade in England was badly upset but by September 1 it had begun to get going again and mail from the house that reached Mr. Barnard at Chicago was to the effect that the results of the war are proving far less serious than had been expected, the export business with the principal trade firms running along much as usual. The principal interruption is the result of big boats being taken off their usual runs to serve their governments.

Mr. Barnard said the trade along the Atlantic coast is feeling the effects of the war, but that the farther west he got the less apparent the disturbance became.

ESLER LIKES THESE LETTERS.

The indefatigable secretary of the Florists' Hail Association, John G. Esler, of Saddle River, has a special fondness for letters like the following. This one was addressed to the treasurer, Joseph Heacock, of Wyncote, but it's all the same, as the team work of the F. H. A. is excellent:

I beg to acknowledge the receipt of the draft for $900.87, covering my loss in the Florists' Hail Association. I certainly appreciate the prompt settlement, as in a case where a person suffers such a loss as I had, the Florists' Hail Association is a mighty good friend to lessen a person's troubles.—Ed. Williams, Grand Island, Neb., September 19, 1914.

SOLD SOME PEONIES.

James Frost, of Greenville, O., has no complaint of lack of demand for peonies. You see, Mr. Frost didn't wait for the would-be buyers to ask him if he had anything to sell—they might forget him—so he told his little story of surplus stock in The Review's classified ads. This is the result:

The peonies are all sold and money enough being returned to have paid for the ad for many years. Thank you.—James Frost, Greenville, O., September 25, 1914.

There's always someone, somewhere, to buy seasonable stock if offered in the Classified department of The Review.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The market conditions are fluctuating with the weather. The supply and demand move up and down with the temperature. Last week opened with high heat and low business. As the week progressed the weather turned cool, going from one extreme to the other. The result was that supply went down and demand went up. The close of the week was excellent. This week the temperature is rising again, and with it supply is increasing and demand easing off. The experiences of the last few days, however, have given the wholesalers much encouragement. It is now thought certain that a good frost and brisk autumnal weather will result in business becoming fully as good as it ever has been at this time of year. Last season the latter half of September was unusually good, which should be kept in mind when making comparisons.

The special feature of the market today is a temporary scarcity of first-class chrysanthemums. Cooler weather brought the usual autumn demand for mums. There are enough low grade mums, but there is a call for many more really first-class flowers than can be had at present. The supply is decreasing rather than increasing, the earliest batches of Golden Glow and October Frost having been cut out with the second batches not yet quite ready.

Another important change is the in-

WE ARE IN POSITION TO SUPPLY

ORCHIDS and VALLEY

You can get what you want by ordering of Amling

Valley and Cattleyas have been the principal shortages this fall—but we have been taking good care of our customers right along. If you have not been getting good treatment from some other wholesaler, don't hesitate to order of us—we can take care of you, too, and shall be glad of the opportunity to show you some of the advantages of dealing with us.

FANCY ROSES

We have had good roses, yes, and many of them, but the cut this week is the best of the season to date. Can you use

HOME-GROWN GIGANTEUM LILIES

If you haven't had good lilies, it was because you have not ordered of us. The lily, cut right, is a good shipper, but there is a limit. The lilies you get from us are home-grown, fresh cut, and you get them with only one handling. Our supply is so large no one need be content with any less good lilies.

CARNATIONS

Our supply is increasing rapidly. Excellent flowers, good stems, and enough to take care of some more orders.

BEAUTIES

We shall take care of our Beauty buyers right through the season—a larger supply than ever.

THE EARLY MUMS ARE READY

Yellow and white are here in quantity. Usually we can fill orders of good size without notice—always on notice that gives time to get the stock in from the greenhouses. These are from the same good growers who supplied the fine stock we shipped in other seasons. Golden Glow and Smith's Advance are the two leading varieties. Recommend them to your customers and get your stock of us.

If you look to us for your supply of green goods, you will be well pleased. Fancy ferns, good smilax, fine adiantum, plumosus and Sprengeri bunches, galax, leucothoe, boxwood—we have them all.

You will like our Beauties. The quality is A-No. 1 and we have all lengths in quantity. Start the season with us and you will be taken care of when the dark days come.

MUMS You can order all you want of us; we are Mum headquarters.

CARNATIONS An excellent supply of first-class flowers on good stems.

ALL VARIETIES OF ROSES HERE

You will like the Roses you get from us, and you will find you can use a lot of them—and make a nice profit. We have all the varieties—everything.

LILIES A large supply of stock that enables us to meet competition.

ASTERS We still can supply good Asters in considerable quantity.

crease in the supply of cattleyas. Local growers are cutting fine flowers in quantity and consignments from the east again are coming in. The demand also has increased, for corsage work is picking up. Valley is equal to the demand, which has been restricted by the advance in prices. The first violets arrived September 26.

Beauties continue abundant and in most cases of excellent quality. The man who has poor Beauties has reason to regret it this fall; with so many good ones, the poor stock is slow sale and brings only low prices.

Roses are abundant, as they have been for months. Pink is most plentiful. The buyers generally prefer Killarney Brilliant, because of its higher coloring. White is not in oversupply. Mrs. Russell is being held at Beauty prices, which is the reason that orders can be filled; any shading of prices results in a quick clean-up to local buyers. Sunburst also is in extra demand. Prices on the staple roses are lower than they should be, considering the quality of stock and the time of year.

Carnations are coming in more abundantly every day. With the decrease in the supply of asters, carnations continue to sell better and better. The stock is of unusually good quality for the end of September. Not only are the flowers good, but stems now can be had as long as there is any real need for them. The bulk of the receipts again this year are Enchantress and White Enchantress. A few growers who have planted red in considerable quantity seem in line to make some extra money.

Gladioli are hanging on later than usual this year. Although the supply continues, the demand is dropping. There would be a good sale for good asters, but most of those coming in are usable only in the cheapest kind of funeral work.

There is no change in the greens market. A full winter line now is available. It is worthy of note that a good many houses are selling ferns at a price that does not take care of overhead expense.

Fall Show at Art Institute.

The executive committee of the Horticultural Society of Chicago met September 29 and arranged for a seasonal display of chrysanthemums, to be held at the Art Institute, November 9 and 10, offering silver and bronze medals for best displays of plants, cut blooms, floral arrangements and novelties. Various Notes.

The firm of Schumann & Kohout has been dissolved, Joseph Kohout having purchased the interest of J. G. Schumann, who has retired. Both gentlemen were for many years growers for Bassett & Washburn. A couple of years ago they took over the establishment of Joseph Ziska, known as the Chicago Rose Co., at Libertyville, Ill., and are understood to have done well, growing roses, recently sold in this market by Kyle & Foerster.

The world's series and the city series do not interest us half as much as the Switzer cup series, the first of three final games of which is to be played October 3 at Iowa street and Western avenue, between the Eclipse and Loudin clubs, with Fred Liebermann, of Zech & Mann's, pitching for the latter. It is for the amateur city championship.

With the last day of September Lubliner & Trinz concluded their occupancy of Orchestra hall. They ran moving pictures there for three summer months, while the flower business was dull. The rent was $15,000. The closing show was "The Fortune Hunter," which perhaps would have been as appropriate for the opening.

Returning from Europe was not nearly so easy as going there, in the experience of E. F. Kurowski and wife. To those who visit the offices of the Moninger Co., the recently returned traveler has many interesting stories to tell. Mrs. Kurowski was in Bavaria and Mr. Kurowski in Berlin when the war broke out. After a wait of a month she was able to rejoin her husband, but forty hours were required for what is usually a ride of only eight hours. They got to Rotterdam on a special train arranged for Americans by their ambassador. Going thence to London, they found their steamer had been taken for war use, but after another week's delay they got passage on a boat from Liverpool.

T. E. Waters now is domiciled in aristocratic Evanston.

Michael Freres, with the Chicago Carnation Co., carries his hand heavily bandaged because of blood poison resulting from a thorn in his right thumb.

E. E. Pieser, of Kennicott Bros. Co., reports the arrival of Mexican ivy, the quality being excellent considering that there has been no frost.

Out-of-town business is normal, according to A. L. Vaughan, but city business is sub-normal, especially the sales to the cash buyers, of whom there is a constantly increasing number.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is well pleased

The first Rhinebeck violets of the season arrived September 19, according to the A. L. Randall Co.

A new Overland truck is making deliveries for Paul Blome & Co.

It is rumored that when the J. B. Deamud Co. finds itself obliged to make a change because the landlord is required to remove stairways outside the street line, the store will be moved to the vacant room on the street floor, No. 158 North Wabash avenue, next door to Rowe's new retail store.

C. W. McKellar and wife celebrated their fifteenth wedding anniversary September 27.

Felix Reichling says that September was considerably better than a year ago for Peter Reinberg, the second half of the month having given especially good results. The demand for Beauties is reported excellent.

The first Glencoe violets of the season reached the E. C. Amling Co. September 26, the first Hudson river violets September 28.

N. J. Wietor says he is not yet ready to pass judgment on Champion and Philadelphia carnations, although some good blooms are being cut. Rosette is confirming his last season's approval of it.

Dahlias never have been popular in this market, but Erne & Klingel say they are selling better than usual this year. The trouble is the flowers bruise and wilt so easily.

The seed stores are getting ready to push retail sales of bulbs as soon as frost clears the beds of soft stock. Every flower store should have a bulb sale this month.

Everette R. Peacock, who has been out of the city on a business trip, returned September 28 to his store at 4013 Milwaukee avenue.

F. C. Kirchhoff, who has been seriously ill with stomach trouble, is sufficiently recovered to resume his activity in connection with the new store and greenhouse he is starting for his two sons at 4709 Milwaukee avenue. Mr. Kirchhoff still finds it necessary to make periodical visits to the hospital for treatments and is unable to take any solid food, but nevertheless retains his cheerful outlook on life and works every day at the new enterprise with quite as much enthusiasm as if he were just starting in business for himself.

Sam Pearce has just completed a fine large bulb house adjacent to his geranium houses. Painting the building is in progress. The house is up-to-date in every respect, having metal supports and stays throughout.

During the absence of the foreman, A. H. Budlong has found it necessary to roll up his sleeves and get right into the work with his growers at the J. A. Budlong range. The general cleaning up is about completed and everything seems to be in good condition for an acceleration of business during the fall and winter season. Especially is this the case in regard to the heating facilities. The vacuum system, with double steam trap and series arrangement of valves, has never failed to give efficient service during cold spells and no trouble is anticipated in maintaining temperature from gable to gable this winter.

C. A. Samuelson has again sublet the north store of the building he occupies on Michigan avenue. When he moved to his present location several years ago he was obliged to lease two stores in order to get the use of the rear of the property for a conservatory. For a time he used the north store as a display room, but found it undesirable, as he had plenty of space in the south store. The north room has been vacant from May 1.

Many of the older men in the trade will be interested in the report that Walter Retzer is again in the trade, at Houston, Tex., where he is starting a retail store as the Gulf Florist. Mr. Retzer cut quite a swath in the days that he ran the old Albert Fuchs place on the north side.

In spite of the somewhat slow sale generally reported last season, Albert T. Hey, of Maywood, says snapdragons paid him about as well as anything he ever grew. He says that as much as he dares hope is that it will do as well this season.

the new quarters, as satisfactory, though trade could not be called brisk.

Recent Visitors.

Chicago florists have been receiving calls from E. J. Fancourt, of the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia. Mr. Fancourt is interested in noting what effect the European war has had on the trade and says that with few exceptions the future is regarded optimistically and all seem to be busy preparing for a big season.

A. E. Mitting, of Santa Cruz, Cal., has been in town trying to dispose of some freesia bulbs.

H. A. Fisher was in the market September 28, buying stock for a new start in business at Kalamazoo, under the name of Morris Fisher.

Hugo Schroeter, of Detroit, spent several days in the market last week, picking up stock for decorating the Newcomb-Endicott store, a job that has been done annually by the Schroeters for many years. About 1,200 Beauties are used. He bought some of every novelty rose on the market, to carry their names on cards when put up in the decoration.

E. S. Thompson, of the Central Seed & Bulb Co., Benton Harbor, was in Chicago September 28 and called at the offices of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association. This was Mr. Thompson's first visit to the metropolis within a year. He reports trade conditions in Benton Harbor as encouraging.

C. R. Panter, of New Orleans, spent several September days in looking things over in Chicago.

John S. Carter, president of the Nicotine Mfg. Co., St. Louis, being in town on another errand, called on the supply houses handling his company's line.

The accessories salesmen are busy. This week Farney, of the Rice Co.; Dykes, of Janssen's, and Seligman, of Wertheimers', called on the trade. The latter left September 28 for Philadelphia to spend a holiday with his mother.

The Market.

Herbert G. Tull, one of the ablest business men in the floral world, has reliable information that in eighteen different lines of business there is a slight improvement as compared with this time last year. While this is hardly true of our florists, it seems to indicate that the season just opening is full of promise.

The extremely hot weather of the almost rainless month of September has had a damaging effect on the cut flower market. The dahlia, the principal September flower, shows a falling off as compared with last year. There have not been nearly so many dahlias, nor has it been possible to produce such fine blooms as formerly under the adverse conditions, except in a few rare instances. The little rain we have had has been of great service, but a lot more is needed badly. Dahlias have been selling well, circumstances considered, at fair prices. Roses have only sold fairly, but their numbers have been excessive. Good stock and the novelties have sold best. Carnations are coming in a little more freely and are more used as the asters disappear. Golden Glow and Smith's Advance of moderate size arrive in small numbers and usually go out quickly. Nice snapdragon, pink, white and yellow; pansies and single violets have come. Cosmos and goldenrod give a fall touch to the stores.

A Change in the Situation.

"Have you seen our new showroom?" The speaker led the way up a long flight of stairs to the second floor, where a great showroom with high ceiling and tall windows was completely filled with florists' supplies. In the foreground were wreaths of many designs, chiefly made of those forms of foliage, artificially prepared, for which this country has until recently depended upon Germany. They were not exactly the same, in most cases, but their general character was closely allied to the novel German wreaths that became so popular last season. A striking design, original in its combination, was formed of cycas leaves adorned with the wild flowering rhododendron and brightened by the scarlet bracts of Euphorbia Poinsettiana. It was an upright design, standing perhaps three and a half feet high. The speaker was Joseph G. Neidinger and the change in the situation lies in the fact that American-made stock is now ready to replace the European. "We have a large force at work making these goods," Mr. Neidinger continued, "and in addition we have reliable information that some of our European stock has been shipped from Germany through a neutral port. It should arrive within two weeks."

The Fuel Market.

The condition in the anthracite coal market has improved during the last fortnight, with the demand for domestic sizes. Smith, Linnaweaver & Co. add to this fact that the steam sizes used by florists are in fair demand, with prospects of an improvement with the colder weather. They state that bituminous coal is selling slowly.

Various Notes.

Mrs. Richard Umphried has sold her retail flower store at Fifth and Fairmount avenue to Miss Mary Brown, of Fifth and Rising Sun lane. Miss Brown opened for business September 26.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. have received a large importation of goods from Germany. Mr. Bayersdorfer finds the excess of freight charges due to war conditions quite annoying, as his customers do not seem to realize that such expense cannot be avoided at this time.

The Henry F. Michell Co. will hold a dahlia show on the Million Dollar pier, Atlantic City, October 1 to 3. A handsome decoration will be made, using palms and foliage, with 500 vases of dahlias, to be further augmented by perennials. H. F. Michell II will assist Philip Freud in arranging the exhibit.

Edward Reid is not prepared to announce the speaker for the Florists' Club's meeting October 6, but promises that no effort will be spared to have a good practical talk from someone of ability.

J. A. Smith was one of the judges at the Merchantville flower show September 25.

William P. Craig returned from the west and the middle southwest September 28. Mr. Craig says that in several cities, notably Louisville, in front of many barber shops, ice cream parlors and other stores were bales of cotton. In the window was a sign, "We have bought our bale of cotton; have you?" He says it indicates a widespread effort to relieve the cotton growers. Mr. Craig left for the south Atlantic seaboard September 29.

Fred Cowperthwaite judged the Ridley Park flower show September 25.

The Philadelphia Cut Flower Co. announced the arrival of the first violets of the season.

Lord & Burnham Co. will erect two greenhouses 28x100 feet each for the Henry F. Michell Co., at Andalusia, Pa. This will make twelve houses in all, three of 120 feet, seven of 100 feet and two fifty-seven feet in length.

William J. Baker is receiving Golden Glow and Smith's Advance chrysanthemums, choice pink, white and yellow snapdragon and pansies.

Philip Freud announces that a handsome dahlia show will be held at Gimbel's October 6 to 8, which he has contracted to manage.

J. J. Habermehl's Sons have had a fair amount of melancholy work during the last week. Entertaining has not yet begun in earnest.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

We have not had so hot a corresponding week as the last in twenty-nine years. From September 21 to 25 the temperature was at times 95 degrees in the shade. In thirty years New York has not had so long a period of drought; not a drop of rain has fallen for twenty-eight days.

Business has not been encouraging, therefore, during the last week and the expected improvement has so far failed to materialize. Tremendous quantities of roses have been received, most of them short-stemmed and light-headed. But mixed boxes, with all grades included, have been cleared at bargain rates. American Beauties, which were selling at $20 per hundred when the week opened, fell to less than half and are still away below their real value. Hillingdon seems to have lost its popularity. Sunburst has totally eclipsed it. There is a flood of yellow roses. The new varieties are all growing in popularity. There is no doubt as to the general demand for these this season.

Orchids disappointed everybody by their weakness, prices for fine Cattleya labiata falling to $25 per hundred. There seems to be an unlimited supply, also, of oncidiums. Valley is no longer climbing. No lilies could be bought under $5 per hundred during the week, and at its end $6 was the average quotation. Choice stock went even higher. The days of 2-cent lilies are over. Carnations are improving every day, and prices are rising as the stems grow longer. Wards and Beacon are worthy of special mention.

There are still plenty of asters and gladioli, but another week will eliminate them as a market factor. The mum stream is commencing and it will soon be a mighty river. Some fine Monrovia, Smith's Advance and pink seedlings are already on view in many of the wholesale windows. The dahlia supply to date is not inspiring as to quality, but the dahlia show is over and finer stock is now expected. They will be scarcer than usual, owing to the long drought. There are plenty of cosmos, tuberoses, tritomas and celosias for all demands.

Various Notes.

John Weir, of Trepel's Bloomingdale store, bought 12,000 roses one day during the hot spell for $11, which is pretty nearly a record. The purchase was made from the New York Cut Flower Co.

E. J. Chapin, of Pine Brook, N. J., one of the old-time growers of roses and called some years ago the "smilax king," died September 25 at the age of 65.

L. B. Nason exhibited some fine dahlias of the Souvenir de Gustave Doazon variety last week of his own growing, measuring eight inches in diameter.

Mrs. E. A. Williams, of Pittsburgh, was in the city last week, back from

BUDDLEIA ASIATICA

A New Winter Cut Flower Plant

This new Greenhouse Shrub is without a doubt one of the most interesting and attractive flowering plants in existence. It is of exceptional beauty, and wherever exhibited has been greatly admired by every flower-lover. It grows about 3 feet tall, is of free branching habit and produces, in abundance, long spikes of pure white flowers, with a delicate fragrance, resembling lilac. They can be forced with little heat, a carnation house temperature being the most suitable, and can be brought into bloom by Christmas; used in combination with poinsettias, they are especially effective; valuable as a pot plant or for cut flowers. We predict a big sale for this novelty, and every progressive florist should try at least a few.

Strong plants in 2½-inch pots, $2.00 per dozen; per 100, $15.00. Extra large specimen plants in 6-inch pots, 50c each; per dozen, $5.00. The supply is limited; order early.

ROCHESTER, N. H.

This famous New Hampshire town was this year favored with magnificent weather for its thirty-ninth annual fair, the temperature ranging from 87 to 95 degrees in the shade from September 22 to 25. The floral court was again in charge of Frank Shorey and was tastefully arranged. In spite of the intense heat, flowers here kept remarkably well, this being one of the coolest and most refreshing departments of the fair.

E. A. Corson, as usual, showed plants in quantity, also floral designs, roses, carnations, etc., all of fine quality. The Exeter Rose Conservatories had a fine display of roses, as had William H. Elliott from his big greenhouses in the near-by town of Madbury. H. E. Meader, of Dover, had a splendid collection of gladioli, some being excellent seedlings; also good floral designs in variety.

J. K. Alexander, East Bridgewater, Mass., had an extensive show of dahlias, capturing many prizes; also gladioli, montbretias and perennial phlox. W. P. Lothrop had a large dahlia collection, as had Mrs. H. M. Walker. Worthy of special comment were the excellent outdoor sweet peas of Mrs. Ella Trask Roberts, of Alton Bay, N. H. The judge was W. N. Craig, Brookline, Mass. It was pleasing to notice a steady improvement in the amateurs' exhibits.

E. A. Corson has a well arranged store near the railroad depot and business here continues satisfactory.

BALTIMORE, MD.

The Market.

During the last week business has shown a decrease over that of the week before. Beauties were in good demand the early part of the week, but during the latter days sales were few. Valley was in pretty much the same way, and the price on this has advanced to $5 per hundred. Beauties of second grade were used in place of good pink roses, which were not to be had. Asters are about over, none of any size being seen. White roses and good pink, such as Radiance and Maryland, were in good demand, but in limited supply. Killarney is offered at low figures for good stock, but with few buyers. Dahlias are much better than formerly, due to the cool nights and a good rain the early part of last week. Carnations are longer in stem, but still small. They are fairly well bought up. There was a strong demand for lilies, due to the scarcity of other white flowers for funeral work. In summary, the week's business showed a good demand for the better grades of stock, with fair prices, but for ordinary stock there were low rates and few buyers.

Club Meeting.

One of the most interesting meetings held by the club in some time was called to order by President Johnston September 28. There was a good attendance. The main topic for the evening was whether the American Rose Society should be invited to hold its annual spring exhibition and meeting in this city. The committee appointed at the last meeting reported that after the matter had been thoroughly discussed it was deemed inadvisable to invite them at the present time. The secretary was instructed to so notify the proper authorities. Treasurer Burger read his quarterly report, which showed the club to be in a substantial financial condition. The subject of delinquent members was brought up by the financial secretary and it was decided to notify all members in arrears for one year's dues that if they are not paid in thirty days their names will be dropped from the roll. In the meanwhile they stand suspended by the action of the club. Thomas Barker was elected a member.

Edward Kress had some flowers of different varieties of red roses suitable for outdoor culture on the desk for the benefit of those interested. Charles Hochstead had on exhibition a handsome silver loving cup which was awarded him as first prize in the floral auto parade held during the recent Star Spangled Banner Centennial Celebration.

It was decided, on motion of I. H. Moss, to invite City Forester Maxwell to address the club on the subject of tree and shrub planting and kindred interests at the next meeting. The question box was opened and some valuable information gained. This is one of the most interesting parts of the club's meetings and should be more widely used than it has been, for through it questions on any subject of interest to the trade can be taken up and answered. The subject of making the members attend the meetings more regularly will be made a special order for the next meeting, when it is hoped a good crowd will turn out.

Various Notes.

Lehr Bros. are sending some of the first cuts of their new rose, Aurora, to the Leo Niessen Co. This variety is a light pink sport of Maryland. This is the first season for it in this city.

Samuel Feast & Sons had a fine lot of Advance mums in the store window last week.

The first shipment of violets this season was received last week by the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. Some extra fine Beauties were also shown by this company, with stems forty-eight inches long and blooms in proportion.

Halliday Bros. had an attractive window decoration, composed of single dahlias, snapdragons and goldenrod.

Announcements of the marriage of Sol. Uhlfelder and Miss Regina Trueaman are being sent out. The bridegroom is a familiar figure around the wholesale stores and handles only the better class of stock, such as Beauties, valley, violets and orchids.

W. F. E.

Johnstown, N. Y.—Christian H. Hamre has purchased W. J. Larcombe's greenhouses, on East Main street. Mr. Hamre is a graduate of the Connecticut Agricultural School.

Willimantic, Conn.—The Garrity greenhouse property, on Mansfield avenue, has been sold by Frank P. Fenton, trustee of the Dalrymple estate, which had the title to the property, to Sebastiano Catalano and his wife, Mary Catalano, of Westerly, R. I., who will move here and run the business.

Well constructed greenhouse at Delta, Colo.; a splendid opportunity for someone who understands the business. Fine local and outside trade. A big territory adjacent to Delta could be better supplied by one with sufficient capital to enlarge houses. Additional information and price made known upon application to Geo. P. Weldon, 1108 22d St., Sacramento, Cal.

For Sale

Eight acres of fine garden land. This fine property consists of about 14,000 feet of modern greenhouses and seven-room cottage; both greenhouses and dwelling are in first-class condition; steam heat and electric light throughout greenhouses and dwelling; city water throughout. Poultry house, 16 x 56; incubator; cellar, 20 x 20; brooding house, 10 x 10; barn, 24 x 24; tool house, 24 x 30. This place is just across the street from city limits, hence low taxes. Price, $12,000.00—$5000.00 cash, balance in payments to suit, or would consider an improved farm for the balance, but must be in the middle states. Sales last April were $900.00, May $1200.00, June $ 00.00. There are two boilers either one will furnish heat enough; one is for a reserve boiler. Reason for selling, want to try farming. For further particulars, apply to

PAGES OF RETAILERS' CARDS

THIS department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

Fred H. Weber,
...Florist...

St. Louis, Mo., September 5, 1914.

Florists' Review,
Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen:-

During the SIX MONTHS from March 4 to September 4 I have received from other Florists, by mail, telegraph or cable, orders to the amount of $513.25 as a result of my advertisement in the Retailers' department of The Review. With the allowance to senders the record for SIX MONTHS is:

Value of orders received----------	$513.25
Less 20% allowed senders--------	102.60
Net value of orders for SIX MONTHS--	410.65

It should be noted that this showing covers the DULL SUMMER MONTHS, when any addition to a Florists's business is decidedly welcome.

Retail Florists not advertising in The Review should profit by this letter.

Respectfully,

F. H. Weber

The Market.

Owing to the hot weather, which set in the early part of last week, the market was filled with an unusually large stock of roses, and although the quality was exceptionally good, the market was so demoralized that there was but little demand for them and many found their way to the rubbish heap. Dahlias have improved in quality and are far more plentiful than they have been. Asters are practically off crop here. There are more yellow and white chrysanthemums and these are meeting with a fair demand. Carnations are a little more plentiful and of a fair quality for this season of the year, but with a marked decrease in funeral work and but few decorations, these are not much needed at present.

Various Notes.

Paul Berkowitz, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia; Maurice Fuld, of Knight & Struck Co., New York, and Maurice Cohen, of Wertheimer Bros., New York, visited the local trade last week.

Alexander Sawyer, formerly of this city, but now manager of the Greensboro Floral Co., of Greensboro, N. C., while on his way to Philadelphia, paid a visit to many of his old friends here and made a round of the greenhouses, placing orders for fall stock.

Frank H. Keefer, who for the last eighteen months has been with Gude Bros. Co., has gone to Des Moines, Ia., to engage in the hardware business with his uncle.

The opening of the new women's outfitting store by J. E. Cunningham Co., on Seventh street, northwest, brought considerable business to a number of the local florists, among whom were J. H. Small & Sons, Gude Bros. Co., O. A. C. Oehmler, the Flower Store and J. R. Freeman.

At the greenhouses at Gallaudet College the heating plant is being taken out and new piping, connected with the college plant, will replace it. Edward Mangum, in charge of the houses, had just got his sweet peas tied up and his carnations started when the change was made.

Twenty-three cases of Holland bulbs intended for planting in the public grounds of Washington came over on the steamer Westerdyck, which also brought a large shipment of bulbs for Fred H. Kramer.

The store of Fred H. Kramer has undergone a complete overhauling and now presents an attractive appearance. Mr. Kramer has had built in the rear of the store a large office for the cashier and a private office for himself. The store has also been repainted throughout.

J. A. Philipps, accompanied by his young son, has gone to Toledo, O., to visit relatives. The Flower Shop, operated by Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Philipps, on Mount Pleasant street, is being reopened for the season. A new Ford delivery car has been ordered, to handle the trade of this store, which will be under the management of C. A. Machen, a brother of Mrs. Philipps.

Considerable interest was manifested last week in the moving pictures which were taken at the time of the Boston convention, at the opening of the Fenway gardens. These films are being shown throughout the United States and are known as Mutual Weekly No. 88 One part of the pictures is devoted to the group of officers and active members who occupied the platform at the opening of the gardens.

Otto Bauer, of the Washington Florists Co., is about to sever his connection with that concern and assume the management of the local branch of the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. Mr. Bauer has been connected with the Washington Florists Co. for about nine years as manager. J. H. Hetherington, who has been his assistant for the last three and one-half years, succeeds to his position. Mr. Hetherington learned the business under H. H. Battles, in Philadelphia. After remaining there for several years he came to this city and first entered the employ of Fred H. Kramer, with whom he remained for nearly two years. C. L. L.

EVANSVILLE, IND.

The Market.

Business has been quite lively in the last half of September. Funerals have been numerous, as well as the openings of the social season. The week of September 21 to 26 was especially good, as the fall style show was held that week and the merchants decorated their stores in grand style. Albert J. Beveridge spoke at Evans hall September 25 and the stage was decorated with palms and ferns in his honor. Roses have improved considerably since the cool nights arrived. Carnations are a little more plentiful, but the stems are short. Outdoor stock looks the worse for wear. Dahlias, however, are good.

Various Notes.

The Wm. Blackman Floral Co. had the stage decorations for the Beveridge address. They also had a number of store decorations for the style show. Their roses and carnations are good and are steadily improving. They find business extra good.

of several large decorations for the style show. Business at their place is good and promises to continue so. Their greenhouses and stock are in fine condition.

W. D. Macer, who was with Mrs. M. L. Doerr, has taken over her store and business. He has had the store repainted and papered and everything is neat and attractive. Since he took the store he has had good business and he can look for better business as soon as the fall season opens. His acquaintances wish him the success that he deserves.

J. C. Elspermann has an excellent business. His greenhouses are nearly full, with lots of stock still to come in from the field. His mums and carnations are in good shape. He had several decorations for style show week.

Louis Fritsch says business is good. He had his share of business for the style show.

Karl Zeidler was busy during style show week with store decorations. His roses and carnations are in fine condition.

Nellie Goodge received a good share of the style show work.

Austin Wallace has been cutting large quantities of asters and has found a ready sale for them. His roses are doing well and the cut is heavy.

C. L. Niednagel has his rose houses in excellent shape and the cut is improving right along.

Henry Seymour has finished building a new smokestack. The old brick stack was blown over during a severe storm in the summer. His mums and carnations are doing finely.

Royston & Fenton are cutting considerable numbers of good Ivory and Bridesmaid roses. One bench of Ivory has been kept going without any rest

The Market.

The wholesale market is improving daily as to supply and quality of stock, but the demand is not up to expectations. The growers are shipping large quantities of seasonable stock to this market, but only the light-colored stock meets with a good demand. Funeral work is about all the retailers have at present. The cooler weather has brought on an improvement in the quality of stock and length of stems. Chrysanthemums are beginning to arrive. Some extra good blooms of Golden Glow and Smith's Advance are seen daily. Roses and carnations will have another rival to contend with for the next six weeks, as cosmos, another head-liner, is coming. Asters are not nearly so plentiful. The quantity of gladioli is slackening up. Roses seem to form the bulk of the stock coming in; the supply in all varieties of these is heavy and only low prices are realized on all grades. Carnations are looking fine and soon will be at their standard quality. Easter lilies and valley are in demand. Dahlias are in heavy supply. As to greens, smilax and asparagus are in demand and fancy ferns hold their own.

Various Notes.

The Retail Florists' Association held a meeting, the first since the summer meetings were discontinued, September 21, at the Washington hotel. President Harry Young was in the chair. There was a good attendance. One new member was added and a lot of business that had accumulated since the last meeting was disposed of. After the meeting the members sat down to a nice lunch. It was agreed that bowling would be taken up after each meeting in the future.

The County Growers' Association will hold its regular monthly meeting October 7, at the Eleven Mile House. Secretary Jos. Deutschmann has sent out a strong notice to each member, which should attract a large attendance.

The Lady Florists' Home Circle spent a pleasant day, September 23, as guests of Mrs. F. W. Bruenig, at Columbia, Ill. The members met at the bridge and proceeded by trolley. On their arrival a splendid lunch was served and the outing will long be remembered. The next regular meeting of the circle will take place October 7, at the home of Mrs. Emil Schray, 4100 Pennsylvania avenue.

The death of Mrs. Chas. Loveridge, as recorded in last week's issue of The Review, was a great shock to the many friends of Mr. Loveridge here, who, with me, extend our heartfelt sympathy to Mr. Loveridge and his children.

The W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. has created a good demand for its white enameled wooden easels. Large orders were shipped to Texas and other points north and south. These easels have taken a strong hold on the local trade.

The Windler Wholesale Floral Co. now has all improvements completed. New telephone booths have been installed and the private office in front is fitted up with new furniture. They handled a large lot of extra fine dahlias and roses last week.

John Held, the south side florist, has his chrysanthemum plants for both cut flowers and pot plants in fine shape. His Chadwick, Golden Chadwick and Golden Wedding promise especially well. All of his houses and his heating system were reconstructed this summer.

Frank Fillmore, Jr., who has been traveling in the west for the last six weeks, returned home September 24 in splendid health. He says his longest stay was in Montana. He likes it so well there that he may make it his home in the near future.

The Brecht Co., makers of florists' refrigerators, is mailing an illustrated catalogue, which explains the merits of the Brecht construction. The book is printed on high-grade paper and finely illustrated.

A call at the store of the St. Louis Seed Co. found the force busy with bulb orders for both local and shipping trade. August Hummert, vice-president of the company, says trade has been exceptionally good.

Wm. C. Smith, with Mrs. Smith, spent a few days last week at Springfield, Ill., attending the Illinois state fair. Mr. Smith was much interested in the large displays of plants and cut flowers.

William Seeger, head of the Mullanphy Flower Co., with Mrs. Seeger, has returned from a two weeks' trip south. They report having had a most enjoyable trip. Otto Sander and "Billy" Gray were in charge of the downtown store in their absence.

The west end branch store of C. Young & Sons Co., at 5512 Waterman avenue, has been put in shape for the coming season. The large show house is being filled with fine plants. This branch is in charge of Wm. C. Young, Jr., and John Young, sons of W. C. Young.

H. O. Miller, who recently came here from Minneapolis, Minn., will open a flower store on Broadway, near Olive street, in the new Boatman's Bank building, this week.

The local trade is much pleased with The Review's new fall dress and it was highly commended on all sides.

There is a great deal of bowling talk among the employees at the different wholesale houses and it would not be surprising if they should form a club for weekly bowling. Already a challenge has been hurled by some of them at the writer, who has agreed to meet any of them and use only his left hand in all the matches.

The nurserymen report large numbers of advance orders for shrubs and trees to replace those killed by the continuously dry summer. The landscape gardeners, too, say they have their hands full of renewal work in the west end.

The usual fall festivities take place next week, with the Veiled Prophet's ball and parade as the main features. The florists' business will undoubtedly profit greatly, as these events create a large demand for cut flower and plant decorations.

E. L. Rodgers, who supplies some of the trade with wire designs, has moved his shop to 806 North Twelfth street.

The St. Louis Florists' Club will hold its regular monthly meeting October 8. President Bourdet says six new applications for membership will be presented. He is looking for a large attendance, as the fall and winter program, as laid out at a recent officers' meeting, will be made known. J. J. B.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

Although there was comparatively little demand last week, except for funeral work and a few small weddings, it may be said that a better tone seems to prevail. While asters still predominate, the evidences are that their sway is practically over and the appearance of carnations and chrysanthemums forewarns the autumnal openings. One of the pleasing features of the summer season just closing has been the increasing popularity of gladioli, large quantities having been disposed of. The dahlia is also gradually coming into favor, especially in the cactus varieties.

I THINK The Review is the greatest paper on earth and a sure money-getter for its advertisers.—H. O. Meikel, Frankfort, Ind.

I WAS flooded with a tremendous torrent of orders for my tomato plants, until that rushing stream, which lasted for three consecutive days, swept away every plant I had in the house, numbering tens of thousands. All of it came through The Review. You have no competitor.—H. J. Potomkin, Muncie, Ind.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

President, Lester L. Morse, San Francisco, Cal.; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

Thirty-third annual convention, San Francisco, Cal., 1915.

THE imports of clover seeds through the port of New York for the week ending September 19 were 142,000 pounds.

IN their novelty list C. C. Morse & Co. say of sweet peas, "We have had a fair crop this season, the first in three years."

WIDENING of the street on which it fronts has made necessary the remodeling of the store of the Hardie Seed Co., at Dallas, Tex.

WE take The Review for the sake of one department, the Seed Trade News, and it is well worth it.—D. O. Coe, Topeka, Kan.

IT would be of far greater benefit to the planter to compel by law the labeling of all seeds with place of origin than it would to require printing the germination test.

FRANK CUTHBERTSON has just reached San Francisco after a visit to his parents at Edinburgh and a call on European seedsmen for his firm, C. C. Morse & Co. Mr. Cuthbertson left the seed ranch in early June.

THE alarm as to sugar beet seed may now subside, along with others. In the week ending September 19, through the port of New York, imports of sugar beet seed were 44,800 pounds, with plenty more on the way.

ENGLAND has forbidden trading with the enemy during the war. Consequently no German seeds will be received in England even via neutral countries, which means that America is about the only market for the 1914 seed crop of Germany.

THE seed trade should push bulb sales with the public, for bedding purposes. Special sales, backed by window displays and good newspaper advertising, will clear a large part of the surplus. It is up to the trade to make American dooryards bloom next spring as never before.

STATISTICS for the port of New York show that the imports classified as "trees and plants" have been unusually large in September, but bulbs are put in this group and account for the greater part of the total. In the week ending September 19 the value of all imports in this group was $126,588.

DUE to the marked failure of the onion set crop in the Louisville, Chillicothe, and other districts in the middle west, prices in the Chicago market show an increase of thirty per cent since August 1. In the Chicago section there was a fair average crop and onion set men consider prospects to be good. Dealers are well sold up. Shipments will be made to southern points immediately following October 1.

J. J. BUDLONG, of the L. A. Budlong Co., of Chicago, is so pressed by duties in connection with his bank and real estate business that he does not find much time to enter actively into the administration of the extensive Budlong gardens at Bowmanville. As the onion set crop is being handled for storage and shipment, Mr. Budlong thinks the prospects for the season are good. He says the

BUY BRITISH SEEDS

THERE IS NO EMBARGO whatever on the export of Seeds from Great Britain, whatever you may have been told. THERE IS NO DIFFICULTY whatever in the shipment of Seeds in the usual way from Great Britain, whatever you might expect. This is owing to the fact that our shipping is under the protection of the British Fleet everywhere, excepting in the Baltic Sea, and also because the British government has arranged to insure against War Risks at reasonable rates—the present rate being 2½%, the probability being that in the near future it will be less.

It looks as if there will be no Seeds from Germany, and possibly none from France. Our own Seeds are at your service now, and the produce of our contracts is at your disposition from harvest 1915 and 1916. We can make both Firm Delivery offers and subject to crop offers.

We are in a good position as suppliers, and if you confide your order to us you will have every reason to be satisfied with the execution of same, and we feel sure that you will look to us for a large portion of your supplies for the future.

As far as our Seeds go, there is no embargo and no difficulty unless you yourselves create one. In your own interests, we beg you not to do so, but to write us at once for quotations. Do it now.

Of English Seeds, Kelway's Seeds are known to be the best. They are offered on lowest Wholesale terms to every genuine Seedsman and Importer in the United States, and, with one notable exception, to no one else.

Kelway, Langport, is sufficient, by mail or cable. We can quote all Seeds, particularly:

ALFALFA	CAULIFLOWER	MUSTARD	RUTABAGA
ANISE	CELERY	PEPPER	SPINACH
BEET	KALE	RADISH	TURNIP
CABBAGE	KOHL RABI	RAPE	VETCH
CARROT

And we make a specialty of "Choice" and other Flower Seeds. The time is undoubtedly a critical one for the Importer, and it will be still more critical next season. We shall esteem it an honor if we can be of assistance to any American Seedsmen in this time of crisis.

Please write to our Representative, MR. OWEN F. TROTT, care of Messrs. Thos. Meadows & Co., 8-10 Bridge St., New Battery, New York, up to November 10, or direct to FIRE LEADS TO SUIT.

In its suit for $70,000 damages filed against the Boatmen's bank, of St. Louis, the St. Louis Seed Co. states that, as a result of the falling of the west wall of the building occupied by the Boatmen's bank and the Missouri Athletic Club, March 17, the company's business was damaged $16,000, part of $500 cash was lost when the store collapsed, a mailing list valued at $16,000 was damaged, a repair deposit of $2,000 on the quarters was forfeited, $5,077.32 was expended in moving to a new location, and a new, 10-year lease on another building had to be contracted, which compels the company to pay $300,000 more rent in ten years. The seed company asserts that the Boatmen's bank had ample opportunity between March 9, the day of the fire, and March 17, the day the wall fell, to shore it up or strengthen it.

THE SEED SITUATION.

Here is the view of a New York seed house, covering the trade conditions as they seem at the close of September:

"There is no difficulty this season in procuring French or Holland bulbs with the exception that a great many firms are being short-shipped from Holland, not on account of the war but from the fact that no Hollander supplies all bulbs for which he takes orders and must necessarily go to the large and small growers in his section to buy shortages. This year the information we have is that the Hollanders are not doing this, but are selling and sending out their own stock from the fact that they have no money to buy other growers' stocks.

"As to the seed question, there are practically sufficient stocks of flower seeds in this country to carry us over another season even if none were shipped from Germany or France. This also applies to vegetable seeds, with few exceptions. Most seedsmen carry over stocks of seeds which hold their germination sufficient for two seasons, to cover themselves from such conditions as are prevailing at the present time, also from possible shortages. Then again, the southern and California trade require delivery of seeds from two to three months earlier than they are required in the middle west and east.

"As for sweet peas, stocks will be scarce, but we think there will be sufficient to go around, with few exceptions. Of course the price of sweet peas has been raised considerably in the last few years. For instance, we used to sell mixed sweet pea seed at wholesale at 25 cents per pound. Today one cannot contract for much less than 40 cents or 50 cents per pound. The market price today for mixed sweet pea seed, common grandifloras, is 60 cents per pound.

"It is recognized in the trade that when business is poor in the United States, the vegetable seed trade is good, as it is supposed that many people grow

EARLY-BLOOMING GLADIOLI

Do you want the earliest-blooming free-flowering bulbs in the States? We can supply you. These bulbs produce magnificent blooms fully three weeks earlier than any so far grown in this country. Specially suitable for forcing.

What They Did for Us

War Cry! War Cry! War Cry!

Don't for goodness' sake shed any more tears over the scarcity of French Radish Seed in America. The substantial firm of S. Bryson Ayres Co. has plenty of American-grown seed—not of the "just-as-good" kind, but of the kind that sells on its own merit. There are four good reasons why you should buy this seed, namely:

1st. It has pleased the most critical market gardeners.
2d. It is cheaper delivered to any part of the U. S. than imported seed.
3d. It is an AMERICAN PRODUCT.
4th. It is not for any one particular section only—it's for the East, West, North and South.

We appeal to every Seedsman to try a few pounds now and distribute it among your customers, and within a few weeks they will have had results; then you can tell better how many hundred pounds you desire.

NOT HOW CHEAP
BUT HOW GOOD

Quantities

The Circus Fakir, nutty, batty or bughouse, as you prefer, is a king beside the forked-tongue bulb salesman. Recently a florist wanted fifty thousand Paper Whites, when one of these coyotes came along with his bull—said Ward & Co. could not supply such quantities—that they only advertised such low prices when they had but a few bulbs left—that they did it to antagonize their competitors, etc., all of which is, of course, untrue. So that you may not be misled we may say when the ad first appeared we had over a million surplus Paper Whites, and at this writing we have a half-million left. If you doubt it, just send along your check and see how quick you get delivery. We also have over 600 cases Formosum, mostly 7/9, which we are advertising at attractive prices for immediate shipment. Everything we advertise is strictly first class unless we say otherwise, and you need not be afraid we cannot supply you enough, for as a matter of fact we usually have more on hand than other firms for shipment on short notice. So next time you have patience to give your time to a knocker, see that he ties his bull outside, or take a lot of seltzer with whatever he says.

THE GIGANTEUM CROP.

Japan is not increasing the output of giganteum bulbs—the crop varies slightly from year to year according to the season, but the acreage and production are rather more steady than is the case with most other trade commodities. The crop is around 20,000,000 bulbs per year.

Until quite recently Europe, principally England, used more Japanese lily bulbs than America did. The figures were around 9,000,000 for Europe and 7,500,000 for America, with the rest of the world using the rest. In the last few years Europe has been using rather less bulbs, while the consumption has been increasing in the United States, with the result that now in a normal year America uses about 9,000,000 giganteums and Europe about 7,500,000. What the showing will be this year cannot be foretold, as Europe either cannot take or does not wish to take the usual proportion and the only other possible market is in America.

CATALOGUE-MAKERS' PROBLEMS.

Perplexities ordinarily disturb the catalogue man at this season, for he never can be sure, at the date of starting his book, just what deliveries he will receive on many important items, or what prices he should ask. But the problems of the ordinary year are as nothing to the troubles of the present season and the 1915 books will be among the most interesting ever put out by the seed trade.

Added to the ever present question of supply and prices, there are this year two far worse problems. First come the questions involved with the application of the parcel post, which will this season affect the mailing of books and seeds. Catalogues over eight ounces in weight must this year pay the zone rates—a book that weighs nine ounces as much as one that weighs a pound. This makes many troubles, each man's different from the other fellow's. There are some who will cut down their books to get inside the flat rate limit of eight ounces, and, indeed, this seems the wiser course, but others, who still believe in the virtue of the bulky volume, will pursue an opposite course and increase their weights to the even pound through additional pages or the use of heavier paper.

Coupled with this problem as to the weight and postage on the catalogue is the question of postage on the seeds.

This will be the first issue of the books since the parcel post zone rates became applicable to seeds in packages weighing eight ounces or over. Prices heretofore have been based on the same cost of delivery everywhere in the United States, provided shipment was made by mail, but now the postage will vary greatly. How to price the items in a catalogue of national distribution has become a serious question. If priced to cover local delivery there would be a loss on parcels to the distant zones, while prices to cover the longest haul would tend to turn the trade in the direction of the man who distributes his catalogue in only a local territory. The whole problem of the parcel post is a difficult one and, seemingly, the arrangement is one that will foster the local seed house and handicap the national one.

The last load to be put on the shoulders of the catalogue man is the one caused by the European war. It will have its effect all along the line. There are, of course, certain houses that are strong enough and far-sighted enough to carry two seasons' supply of the articles that do not deteriorate in that time, but a far greater number are dependent on seasonable deliveries. This puts the catalogue man up against the guesswork of figuring out in his own mind what stock he will receive from abroad, what he will have to get along without, and how to handle the whole situation. Then comes the question of price. Of course seeds will cost more, on the average considerably more, but what will the other catalogue men do? Experience has shown that retail catalogue prices are not nearly so susceptible to change as are the cost prices. But with so many influences at work the pricing of the 1915 books becomes a matter of peculiar difficulty and wide general interest.

RATEKIN CASE SETTLED.

The Iowa Supreme court has just denied a motion for a rehearing in the case of the Natchez Drug Co., Natchez, Miss., against the Ratekin Seed House, of Shenandoah, Ia., reported in The Review for September 17, thereby closing the case in favor of the defendant seedsman.

This case is of special interest from the fact that the 770 bushels of seed corn in question were sold without the use of the usual disclaimer.

The buyer resold most of his purchase. Complaints were made and he allowed claims, seeking to pass them back to the original seller. The court said, in part: "To recover under an implied warranty that the seed was fit

READY WITH THE GOODS

The best Snap on the market.—Theo. Wedell, Gresham, Oregon.

Send seven packets of seed of S. P. Snaps. Have had great success, indoors and out.—F. J. Weiss, Port Jervis, N. Y.

Can't get along without them.—G. M. Wilson, So. Lyon, Mich.

Your S. P. Snaps are certainly fine. Could have sold ten times as many.—F. C. Dowd, Madison, Connecticut.

October is here and we are ready to deliver the goods, which, in this case, are, principally, SEEDLING plants of my original SILVER PINK SNAPDRAGON. They are perfect plants, perfectly grown, perfectly healthy, and perfectly uniform in size and quality. The price is only $4.00 per 100; $35.00 per 1,000. Less than 100, 5c each.

While we have a large stock of seedling S. P. plants, we would advise an early order. If your bench is not quite ready it is better to secure plants and have them on your premises when space is empty. With cooler weather and our expert packing, plants will carry safely any distance.

To those not acquainted with our seedling S. P. will say that it is proving better than we have ever said. It is coming to be the ONE snapdragon. Its color is that soft, silvery shell pink that is so generally demanded. It stands alone for productiveness, giving twice as many blossoms as any variety in existence. It produces branches from the base, thus assuring long, straight stems, and not with a bow, as is frequent from cuttings. Can furnish hundreds of unsolicited testimonials. Count off your space and order today. You will be proud of a bench of SEEDLING Silver Pink Snaps.

As the snapdragon is a specialty with us we have several colors. Our new Garnet Gem is a most attractive one. We offer rooted cuttings at $6.00, and plants at $8.00 per 100. Will soon have ready yellow and white. Rooted cuttings of Nelrose, $4.00, and new seed of Nelrose and Buxton's at 35c per pkt.

Sow any time now seeds of my Silver Pink for spring blossoms and that bumper Memorial crop. Price, $1.00 per pkt.; 3 for $2.50; 7 for $5.00. All orders cash. Free cultural directions.

for the purpose for which it was sold, there should be substantive evidence that it was not, in fact, fit for the purpose for which it was sold. A mere complaint that it was unfit does not establish its unfitness. It would be a harsh rule that required wholesale seed houses to refund to their customers the purchase price of seed corn upon mere complaint that the seed corn was not fit for the purposes for which it was sold. To hold such a rule would leave the wholesaler absolutely at the mercy of the purchasers of the retailer, who, for the purpose of protecting his own trade, was willing to refund to his purchasers, upon mere complaint, the amount paid for the corn, at the expense of the wholesaler."

The case appears to have fallen down in the matter of evidence of the seeds' unfitness.

Club Meeting.

The September meeting of the Horticultural Society, held at the Chamber of Commerce hall, was well attended. President Peter Chopin was in the chair. In the absence of the secretary, C. R. Panter, who is on a trip to Chicago, Paul Abele was appointed to keep the minutes. An important matter was brought before the members, concerning the coming spring flower show. The discussion will be settled at the next meeting. Mr. Dameron exhibited a new nephrolepis type, which will be useful for fern dish work. A certificate of merit was awarded. Henry W. Illenberger exhibited the new canna, Firebird, which he says has proved to be the best of the red-flowering varieties.

The meeting adjourned until October 17, when it is expected there will be a large attendance.

er and well-known florist, was married September 16. His bride was Miss Bertha C. Kreher. The marriage took place at the bride's home, which is one of the spacious and handsome residences of this city. Many florists were present. The house was beautifully decorated with palms, ferns and White Killarney roses. The bride's bouquet, which was a present from Henry Scheuerman, was one of the most artistically arranged bunches ever made in New Orleans. It consisted of orchids and valley. The maid of honor carried White Killarney roses and the bridesmaid carried Killarney. After the toast was made and congratulations were bestowed on the newly married couple, they escaped through the rear entrance to avoid the rice shower and took the Merry Widow train to Florida, where they spent their honeymoon.

NEWPORT, R. I.

Three important committees were appointed at the monthly meeting of the Newport Horticultural Society, September 21. The society appointed Bruce Butterton, A. S. Meikle and William Gray a committee to coöperate with the American Sweet Pea Society in arranging for the show to be held here next summer. The Newport Garden Society made a liberal donation toward the expenses of a course of lectures that are to be a feature of the winter and James Robertson, James Bond and William Gray were made a lecture committee. The third committee, consisting of A. S. Meikle, Winfred Sisson, Bruce Butterton, C. M. Bugholt, James Robertson, John B. Urquhart and Alexander McLellan, was appointed to assist in securing decorations for the coming Y. M. C. A. bazaar.

WINTER-FLOWERING ORCHID SWEET PEA, "MRS. A. A. SKACH."

My Original Winter-flowering Orchid or Spencer Sweet Pea
revolutionized the cut flower market last winter. It has brought higher prices than the best carnation, from the start to finish. They will be more sought for this year.

Mr. A. C. Zvolanek, Lompoc, Cal. Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 29, 1914.
Dear Sir: We handled your Winter-flowering Orchid Peas last year in quantity. We sold nearly all of the Peas from Messrs. A. Harvey & Sons, which firm no doubt you know very well. There was nothing in the cut flower line last winter that sold more readily than the Orchid Peas. We believe that all the growers who had your Orchid-flowering Peas last winter had a most profitable crop. As you know, some of the retailers are rather slow to take up something new. After the first purchase of Orchid Peas, however, they invariably bought them in preference. * * *
The Leo Niessen Company.

On account of the War, I will not take any chances to ship many of my foreign orders. This will enable me to send all American orders in full of the following varieties, besides having some to spare:
Pink and White Orchid, White Orchid, Mrs. A. A. Skach (clear pink), Orchid Beauty (dark rose), Venus (white, pink blush), Mrs. M. Spanolin (white), Mrs. Jos. Manda (light pink), all, 1 oz., $4.00.
Lavender Nora, the best and largest clear lavender in cultivation, 1 oz., $1.50.

WINTER-FLOWERING SPENCER MIXTURE
This consists only of the best light pink, pink, white, salmon, lavender and very few dark. Every commercial grower should plant at least one house of these, and he will be taking no risk. 1 oz., $3.00; 4 oz., $10.00; 1 lb., $30.00. Ask for special prices on 10 lbs. or more.
You need one ounce of the Winter Orchid Sweet Pea seed for 100-foot row.
Commercial Sweet Pea Culture, 50c, free with every $5.00 order.
We have all other Winter Grandifloras.

BODDINGTON'S "QUALITY" CHRISTMAS-FLOWERING

SWEET PEAS

WE ARE SUPER-HEADQUARTERS

All true stocks of Winter-flowering Sweet Peas will again be scarce this season. The winter-flowering Spencer types are almost a total failure owing to the exceptional season in California this spring, and through the ravages of Aphis we regret that we are unable to offer any seed with the following exceptions. Our advice to intending planters is to order at once.

REGRET THAT WE ARE SOLD OUT OF YARRAWA AND ANITA WEHRMAN AND ALL OTHER VARIETIES WITH THE EXCEPTION OF THE FOLLOWING. ORDER TODAY AND SECURE YOUR SEED—WHILE THE STOCKS LAST.

ROSE QUEEN "ROSE QUEEN" is Orchid-flowering, borne on long stems, extremely free and early and of pink color most attractive, is a decided acquisition, and like all meritorious novelties is sure to be in demand wherever grown. Prices:—Trade pkt., $1.00; 3 trade pkts. for $2.75; 1 oz., $12.00.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

TACOMA, WASH.

The Market.

Business has been good this summer and the florists are looking forward to an excellent winter. The outside flowers are nearly all off the market and greenhouse stock is scarce and of poor quality. A few mums are to be seen and are taken as soon as they are shown.

Various Notes.

A. A. Hinze has some fine stock this year, which shows that his foreman is on the job.

The Hayden-Watson Co. reports good business and says that things look fine at its place at Gardenville, where large greenhouses are operated.

The Smith Floral Co. says that more business could be done, but that there is no reason for complaint.

The Florists' Club recently took a ride to see A. Jacobson at the Western Hospital for the Insane. Mr. Jacobsen is the florist there. The greenhouses show that he is capable. The stock is in good shape. Among the things that were interesting were the ripe bananas that Mr. Jacobson grew in the greenhouse. The hospital grounds are in charge of the florist, who propagates the stock that he uses. In one bed there are over 6,000 plants; they form the letters W. W. H. I. in the center of a large circle about thirty feet in diameter. The florists all complimented Mr. Jacobson on his good work. We visited the farm run in connection with the hospital and found it modern in all ways. S.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

Business went with a rush last week. Fashion show week is always a good one, and in addition there were many good weddings and the usual amount of funeral work. The chrysanthemum season has started auspiciously, a good demand leading to firm prices on the better grades of stock. Glory of Pacific is one of the best early pinks here. Nagoya is good on the second crown bud, but poor on the earliest. Crocus is an attractive yellow. Dahlias still keep up a fine show and sell fairly well. Roses are fair and in plentiful supply. Carnations are good. Orchids and gardenias are scarce. Valley is good and in fair supply, the demand keeping pace with it. Prices are in favor of the growers, $4.50 per hundred being the price now to retailers. Centaureas continue to increase in favor, owing to their lasting qualities. Forget-me-nots look pretty in the windows alongside Cecile Brunner roses. All classes of greens are plentiful and of good quality. Plants are scarce except Boston ferns and coleus.

Various Notes.

The Jewish New Year's day gave Morris Goldenson an excuse for doing nothing. I mention this as a side issue, for many less important events have sent Morris fishing or hunting or made him otherwise absent himself from business. He has even been known to do these things without pressure of any kind being brought to bear, but this time he was able to prove an alibi, and I give it for what it is worth. Without casting any aspersions on Mr. Goldenson, I think I am right in saying that Miss Lyle, the bookkeeper, was much more missed September 21 than he was. Everyone hopes Miss Lyle's indisposition was slight and temporary, but we have no such hopes for Morris. Meanwhile John Gordon kept things running on an extremely busy day in spite of these and other absentees.

E. House and E. Copley have taken the University Nursery, at Thirty-seventh street and Vermont avenue, and intend to use the greenhouses for cucumber growing.

The chrysanthemum season is evidently in full swing at the store of the California Evergreen Co., 316 South Broadway. My visit was timed soon after the stock arrived on a busy day and the flowers were magnificent. The most remarkable thing about the flowers is the great substance, which tends to long keeping.

O. C. Saakes says business is picking up finely and the staff has had to stick close, getting down at 6 a. m. and not leaving until quite late in the evening.

The windows at Darling's Flower Shop for the fashion show were exceedingly attractive this year, some small flowering mums being unusually pretty.

Mrs. Garrett, of Eagle Rock, has been testing out a considerable number of new chrysanthemums this season and is finding a spirited demand for some of the novelties.

H. N. Gage Co. reports good business. H. N. is becoming an expert chauffeur and evidently saves a good deal of time in getting to and from the nursery.

Frank Lichtenberger's windows continue to draw the crowds and incidentally the business. His fashion show window was a winner.

Judging by the big stacks of boxes leaving for all points of the compass, business must be extra good at the store of S. Murata & Co. Both Mr. Murata and Mr. Newman are always up to their eyes in work. The stock shown here is good. The store is one of the best in town for keeping and showing stock, being light, yet cool, and the flowers look their best there.

In asking you to discontinue our present ad we wish to say it has given us very good results, and that you will hear from us again when carnation cuttings are in season.—HOLLYWOOD GARDENS, Hollywood, Wash., Sept. 22, 1914.

Work is progressing rapidly in the new store of Smith & Dieterich, at Seventh and Figueroa streets. An extra large icebox is being put in, and, with the spacious windows, a fine showroom is assured.

H. J. Gilbert, of the East Side Nursery, is getting out after landscape work as well as looking after his new place. Miss Gilbert also is evidently a worker, taking charge in her father's absence. It is pretty safe to prophesy success here.

Howard & Smith obtained the contract for supplying the Homburger decorations for fashion show week, and the big white store looked quite attractive.

The Redondo Floral Co. had several good weddings last week.

The demand for decorative plants for hire was heavy at the nursery of the Germain Seed & Plant Co. last week, large kentias being in favor. M. L. Germain is on a vacation.

Fred Sperry is starting in the wholesale business in the downtown district, a location on Winston street being under consideration.

The Whitmani ferns now being shipped from Hill's Nursery are extra fine, heavy stock; short and deep green; good, salable plants. Mr. Hill is successful with this popular variety.

H. R. Richards.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

As the autumn season advances retail business increases daily. Social functions are increasing in number and in size. For the coming month several large decorations are booked.

Chrysanthemums are improving daily. A series of warm days brought in considerably more blooms than were expected at this time. Among the leading varieties are Crocus, Monrovia and Queen. Some of the first-named measure eighteen inches in circumference. Everything indicates that the chrysanthemum trade on the wholesale market will be regulated this year. The growers have graded their stock carefully and are pooling their crops and not bargaining as in previous years. They provide the purchaser with a tag indicating the grade of stock purchased, and as the purchaser leaves the market he is required to pass through a gate and make

MONROVIA

For several years this has been the best seller on the Los Angeles and other local markets, and I have decided to offer it to the trade as long as the stock lasts at $5.00 per ounce.

Monrovia begins to flower when only about one foot high and continues to bloom profusely until it reaches 8 feet high outdoors. It will make a splendid greenhouse variety, as the buds do not drop under any conditions. The color is a deep purple outside, inside heliotrope, and it is unquestionably the finest winter-blooming purple in existence. The seed has been carefully re-selected from large pods only. It was gathered in April and May in the foothill section, and is consequently mature and of high germinating power. It is an exceptionally stout grower and throws long stemmed flowers all through the season, four to six flowers to the stem. This offer will be withdrawn as soon as present stock is exhausted.

Field Roses

It is quite within the line of possibilities that Nurserymen and Florists who depend upon a stock of ROSES FROM EUROPE will be without roses this season if that is their only source of supply. It may be that American-grown stock at fair prices will look awfully good to many of you. How would it be to engage a fair stock now, before the unusually heavy demand clean up the market on choice sorts?

payment for his flowers at a settled price. If this system could be established in the sale of all flowers on the market, it would not be long before uniform retail prices would be established.

Of roses the best are Killarney Queen and Killarney. Aaron Ward is not so good as it might be. There are no Beauties to speak of. The first shipment of Lady Hillingdon was brought in by our largest rose grower, and this, being new this season, sold pretty well. Orchids of all kinds and varieties are at a premium. Cattleyas are practically unobtainable, and the demand for them is great. The retailers await with anxiety the arrival of labiata, our next variety.

There is still plenty of valley available, and it sells well. Violets are becoming more plentiful, but still lack quality. Carnations are plentiful and fairly long-stemmed; the reds are particularly good. Lilium rubrum is on the wane, and next week will probably be gone.

Various Notes.

The good work in connection with the reception and entertainment of the S. A. F. next year continues. A ways and means committee of thirty leading florists and nurserymen met Friday night, September 25. A substantial subscrip-

The Market.

While there is a noticeable and most gratifying increase in trade generally among the retailers, business will not be really paying until after a good, hard freeze, which may not be for another month. To date there have been several light frosts, but nothing heavy enough to kill the outside flowers. The cooler weather, with fall rains, has had a decidedly beneficial effect on sweet peas, dahlias and asters. Roses are of good fall quality, the only drawback being that the demand is not at all times equal to the supply. Carnations are being eagerly sought, the comparatively few that are coming in being quickly snatched up. Many of the growers have chrysanthemums of good quality on the market, but the best ones are still those coming from California.

Various Notes.

Olsson & Bernson's display of dahlias at the interstate fair was one of the features. It paid them well, as they booked many orders for roots for spring delivery.

The new flower shop conducted by the Spokane Florist Co., in the Davenport hotel, opened its doors last week. It is in the personal charge of Eugene Szuchiewicz, a member of the firm, who reports a most gratifying business during the opening week.

Samuel Younkin and family, with L. B. Hill, visited the farm of J. E. Monroe for the purpose of inspecting the splendid sweet peas and dahlias grown there. Mr. Monroe makes a specialty of the best in everything, quite the best thing on the farm being the world's champion Holstein cow. The cow being as temperamental as a prima donna, admission to her quarters was denied. However, the sight of the sweet peas and dahlias well repays time spent for the trip, for the best of the named varieties are here grown to perfection. Mr. Monroe has a

The Market.

Fair business along all lines in the flower stores has been experienced during the last week. There is scarcity of stock in some varieties, but this is more desirable than recent conditions, and now there is not so much to throw away as of late. Carnations continue scarce; little young stock is producing yet, but the old plants are producing fairly well and the quality in some, if not all, cases is good. Roses are short of stem and there is no great demand for them. Chrysanthemums are selling well, but there is no great rush for them, and California stock is mostly on offer. Asters are good yet and there is a fair supply coming in. Some sweet peas are still being sold, but they, as well as gladioli, are not coming in abundantly. There is a fair sale for ferns, but other plants in pots are not much asked for, and there are few flowering plants offered.

Dahlia Show.

The first show of the Pacific Northwest Dahlia Society was held in the Bon Marche Friday and Saturday, September 18 and 19. The show in point of number of entries and quality of exhibits was a decided success, but the attendance of the public was far below expectations, and as a result the society will be considerably deficient in the matter of funds. NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

A MEETING of the Gulf Coast Nurserymen's Association was held at the Great Southern hotel, Gulfport, Miss., September 17, at which President Theo. Bechtel, of Ocean Springs, Miss., presided and Robertson Palmer acted as secretary. The citrus canker and the proposed quarantine on grapefruit and Citrus trifoliata stock were discussed at length.

ONE of the largest exhibits of nursery stock at the California state fair was that of the Silva-Bergtholdt Co., proprietors of the Placer Nurseries, at Newcastle, Cal. Leading varieties of deciduous trees planted in California made up the display. J. E. Bergtholdt, head of the concern, was in charge. This company has 600 acres in nursery stock and 900 acres in bearing orchards.

EUROPEAN STOCK IS COMING.

The pessimistic predictions in regard to this season's imports of nursery stock are not likely to come true. Those who declared there would be no stock for the trade from European countries this fall are now learning their error. Some stock is already actually in this country and more is on the water. How large the receipts will be in comparison with other years cannot even be guessed at. It is possible that what has proved true in the case of the seedsmen may prove true with the nurserymen, namely, that stock that was expected to be scarce has proved more plentiful than ever before, owing to the stock intended for other countries in Europe being shipped to the United States. He is a rash man, however, who would at the present moment make a bet one way or the other.

On the steamer Nieuw Amsterdam, from Rotterdam, which arrived at New York September 21, there were a number of consignments of nursery stock. Five cases of peony roots came to F. B. Vandegrift & Co. The other consignments, which were of trees, were as follows:

Consignee.	Cases.
Lang, R. F.	44
MacNiff Horticultural Co.	31
Smith, C. T.	26

CALIFORNIANS TO MEET.

Will Hold Fourth Annual Meeting.

The California Association of Nurserymen will hold its fourth annual meeting October 15 to 17 at the U. S. Grant hotel, San Diego. Preparations have been made for a meeting of unusual interest, and the program contains much that should prove of value to the nurserymen of the state.

The first two days of the meeting will be given over to the transacting of business and to papers and discussions. The third day, Saturday, will be spent in pleasure. In the morning at 9:30 the grounds and buildings of the Panama-California exposition will be visited; at 12:00 a picnic lunch will be served at the Mission Cliff Park and Gardens, and at 1:30 will start an automobile ride to points of interest. A special entertainment feature has been prepared by the Pasadena Board of Trade for those who stop off at that city on their way home. Monday, October 19, an automobile ride to the public and private plant collections of Pasadena and environs will be given. Those who plan to go should hand their names to D. W. Coolidge before the convention adjourns.

Members of the association are to have the benefit of reduced railroad rates; a fare and one-third will be the cost of the round trip from all Pacific coast points, on the receipt-certificate plan.

Splendid facilities have been obtained at the Grant hotel for staging exhibits and the association's display should be a large one. All exhibits should be sent by prepaid express to E. Benard, care Harris Seed Co., 1724 F street, San Diego, so as to reach him not later than Wednesday, October 14.

The Program.

Questions in regard to nursery topics and allied subjects will be submitted to the meetings, giving an opportunity for individual members to bring up points in addition to those treated by the papers. The program in full is as follows:

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 15, 9:00 A. M.

The Market.

Standing at the opening of a new season, it seems that the summer has been fully as good as usual, from a retail point of view. The business has been largely funeral work, with a few wedding orders, but most of the stores have had as good a total as ever and some are able to report an increase. Stock has been more plentiful than in other summers and prices lower.

The first frost is expected to put real life into the trade and everyone looks forward to a fine winter, as the result of the prosperous conditions on the farms.

Various Notes.

The Whitted Floral Co. has disposed of its lease in the Radisson hotel building and will put all its energies into developing trade for its two other stores, at 932 Nicollet avenue and 34 South Fifth street. This florist had a nice order for decorating for the show that opened at the Auditorium September 28.

The Florists' Club will hold its annual meeting October 6, at the store of Rice Bros. Nomination and election take place that night; installation, November 3.

Perl Bros., landscape gardeners and florists, is a new firm here. F. H. Perl recently resigned as city forester.

W. Desmond feels well satisfied with the trend of trade. With his improved facilities he expects to make a big increase in the Donaldson flower business this season.

DENVER.

The Market.

Outdoor stock is nearly gone. A few dahlias and gladioli are yet to be had, but they are rather poor. Carnations are getting to be a little more plentiful and the quality is getting better. Roses are good, and just about enough are coming in to meet the demand. Some exceptionally good Beauties were seen last week. Lilies are in good demand, but the supply is rather short. A few violets are beginning to come in and are eagerly sought for. Pot plants seem to be daily increasing in popularity, with Primula obconica in the lead. Good ferns and rubber plants are easily disposed of.

Various Notes.

Mrs. B. C. Robinson has sold her flower store at La Junta, Colo. She is taking a much needed rest at the Lakewood club now, but expects to enter business again in Denver sometime in the future.

K. Carlson, one of the employees in the landscape department of the Park Floral Co., had a serious accident a few days ago. While riding a motorcycle, he ran into a touring car, completely demolishing the motorcycle and taking a wheel off the touring car. Mr. Carlson is confined to his home with a broken ankle as a result of the accident.

W. D. Black says business is quite satisfactory at the Bargain Flower Store.

Billy Sunday, the famous evangelist, is in Denver, conducting a series of meetings. He unconsciously gave the trade a boost by declaring Friday, September 25, Mothers' day, and asking that everyone wear a carnation on that day. Several thousand carnations were sold as a result.

John A. Jensen, manager of the landscape department of the Park Floral Co., is back in the city after a six weeks' visit in the east.

Emil Glauber has done a great deal of repairing on his range this summer and he has everything in tiptop shape. His roses are looking exceptionally fine.

Frank Zenz, formerly at the Elitch-Long Greenhouses, has erected a range at 4781 Perry street. He is growing roses and carnations. The stock is looking fine. R. S.

East Palestine, O.—Spanabel & Sons are much pleased with their success last season with Pelargonium Easter Greeting and say: "It is the best thing in its line we ever saw; every florist should get next to it."

CARNATIONS

We have the following varieties in nice, bushy, fair-sized plants, full of breaks and in nice growing condition:

100 Rosette.....$5.00 per 100
200 St. Nicholas..... 5.00 per 100
300 Pocahontas..... 6.00 per 100

POINSETTIAS

B. Comte (Medium). Brilliant French purple, with crimson-carmine shadings. 85 cts. per doz.; $6.00 per 100.
Coquelicot (Dwarf). A fine pure scarlet, with crimson-red eye. 85 cts. per doz.; $6.00 per 100.
Diadem (Dwarf). A fine dwarf, pure white.
Eclaireur (Tall). Brilliant rosy magenta, with large lighter halo.
George A. Strohlein (Medium). Bright scarlet, with crimson-red eye; does not bleach. $1.00 per doz.; $7.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1,000.
Henry Murger (Tall). White, crimson-carmine center.
H. O. Wijers (Tall). White, with bright crimson-carmine eye.
Henry Marcel (Medium). Pure red, with bright salmon shadings.
Jeanne d'Arc (Tall). A good standard late white.
Jules Cambon (Medium). Bright rosy magenta, with large white center and light halo.
La Vague (Medium). Pure Mauve, with aniline-red eye.
L'Erenement (Dwarf). Orange scarlet overlaid with salmon-pink.
Louise Abbema (Dwarf). Very large dwarf, pure white, fine form.
Mme. Paul Dutrie (Tall). A delicate lilac-rose, reminding one of some of the beautiful soft pink Orchids.
Mrs. Jenkins (Tall). The best tall early white for massing.
Obergartner Wittig (Medium). Bright magenta, with crimson-carmine eye; large flower and truss; one of the best.
Professor Virchow (Medium). Bright carmine, overlaid with orange scarlet.
R. P. Struthers (Tall). Rosy carmine, with claret-red eye, fine.
Selma (Tall). Large flower, pale rose mauve, with claret-red eye.
Siebold (Tall). Bright vermilion-red overlaid with orange scarlet; crimson-red eye, 85 cts. per doz.; $6.00 per 100.
Sunshine (Dwarf). Large, aniline-red with crimson-red eye and light halo.
Von Hochberg (Tall). Bright French purple, one of the finest dark colored varieties. $1.00 per doz.; $7.00 per 100.
Von Lassburg (Medium). The purest white in cultivation, individual flowers larger than any other white.
Vesuvius (Dwarf). Pure red, with bright purple eye.
Price. Any of the above General Collection, except where noted, 75 cts. per doz.; $5.00 per 100; $40.00 per 1000.

New Varieties of Phlox

Europa. A white variety with very decided crimson-carmine eye; the individual flowers as well as the trusses are very large, entirely distinct.
Elizabeth Campbell. Very bright salmon-pink, with lighter shadings and dark crimson eye; an entirely new and much-wanted shade in Phlox.
Frau Anton Buchner. The finest white variety yet introduced, having the largest truss and individual flower; of dwarf habit.
Gefion. A new color in Phloxes, a tender peach-blossom pink with bright rose eye. $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100.
Manzelbrunner. A very large bright soft pink, with a large white eye.
Rynstrom. An improved form of the popular variety Pantheon; fine for massing, of a Paul Neyron Rose color.
Rosenberg. Bright reddish-violet, with blood-red eye, large truss and individual flowers as large as a silver dollar.
Rheinlander. A beautiful salmon-pink with flowers and trusses of immense size, the color of the flower is intensified by a very decided eye of a deep claret-red. $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100.
W. C. Egan. One of the best and largest flowering varieties in our collection, panicles of immense size, of a delicate pleasing soft shade of lilac which is illuminated by a large bright solferino-red eye. $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100.
Thor. Bright orange scarlet, overlaid with salmon pink with deep claret-red eye. $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100.
Widar. A splendid improvement on Edmond Rostand; in color a light reddish-violet, with very large white center, which intensifies the color.
Tragedie. Deep brilliant carmine with blood-red eye. $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100.
Wanadis. Entirely distinct, a mottling of white and light violet, reminding one of the native Phlox Divaricata Canadensis. The color is intensified by a bright reddish-purple eye, a strong grower, producing trusses of immense size. $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100.
Price. Any of the above varieties, except where noted, $1.00 per doz.; $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

Early Flowering Hardy Phloxes (P. Suffruticosa).

While this type does not contain the rich colors which are a feature of the other well-known sorts, it is invaluable on account of coming into bloom in May, or fully six weeks earlier than the others, and continuing throughout the season.
Miss Lingard. The grand, free-flowering early white.
Hercules. Bright rosy lilac.
Mrs. Dalrymple. White shaded rose; scarlet eye.
Ninon. Deep rosy lilac.
$1.00 per doz.; $7.00 per 100; $60.00 per 1000.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.

The Market.

Business in general has been more than quiet during the week just past. There have been exceptionally few sales for this time of year and it is hoped that business will pick up soon.

Up to this time there has been no frost, and therefore the outdoor stock is still with us. This fact, of course, decreases the sales of greenhouse-grown stock. In the event of a heavy frost the outdoor stock, which is getting poorer every day, would be killed off and the inside stock would benefit.

New carnations are more plentiful and the supply is now large enough to take care of good-sized orders at all times. The quality is steadily improving and it will not be long until this stock takes its usual place on the market.

Roses are plentiful just now, and Killarney is moving slowly. Despite the large supply, the fancy grades are cleaning up well. The stock is in fine shape and should bring much higher prices than are being realized.

Both asters and gladioli are a drug on the market, and it will help materially when these flowers are out of the way. The first violets of the season are on the market and the stock looks good, considering that this is the first cut. Some exceptionally nice double violets are to be had.

Various Notes.

Edlefsen & Leidiger have a new Ford car, which they will use for delivery purposes.

Adam Zender, of Rogers Park, Ill., was in Milwaukee again last week, combining business with pleasure.

A. H. McDonald, who for a time has been away from the city, has returned and will have charge of the flower department which will be opened by Gimbel Bros. soon. Mr. McDonald plans to make his space as attractive as possible and the location is one of the best. H. J. S.

Bailey's Standard Cyclopedia of Horticulture.

First and second volumes just off the press. Remaining volumes will be issued as soon as possible. The following are a few of the features to be found in this new work:

KEY TO IDENTIFICATION OF PLANTS.

This is a device to enable one to find the name of a plant. The name thus found is quickly referred to under its alphabetical location, where full information will be found in regard to it.

SYNOPSIS OF PLANT KINGDOM.

This is one of the most important features of the new edition. It constitutes a general running account of the classes, orders and groups of plants, with a brief sketch or characterization of 215 of the leading families comprising those that yield practically all the cultivated plants. These family descriptions give the botanical characters and the number of genera and species and the ranges.

THE GLOSSARY.

This is an analysis of all technical terms that are used in the work and in similar works.

TRANSLATION AND PRONUNCIATION OF LATIN NAMES.

In Volume I is inserted a list of between 2,000 and 3,000 Latin words used as species—names of plants, giving the English equivalent or translation and the pronunciation.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

There are 24 colored plates, 96 full-page sepia halftones, and more than 4,000 engravings which serve as guides in the text.

CLASS ARTICLES.

Special effort has been made to secure the best cultural advices for the plants requiring peculiar or particular handling.

GENERAL INDEX.

The final volume will contain a complete index to the entire work, enabling the reader to locate volume and page of any subject he has in mind. With the Index, Key, Synopsis and alphabetical arrangement of the Cyclopedia, any reasonable question asked by the consultant will receive a ready answer.

This work consists of six large quarto volumes, more than 3,600 pages, 500 collaborators, approximately 4,000 genera, 15,000 species and 40,000 plant names. Price, $6.00 per volume; $36.00 per set. Can be paid for one volume at a time.

HONOR TO WHOM HONOR IS DUE.

Godfrey Aschmann, the Philadelphia plantsman, at the age of 60, is as active as ever (a visit to his establishment will convince you). He is a native of Switzerland, of the right thinking, active, fiery type, and, like the Deutsche Kaiser, full of courage and ambition. He is not afraid of the combined armies of the so-called florists, and he is sure he will carry the field when other florists are down-hearted and holding back on account of hard times and afraid to invest a dollar. Godfrey Aschmann has his eyes open—he watches and looks into the future—buys up all the good stock he can get, fills his houses with the choicest and is prepared when the rush comes.

ARAUCARIA

OUR SPECIALTY

WAR ABROAD will make the Araucarias scarce this fall and winter. But look, it won't affect Godfrey Aschmann. Why? We were not afraid to invest thousands of dollars in importing the plants in the spring of 1914, hence we do not care for the war, and are prepared to fill all orders—4 houses are filled with the choice ARAUCARIA EXCELSA. We are again able to fill all orders. 5½ and 6-inch pots, 2, 3, 4, 5 years old, 14, 15, 20 to 25 in. high, well established, 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. The Market.

Business in general has been more than quiet during the week just past. There have been exceptionally few sales for this time of year and it is hoped that business will pick up soon.

Up to this time there has been no frost, and therefore the outdoor stock is still with us. This fact, of course, decreases the sales of greenhouse-grown stock. In the event of a heavy frost the outdoor stock, which is getting poorer every day, would be killed off and the inside stock would benefit.

New carnations are more plentiful and the supply is now large enough to take care of good-sized orders at all times. The quality is steadily improving and it will not be long until this stock takes its usual place on the market.

Roses are plentiful just now, and Killarney is moving slowly. Despite the large supply, the fancy grades are cleaning up well. The stock is in fine shape and should bring much higher prices than are being realized.

Both asters and gladioli are a drug on the market, and it will help materially when these flowers are out of the way. The first violets of the season are on the market and the stock looks good, considering that this is the first cut. Some exceptionally nice double violets are to be had.

Various Notes.

Edlefsen & Leidiger have a new Ford car, which they will use for delivery purposes.

Adam Zender, of Rogers Park, Ill., was in Milwaukee again last week, combining business with pleasure.

A. H. McDonald, who for a time has been away from the city, has returned and will have charge of the flower department which will be opened by Gimbel Bros. soon. Mr. McDonald plans to make his space as attractive as possible and the location is one of the best. H. J. S.

SEATTLE NOTES.

ried off the honors in the professional classes for dahlias, Paine Bros., of Bitter Lake, Wash., and Benson Bros., of Seattle, being also exhibitors. The silver cup for the most artistic floral exhibit was won by Fred W. Gust, of the Rosery, with Mrs. L. W. McCoy in second place. Mr. Gust's exhibit was a tastefully arranged effect in autumn foliage, cosmos, chrysanthemums and dahlias. Mrs. L. W. McCoy's chief feature was some bouquets of valley, orchids, etc., backed with a fine collection of ferns, palms, etc.

The president of the society, R. M. Buttle, was quite successful in winning prizes, no less than thirteen trophies, most of them silver cups, falling to his share. The quality of the blooms shown by him left little to be desired. Fred Smith, of the Smith Floral Co., Tacoma, judged the professional classes and J. H. Gill, of Portland, with Olaf J. Wingren, of La Conner, awarded the prizes in the amateur sections.

Of other flowers than dahlias there were few entries and Thomas Wylie had a light task in judging them. Amateur exhibits from all parts of western Washington were shown and, considering the lateness of the season, a fine lot of blooms were set up. Visitors were much interested and those in the trade were hard pressed to supply catalogues, so that considerable business will probably result.

Various Notes.

A company has been formed and is selling stock for mining coal on the shores of Lake Washington contiguous to Rainier beach. This may be of interest to greenhouse proprietors, many of whom have ranges accessible to transportation on the lake. The company claims it has a good quality of coal not far from the surface and will be able to supply coal to consumers at a cheaper rate than they have hitherto paid. In view of the high prices we have been paying for poor coal, these statements, if resulting in facts, should be welcomed by many growers.

Allan Beall, of the Woodlawn Flower Store, was added to the list of benedicts last week.

Miss Pearl Garlick, lately of Brighton Beach, well known to many in the trade, was in the list of September brides of last week.

The growers of flowers apparently are losing hope of making their fuel bills from their winter crops in this line and are turning their attention to more material crops. The Bryn Mawr Greenhouses have some benches of cauliflower; H. B. Haussen and J. A. Sahli are experimenting with celery as a greenhouse proposition; Harry Risdon has the whole of his plant and A. B. Matthiesen part of his planted with tomatoes, and others are seriously contemplating planting edibles instead of flowers in the future. The proximity of California militates against high prices for winter flowers here and possibly may against good prices for vegetables. But nothing is so good as a trial, and if these growers are successful, we may not hear so much talk of overproduction and poor prices in the future.

Mr. Shaw, of the Bellingham Florists' Exchange, was in Seattle last week. This firm has recently commenced business and Mr. Shaw reports favorably as to its success. T. W.

PANDANUS VEITCHII

I have about 10,000 pot-grown Pandanus Veitchii, well rooted, nicely variegated, no white ones; plants are grown only from small cuttings from 4 to 6 inches high. This is the best lot of such plants I ever had. Surplus over the requirements of my regular customers.

Special low net price is $80.00 per 1000; 500 at 1000 rate.

For 18 years I have been growing Pandanus Veitchii on a large scale, having standing orders from the largest houses in the country. I have increased my acreage of stock plants so that I now have some surplus over the requirements of my regular customers.

Greenhouse Heating.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. But please do not ask The Review to make a choice of apparatus for you. The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

CARE OF BOILERS.

I note that some of my neighbors empty their boilers when heat no longer is needed in spring and let them stand empty until time to fire in the fall. On the other hand, I always have left the water in my boiler during summer. Which is the proper course?

F. E.

The better way is to fill the boiler with water; fill it so full that all the air is driven out of the pipes as well as the boiler, and let it stand there through the summer. The boiler and pipes will corrode less with the system full of water than with air in contact with the inner surfaces. The firebox and ashpit should be cleaned thoroughly and kept dry; leave the firebox door open to permit circulation of air. Clean the flues. It is worth taking pains to put the boiler in shape at the end of the season; the apparatus deteriorates faster in summer than in winter if left just as the fire went out, half full of ashes, dirty and wet.

F. R.

THREE NEW JERSEY HOUSES.

Will you kindly give us some information in regard to piping the following greenhouses? House No. 1 is twenty feet wide, with north side built a lean-to frame (?) with 2-foot concrete wall running up to the side of the house, which is four feet high. The south side contains three feet of boards and one foot of glass. The house is seventy-five feet long and nine feet and nine inches to the ridge. House No. 2, the north side of which adjoins house No. 1, is even-span, seventy-five feet long and six feet to the ridge. The walls are three feet high, of boards covered with tar paper.

This boiler is guaranteed to do the work and costs less to install and operate. Write for prices and recommendations.

the houses piped by two men who claimed to be experts, and we could hardly keep things from freezing last winter; in fact, we did lose some stock on several cold nights. Any information will be appreciated by us, as we are going to do the job ourselves.

V. K. F. C.

As no description is given of the boiler, or of the arrangement of the piping in the different houses, I cannot say whether the difficulty in heating the houses is due to the boiler or to some error in arranging the piping.

I would suggest using 3-inch pipes as main flows to supply each of the houses, and as flows inside each house, would put in three 2½-inch pipes, locating one on each wall and the other under the ridge. House No. 2 should have six 2-inch returns, while seven will be required in house No. 3. Place two of the returns on each wall and the others under the benches, or in the walks, if solid beds are used.

I do not understand just how house No. 1 is constructed. I am in doubt whether there is a frame against the north wall or the north wall of the house is a frame structure with a lean-to roof over the greenhouse. As the ridge is less than ten feet high I infer that the house is even-span, with a frame against the north wall. If that is the case, I should use the same piping as in house No. 2.

While I should prefer to have the main flow pipe to each house connect directly to the boiler, it will answer if a 4-inch flow pipe is carried along the ends of the houses and a 3-inch supply pipe is taken off for each house.

PIPING FOR MICHIGAN HOUSE.

We are completing a greenhouse 25x 100 feet, to be used for growing general stock, and wish to maintain a temperature of 60 degrees this winter. The house runs north and south, and has two center ground beds and raised beds on the sides. The side walls are three feet wood and three feet glass. At the north end is the office; the south end is glass. We have a 25-horse-power Dutton steam boiler, to be fitted for hot water heating. Please give your opinion as to the number and sizes of pipes for flows and returns; also as to the arrangement of pipes with relation to the beds. J. L. C.

To heat the house described, about 1,200 square feet of radiation will be required, and for mains I would suggest the use of a 3-inch flow pipe on each of the walls and a 2½-inch flow three feet below the ridge. For returns, run five 2-inch pipes under each of the side benches and the same number in the middle walk, connecting each of the coils with the corresponding flow pipe at the farther end of the house and using 3-inch pipe for the main returns between each coil and the boiler. Run the flow pipes with a slight slope from the boiler, and connect the highest point in each flow pipe with the pipe leading to the expansion tank.

SAN FRANCISCO NOTES.

tion fund is already provided and several invitations for outings have been received. Daniel MacRorie, with his characteristic energy, is leaving no stone unturned, to say nothing of the good work of H. Plath, president of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society.

Much interest is shown by local gardeners and dahlia growers in the coming complimentary dahlia show, which the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society is to give at Redmen's hall Saturday, October 12.

Albert O. Stein reports a wonderfully good trade over the period of the Jewish holidays. The writer visited his establishment the morning following and found his store stripped of everything, including his regular stock of kentias and potted plants. Mr. Stein has made wonderful strides since renovating his establishment and reports a great many decorations, weddings and banquets for the month of October.

Podesta & Baldocchi have been showing unusually attractive windows during the week, featuring basket arrangements. Most of these baskets are executed by H. Soelke and have given the firm a reputation for nifty creations.

The Hogan-Kooyman Co., now located in the new store in Oakland, reports an active week in the retail department. Mr. Kooyman reports that he has shipped three times the number of chrysanthemums up to date in 1914 that he did in 1913, which tends to show the drift of the export flower trade.

The Misses Hannon have been showing some artistic basket arrangements of Cratægus Pyracantha. The Misses Hannon have been on Polk street for many years and say that they expect this year's business to eclipse all since the fire.

The Gaiety Flower Shop has leased the store on O'Farrell street and retired from the retail business. Mr. Goutsch does not care for the retail trade and has decided to specialize on the shipping of flowers exclusively.

The E. W. McLellan Co. has about 11,000 plants of Mrs. Russell rose which will be ready to cut from in the next two weeks. The house of Hadley also is in splendid condition. Mr. Axel, who has charge of the shipping department, showed me some of the largest Crocus chrysanthemums that I have ever seen. Shipments of chrysanthemums to various parts of the state and also to other cities of the Pacific coast have been greater this year than in any year heretofore. W. A. H.

The Market.

Conditions are beginning to change and instead of the continued idleness in the retail stores, there are signs of business activity once more. With ideal summer weather during the greater part of September, it has been hardly possible to sell the flowers which are coming to market.

Various Notes.

The W. E. Day Co. has had a wonderful display of ferns and gladioli during the last week. The ferns were the display made at the state fair by the F. R. Pierson Co., of Tarrytown, and the gladioli are a deep pink seedling grown by Wm. Swind, of Cazenovia.

Charles Bourne has completed his new house and has it, with the rest of his range, filled to the doors.

J. F. S. Meacham has placed a contract with the Lord & Burnham Co. for a private conservatory on his property at Onondaga Valley.

Chester Harris had a large decoration, in which he used several hundred gladioli.

Werner Bultman is greatly pleased with the results obtained in his new store. Trade has been much better than was expected when he opened as late in the season as he did.

The new house, 40x200, of Lord & Burnham steel construction, at the range of the Baker Floral Co. is completed and filled with carnations. Among the varieties to be found in this house are Enchantress Supreme, Pocahontas, Rainbow and Philadelphia. The dwelling for the foreman is completed and Mr. Brown has moved in. The new 100-horsepower boiler has been installed and the entire range equipped so as to be heated from the one steam plant. Before this season the company heated the cut flower houses with steam and the pot plant houses with hot water.

The department stores are selling large quantities of Boston ferns at about 33 cents apiece. L. S. B.

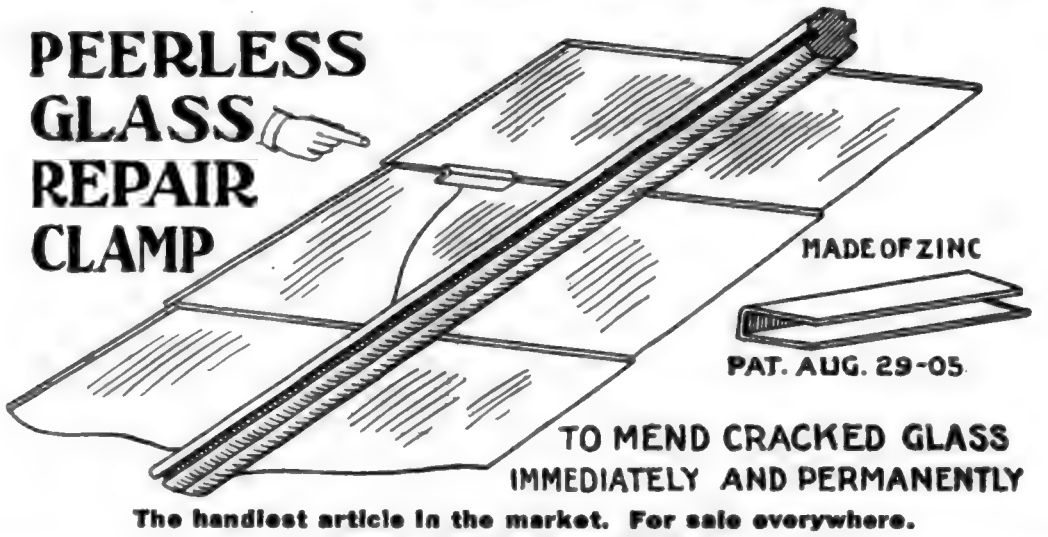
Filling hot-beds with Sunlight Double Glass Sash

These sash have become the standard sash, cutting out half the labor and cost and doubling the net profits of early gardening wherever used. This superior efficiency is due to these facts! The two layers of glass enclose an air space—a transparent blanket—through which the sun's rays pass freely to the beds, carrying heat and light, but through which the cold from without and the stored heat from within pass very slowly.

The result is the elimination of mats and shutters saving half the labor of covering and uncovering. As these extra covers, used on single layer sash, need never be bought or renewed, thus half the expense of hot-bed gardening is saved.

The Sunlight Greenhouse on which the sash are also used is inexpensive, attractive and a highly profitable addition to any garden. See the catalog.



Write today for the Free Catalog and enclose, if you wish it, four cents in stamps for Professor Massey's helpful booklet on the use of cold-frames, hot-beds and small greenhouses.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

The supply in the market is large and comprises every seasonable line in quantity, except American Beauties. These are rather scarce and far short of the demand. Lilies, too, have been running rather close for the last few days, but from reports there will be plenty of them by the middle of this week. Gladioli, while still arriving in good quantities, show evidences of the close of their season, and asters will probably see their end for this year by the close of next week. The demand is fair, but there is still so much outdoor stock that no good prices are realized. Shipping business is good. The first chrysanthemums and violets came in last week.

Various Notes.

During last week C. E. Critchell received shipments of ruscus oak sprays and immortelles from across the water, and is no longer worried about the effects of the European war upon the supply of these items.

L. H. Kyrk was the first in the market to offer violets. They came from George Klotter, September 28, and sold readily.

The E. G. Hill Floral Co. last week offered some excellent chrysanthemums.

H. Weber & Sons, Oakland, Md., say their first shipments of mums are due to arrive here the latter part of this week.

Geo. Fern has the decorations for the auto show at Music hall next week. Among other things, he is using a large quantity of wild smilax.

The Bloomhurst Floral Co., at Lockland, has been sending some fine Killarney and Richmond to the Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange.

Visitors include Ross E. Adgate, representing the McCallum Co., Pittsburgh, and George Hampton, representing Jos. G. Neidinger, of Philadelphia.

NEW YORK DAHLIA SHOW.

A successful dahlia exhibition was held by the Horticultural Society of New York, in coöperation with the New York Botanical Garden, in the Museum building of that institution, September 26 and 27. It was the first dahlia show given by the society. There was a fine display of this popular flower in all its diverse forms and colors. The most striking feature of the exhibition was the display arranged by Mrs. Chapman, of Westerly, R. I.

Following is a list of the awards in the open classes:

Largest and best collection, flowers on short stems—Geo. L. Stillman, Westerly, R. I., first; N. Harold Cottam & Son, Wappingers Falls, N. Y., second.

Vase of twelve cactus—Head's Bergenfield Nurseries, Bergenfield, N. J., first; P. W. Popp, Mamaroneck, N. Y., second; N. A. Miller, third.

Vase of twelve decorative—W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J., first; N. A. Miller, second; N. H. Cottam & Son, third.

Vase of twelve showy or fancy—N. H. Cottam & Son, first.

Vase of twelve pompons—Wm. Shillaber, first; N. H. Cottam & Son, second.

Vase of twelve single or collarette—Geo. L. Stillman, first; Head's Bergenfield Nurseries, second; N. A. Miller, third.

Vase arranged for effect—P. W. Popp, first; Dr. M. A. Howe, second.

In the non-commercial classes P. W. Popp and George D. Barron were the principal exhibitors, but Wm. P. Clyde and Wm. Shillaber also secured awards.

The following special prizes were awarded to trade exhibitors: W. Atlee Burpee, certificates for the new dahlias, Mrs. Hugh Dickson and Mrs. W. E. Whineray, and special mention for Mrs. Geo. W. Kerr; Lager & Hurrell, for a collection of cut orchids; Geo. L. Stillman, certificates for the new dahlias, Geo. L. Stillman and Searchlight, and special mention for Fire Girl; W. A. Manda, certificates for new dahlias, Josef Manda and Bohemia Garnet, and special mention for Veronica Manda.

A meeting of the Horticultural Society of New York was held in connection with the show, President T. A. Havemeyer occupying the chair. Dr. N. L. Britton, director of the New York Botanical Garden, gave a short talk on the origin of the name dahlia, including a brief account of the distribution of the genus. Dr. H. H. Rusby followed with a short address on the home and environment of the dahlia, illustrated with lantern slides. At the conclusion of this a discussion on the present-day methods of culture was led by P. W. Popp.

Z-Bar Eave Plate with Iron Post and Rafter Lug

Sill and Eave in our Reconstructed Construction

Cast Iron Sill bolted to the Rafter with a Cast Iron Brace Lug

ABOUT five years or so ago, when we first began urging growers to use concrete walls, capped with our cast iron sill, most of them threw up their hands and said "we were altogether too fancy in our notions." "What did we think we were building anyway, show places on private estates?" "What they wanted was a practical growing house that they could make some money with."

In spite of all the turn downs we got, we nevertheless kept right on pounding for the use of the cast iron sill, because we knew it was the only permanent satisfactory way to build.

We could never get it through our heads why a man who was willing to spend the money for an iron frame house with concrete walls, would then use a wood sill that in spite of all you can do will rot out.

But that time is past with most growers, and now they are asking us to use cast iron sills. It has become a standard part of our construction. It is one of the features of our Reconstructed Construction.

Then there's that Z-Bar Non-Drip-Splashing Eave Plate that some claimed was too heavy and cast too much shade. They seemed to lose sight of the fact that an angle eave with a drip gutter hung beneath it, cast a good deal more shade and was not nearly as good a piece of workmanlike construction.

Besides taking care of the drip perfectly, this Z-Bar Plate of ours makes a much stiffer, stronger eave.

In our next ad we will give our point of view on columns and show you the column anchor base we use in our Reconstructed Construction.

SYSTEM ENDS COMPLAINTS ON STEAMER ORDERS

Once on a time the patron who sent flowers to a passenger on an outgoing ocean liner was betting against odds that the gift would reach its destination—and the florist usually paid the loser's stake. The little regard for these bon voyage tokens by the steamship companies, and the carelessness of the stewards, made delivery a matter of chance, despite the florist's watchfulness. Now the great size of the business and the unceasing efforts of the seaport florists have brought about a system that makes delivery almost a certainty.

HOW an immense business may be handled under trying circumstances, yet almost without error, as the result of a system which has been perfected by time and the work of a comparatively few men, is shown by the way orders for passengers on outgoing steamers are taken care of by the retailers of New York. When one stops to consider the magnitude of this branch of the trade, the surprising fact is, not that there should be an occasional order which failed of delivery, but that such causes for complaint should be so few. And there's a reason.

The Reason.

From the beginning of this branch of the trade the responsibility for the filling and delivery of steamer orders has rested almost entirely with the seaport florists. The florist in the inland city mails or telegraphs the order he receives from his customer; it is up to the florist in the port of the steamer's sailing to see that the order is filled and delivered promptly and correctly. Not only must he do his own part of the work, but he must, in addition, see that the others who handle the order do not fall down in one way or another. It is to the fact that the seaport florists do this work well that the present success of the business must be ascribed.

But it is not easy. For the seaport retailer finds himself between the devil and the deep sea—he must make up for the shortcomings of the telegraph company on the one hand, and be on the watch constantly to see that the steamship company takes proper care of the order, on the other. If the telegraph boy becomes interested in a game of craps and gets the message to the florist only an hour before the time the boat sails, the retailer who receives the order must drop all work to fill the order and his chauffeur must break the speed laws and at the same time escape the hands of the gentlemen in blue coats, in order to get the flowers to the steamer before the gang-plank is pulled in. If a brainless telegraph operator misspells the name of the ship or of the passenger, the florist must use the uncanny power experience has given him to guess what is meant.

At the Dock.

And when the order is at the dock the difficulties are not all overcome. Constant vigilance is required to see that in the rush of the last few hours before departure these fragile parcels are properly taken care of. For a gift gives no pleasure if it is not delivered in the best possible condition and manner.

In the beginning of this business scant attention was given these orders, but as they increased in number the retailers of New York, after long and continued efforts, finally obtained from the steamship lines docking there a special service, with a system of receipts, which practically eliminated the previous confusion. How this works out is best described in the words of G. E. M. Stumpp, the New York retailer:

"All packages for the Hamburg-American, North German Lloyd and Holland-America lines must be delivered to the steamer in care of the receiving clerk on the steamship pier, who gives a receipt for same, and then only when delivery is made one hour before sailing time. In order to obtain receipts from steamers sailing at midnight or early the next morning, it is necessary to deliver flowers late the night previous.

"That the ocean lines have recently taken special interest in the delivery of packages to passengers departing on their steamers is apparent by the elaborate system employed, by which they try to avoid as much as possible the frequent complaints of former years that the flowers were never delivered.

The Receipt.

"This receipt consists of a parcel-check having three sections, all bearing the same number. One stub is given to the shipper as a receipt for the package, another is signed by the steward who receives the package on board the steamer and is retained by the receiving clerk to file for reference at the New York office, and the third and largest section is delivered with the package by the steward to the passenger, who acknowledges receipt by signing same. This last section, bearing the passenger's signature, is also filed at the company's office upon the return of the steamship to this port.

"I once had occasion to write for a stub to convince a patron of mine that the flowers were received by her friend, although the latter omitted to acknowledge the gift and had since returned from abroad. The stub I had for the package did not satisfy my patron, but upon seeing her friend's signature and observing the similarity of the check numbers, she felt thoroughly satisfied.

"In special cases where flowers are to be delivered on a certain date during the voyage, or where corsages are to be delivered to a passenger each day of the trip, arrangements can be made

What the System Handles

"On one steamer last summer there were over 1,200 packages of flowers, fruit, candy, etc."—Charles A. Dards.

"The Fleischman Floral Co. reports * * * orders aggregating $500 had been transmitted to New York for the Vaterland."—Chicago notes, September 17.

"It is estimated that New York florists, in normal times, do a business of $1,000 per day in steamer orders."—New York daily paper.

with the chief steward the day before sailing, and for a small monetary consideration the instructions are carefully executed. My experience with several such orders sent recently proved quite satisfactory, as the recipients of the flowers informed me upon their return that my instructions were faithfully carried out.

Notice by Mail.

"For every steamer order which leaves my place, there is a notification mailed to the passenger on the steamer, stating that a box or basket of flowers has been placed on board and if not received within a reasonable time should be inquired for of the steward."

The practice referred to in Mr. Stumpp's last paragraph has been adopted by most of the leading New York retailers. In this connection, Alexander McConnell, who handles a large share of the steamer business in New York, says:

"For twelve years we have adopted a system of placing a letter in the ship's mail, properly stamped and addressed to persons for whom flowers are intended. If they have not already received the flowers, they will certainly investigate and claim the package addressed to them. We have had little trouble since adopting this arrangement."

Other such checks and helps have been devised by the New York retailers to make the delivery of flowers sure and satisfactory. All go to form the perfected system which makes complaints rare and dissatisfied patrons exceedingly few and far between.

Further Suggestions.

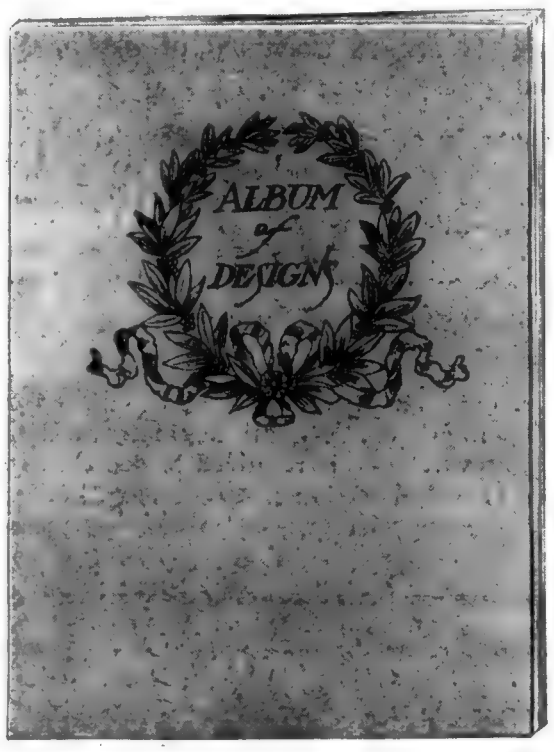
Further improvement is possible in every line, and, with this end in view, New York retailers have pointed out conditions which lead to complaints, some valid, some groundless. Says Alexander McConnell:

"Frequently we have disappointments as a result of receiving telegrams with names of the passengers, or even of the ship, misspelled. Again, inquiry is made frequently by patrons who become impatient at not receiving acknowledgments of the flowers; they do not seem to realize that it takes twelve to fifteen days to receive a return message except by wireless."

Equally to the point is the following from Charles A. Dards, whose experience in this line is of the largest:

"A great many of the out-of-town florists' orders are telegrams, which reach New York on the day of sailing, sometimes one hour before sailing. Considering the difficulties in handling these, for which no receipts are given at the dock, I think there are an extremely small number of boxes lost.

"Some people do not send cards, and even when there is a card with the flowers, the recipient is often neglectful about acknowledging at once, all of which causes more or less trouble for the florist."



From the Other End.

While on the subject of suggestions in this connection, one from Boyle & Darnaud, of San Diego, Cal., who are at the other end of the business as well as of the continent, is in order. To prove to impatient customers who occasionally register complaints that their orders have been properly handled, they would like to have on hand the receipt the New York retailer receives from the steamship company. In their own language: "Now one suggestion would be that this receipt be sent along with the bill to the orderer. That would show that the order was received, filled and delivered, thus insuring the satisfaction of all concerned."

Much good may be gained by the interchange of suggestions for the improvement of this business, and they are timely, when the steamer business is just picking up from the interruption caused by the canceling of many sailings.

THE THIRD PRINTING.

The third printing of The Review's Album of Designs has been completed and all orders for single copies have been shipped—wholesale orders will go out within a day or two.

The Third Edition.

The new book is of the same high character as the two previous editions, the great success of which made another printing necessary. Just as the second book was an improvement over the first, the third edition is better than the second—a still more attractive cover, with simplicity its keynote; a better selection of designs for illustration.

This book has had a wonderful sale. Practically all the florists' supplies dealers carry it and it is to be found in use in a majority of the retail flower stores all over the United States. Hundreds of florists have equipped their undertaker and druggist agents with the album. It is a splendid help in taking orders, even in a well stocked flower store, for by its use the customer can be given a clear idea of how one design will look as compared to another; orders can be taken much more easily than where the florist must rely on mere words to convince the buyer that a certain style of work will please.

The album of designs is sent postpaid at 75 cents per copy, or by express at $6 per dozen.

Council Bluffs, Ia.—L. H. Reams has completed the erection of three greenhouses on his property on North Twenty-sixth street. Two of the buildings are 30x160 feet and the third is 27x110. They will be devoted to tomatoes and cucumbers exclusively.

VARIEGATED SALVIA.

I am sending a few spotted leaves of Salvia Zurich, which I raised from seed. The whole plant is beautifully spotted. Do you think it would be advisable to propagate from it and register it to be sold as a novelty? Will you kindly give me some information in regard to this? J. S.

This is a pretty variegated form of Salvia Zurich. I have seen occasional variegated plants before, but none exactly like yours. This would be an ornamental plant even without flowers, and I certainly think it would pay you to progagate and advertise it. I do not know of anything like yours being in commerce. C. W.

LARVÆ KILLING CYCLAMEN.

I have a fine batch of cyclamen, but recently some of them have died, the bulb and roots having evidently been eaten by white larvæ about one-eighth of an inch long. The plants look healthy and robust up to the last day, except for a wilted appearance, as if they had been kept too wet or too dry. I have found as many as ten of the larvæ on one plant. Do you know of anything that will kill this pest without injury to the plants? I am trying carbon bisulphide, but have had little experience with this. H. A. N.

Your cyclamens have undoubtedly been attacked by a white grub, which is the larvæ of the May beetle or June bug. The eggs are commonly deposited in clods of cow manure, and if you will take note you will find pieces of this manure simply alive with these grubs. As a remedy you have selected the thing which will certainly kill these and all other soil pests. Make a hole in the soil with a pointed stick, and pour in a few drops only for a 4-inch pot, and as much as half a teaspoonful for a 6-inch or 7-inch pot. Cover the hole as soon as you have poured in the carbon, which will not harm the plants. As carbon bisulphide is of an explosive nature, do not use any naked lights while applying it.

Possibly many of your plants are too far gone now to reclaim, but another season, if you have facilities, sterilize your compost with steam. If not, bake the cow manure over a fire, to kill all the grubs. C. W.

STEM-ROT ON ASTERS.

Can you tell us what the trouble is with our asters? The stem and leaves turned yellow in August, while the bloom, which does not open, is of a greenish color. These are planted on a gentle slope in a medium red loam, not heavy. Would some spraying solution help them. I am enclosing a diseased stem. The seed was purchased from a reliable firm. W. N. & S.

The most probable cause of the condition of your asters is lack of moisture and plant food in the soil. The specimen forwarded had stem-rot, usually due to leaving the seedlings too crowded in the early stages of growth, or, when transplating, burying the stems of the little plants too deep. The trouble does not show until late in the season. I do not think the seed is at fault at all, for experiments have shown that even seeds secured from diseased plants have produced perfectly clean, healthy stock.

Joseph Trepel's Little Daughter and Her Daddy's Four Brooklyn Stores.

Spraying solutions would have no effect whatever on the condition of the plants. Have you kept the surface soil stirred persistently through the growing season? If this were done by every grower I am sure we would have fewer poor asters. It is really astonishing how much drought plants will stand when the cultivator is kept going constantly. C. W.

HER DADDY'S FOUR STORES.

Joseph Trepel, of Brooklyn, N. Y., is just about as proud of his little daughter as she is of her daddy's four stores, and in the composite photograph reproduced herewith, she forms the centerpiece around which are grouped the four retail establishments of Mr. Trepel, who is styled on the postcard from which the accompanying illustration was made "Brooklyn's largest florist." At his four stores, two on Broadway, one on Manhattan avenue and one on Lewis avenue, Mr. Trepel disposes of large quantities of flowers, such large quantities, in fact, that he, like his brother, C. C. Trepel, is welcomed on West Twenty-eighth street when there is a surplus of stock on the New York wholesale market. Mr. Trepel is a veteran in the florists' business; the store on Broadway and Reid avenue bears upon the window this mark of age, "Established 1888," and is, therefore, a year past the quarter-century mark.

STEVIAS DOING POORLY.

I am sending you a specimen of our stevias. Nearly all of our plants are affected in the same way as this one. Can you tell me the cause and the remedy for it? Will it affect their blooming? H. O. H. & S.

This trouble is of common occurrence on stevias and some other plants, and is usually caused by the plants having been stunted and starved in their pots. It is rarely seen on plants which have had good culture. There is nothing you can do to remedy matters beyond watering and feeding your plants well. The masses of small growths at the bases of the plants will not flower, the others will. Better not propagate from any but vigorous plants for next season. If the cuttings become stunted in the cutting bench, cuttings are also liable to grow in this way. C. W.

TULIPS AND NARCISSI.

Will you kindly advise me how long it takes to bring tulips and large trumpet narcissi into bloom after planting? Are they treated about the same as hyacinths and Paper White narcissi? E. F. C.

It takes from sixteen to twenty weeks from planting to bring these bulbs into bloom, according to the variety. Such tulips as La Reine, White Hawk and Duc van Thol may be had in even less than sixteen weeks sometimes, but finer flowers are produced when they are given more time. Such trumpet narcissi as Trumpet major and Golden Spur will come in earlier than Emperor and Victoria. Treat them the same as hyacinths. Paper Whites do not need to have their flats covered with coal ashes or other materials; other narcissi and tulips do. C. W.

MEALY BUG.

Will you kindly tell me how to rid mums, stevia and crotons of mealy bug? They cluster around the mum buds and completely destroy them. M. J. R. B.

A good pressure of water properly directed through a spray nozzle on the hose should clean your plants. On crotons use some kerosene emulsion or other insecticide occasionally, but do not try this on the other plants. Hydrocyanic acid gas and nicotine extracts can also be used to kill mealy bug. C. W.

NEW STORE AT GREAT FALLS.

With a flag bearing the legend "The Leading Florist" waving above it, the new store of the Electric City Conservatory presents a progressive appearance to the 15,000 inhabitants of Great Falls, Mont. The building, which is connected with the greenhouses, is situated in a residence district, and has a frontage of twenty-two feet and a depth of thirty feet. A solid concrete basement, twenty-two feet square, an office and a workroom occupy the structure in addition to the store. The fixtures are in striking mission style. At night the place is a blaze of light, the main windows alone carrying two 500-candlepower nitrogen electric lamps. The business here includes not only cut flowers and plants but also seeds and nursery stock.

Vegetable Forcing

VEGETABLE MEN IN SESSION.

The Vegetable Growers' Association of America opened its seventh annual convention in Philadelphia October 6, to continue four days. There is an excellent attendance, as usual, for this has proved to be one of the liveliest of the many special organizations in the trade. While the market gardeners have not become interested to the extent that was expected, the men who grow vegetables under glass have found the association helpful and a splendid percentage of the membership attends, those present sticking close to the sessions, which are lively. The president is W. J. Ritterskamp, of Princeton, Ind.

There is a good trades' display. Among the seedsmen showing are Henry A. Dreer, Inc.; W. Atlee Burpee & Co., and Walter P. Stokes. Mr. Stokes delivered a stereopticon lecture on the evening of the opening day, showing the seedsman's side of vegetable growing. He said, among other things, that America depends on Europe for half of the vegetable seed it sows, but that we can and must grow our own seed.

There is a long program of reports, essays, lectures and tours to points of trade interest.

CUCUMBER CULTURE.

We have a small house which we wish to try out for cucumbers. It is now run with raised benches. What kind of soil should be used? What is the best variety for forcing? When should we plant them to have a crop in January and February? Is it necessary to pollenize, and, if so, how? How thickly should they be planted?

M. A. J. E.

While the majority of commercial cucumbers are grown in solid beds, they can also be grown well in raised benches. They do best with some bottom heat in winter, and in this respect the benches are an advantage. Give six to eight inches of soil; if possible, lay some sods or coarse material at the bottom to help the drainage. Well decayed sod, with one-fourth cow manure added, is suitable. Of course, cucumbers are strong feeders and liquid manure can be freely applied once fruit has formed. Set the plants twenty-four to thirty inches apart in the rows. Seedlings can be started in small pots or pieces of turf; pots are preferable. Cucumbers must have a minimum temperature of 62 degrees; 65 degrees is better, but on severe nights it may fall to 60 degrees. There should be a rise of 15 or 20 degrees with sunshine.

As there are few pollenizing insects in midwinter, it is necessary to resort to artificial aids. Of these, a hive of bees is decidedly the best, and these useful insects are now used in nearly all large commercial cucumber establishments. Shaking the vines at midday helps, while the work may also be done by hand, but this takes much time in even one house of considerable size. Cucumbers, unlike tomatoes, require a moist atmosphere.

The most popular forcing cucumber in America is White Spine. Of this there are some fine special strains. The long English type is most popular on private estates. A hybrid of the two is now grown a good deal and brings a better price than the old types. The White Spine type matures a crop more quickly than the English Telegraph type; the latter bears profitably over a long period. It is a common and good practice to grow two or three crops of lettuce and follow them in the late spring with cucumbers. Use galvanized or annealed iron wire for trellises. Run these both lengthwise and crosswise. Tie the shoots with raffia.

Aphis must be overcome by fumigation, but cucumbers will not stand a heavy dose. A too close, warm atmosphere or cold draughts will cause mildew to appear. Sulphur must be used for this at once, or the plants will soon be ruined. There are one or two other diseases and other cultural details which, I am afraid, would occupy too much space to give here, but The Review will always gladly answer any inquiries. C. W.

FORCING RADISHES.

We are adding a small house, in which we wish to grow radishes. Can you give me some instructions as to culture? We have grown a few radishes, but they were all pithy. What is the cause and the remedy? E. P. M. & S.

Radishes for forcing should have a night temperature of 45 to 50 degrees, with a rise of 20 degrees on sunshiny days and 10 degrees on cloudy days. They must have plenty of fresh air and all possible light. The best compost is a light and moderately rich one; they will make feeble growth in poor soil. They succeed well in four to five inches of soil in benches or in solid beds. Radishes do much better where the soil temperature averages 65 degrees, but a higher atmospheric temperature will cause pithiness, as will a lower one. Radishes can be sown in rows four or five inches apart and should be thinned in order to get nice roots. As the seed is quite variable in size, many growers screen it and use two sizes; the larger, of course, produces the finest radishes. If the soil is dry at sowing time, soak well; then wait until the seedlings are well above the ground before watering again. Use the turnip or oval radishes for forcing, such as Early Scarlet Globe, Non Plus Ultra and Early Deep Scarlet, olive-shaped. C. W.

THE GLADIOLUS

EARLY FLOWERING GLADIOLI.

How long does it take gladioli for early spring to come into bloom, and are they best planted in boxes, pots or benches? E. F. C.

I presume you refer to the nanus section, of which Peach Blossom, Blushing Bride and The Bride are favorite varieties. These can be grown in benches or flats. The latter should contain four inches of soil, and seventy-five to eighty-five bulbs can go in a flat. Treat these the same as Paper Whites, as they soon start to grow. They require a cool house and will not stand hard forcing. Bulbs planted in October or November will not flower before the early part of April. Large quantities are kept each year for Memorial day, when they are most salable, and right along until July. C. W.

GLADIOLI IN CARNATION BEDS.

Would you advise the planting of gladiolus bulbs in a carnation bed, where the rows are twelve inches apart and the plants are nine inches apart in the rows? C. M.

We have for several years planted gladioli between our carnations without any apparent injury to the carnation crop. Care should be taken not to overdo it, and also to plant the gladiolus bulbs so that they will not interfere with the watering or working of the carnations. We plant one or two rows lengthwise of a 5-foot bench. If one row is planted, we set in the bulbs right in the carnation rows and between the first and second plants on the north side of the bench, setting one bulb in each row. If a second row is to be planted, we repeat the operation on the south side of the bench.

Plant the bulbs about the first part of December for best results. There will be little growth until late winter. Hence, by the time the gladiolus plants cast much shade, the light will be strong enough to prevent any harm to the carnations. When warmer weather comes, you will need to watch for red spiders, for they are partial to gladioli. That is about the only objection I have to this double cropping of the carnation beds. A. F. J. B.

TO REPLACE CARNATIONS.

Would it pay to replant carnation beds now with gladioli? Much space is vacant from plants dying, and I do not care to try to fill the space with carnations this season. Can you suggest for such space anything better than gladioli that will bloom during the winter months? M. J. R. B.

You can plant such gladioli as Peach Blossom, Blushing Bride, Mathilde, and others of the nanus type in the vacant places among your carnations. These will not flower before April 1, however. The large-flowered gladioli, like America, Mrs. F. King, Augusta, etc., cannot be planted for three months yet. You could use some Spanish iris if you wished. Other bulbs which would give winter flowers earlier than the ones named are freesias and Paper White narcissi. The former would bloom in January, the last named even earlier. C. W.

REVIEW READERS STILL COMMENDING NEW DRESS

NEW STYLE A HIT

WHAT the trade is loyal to The Review has long been apparent — friends are constantly giving the paper a boost—but the regard in which the paper is held has never been so widely manifest as since the old, out-of-date pamphlet style of binding was discarded. The letters commending the new, up-to-date magazine style of trade journal have come from the four corners of the country.

The significance of the many words of approval lies in the evidence afforded that The Review is bought to READ and USE. You can lead a horse to water, but you may have difficulty making him drink. Sending a florist a paper is no indication he uses it—that the circulation is worth anything to advertisers. Of course a few advertisers still are indifferent, but most of them now want to see the evidence that the paper is READ as well as circulated.

Such letters as the following are a source of inspiration because they show the trade notes every move:

Lebanon, Tenn.

The new fall dress is something to be proud of; it shows the paper up at its real value. We have taken The Review for all the ten years we have been in business and feel that to it we owe a great deal of our success.
Lebanon Floral Co.

Philadelphia, Pa.

The last issue of The Review, in its new fall dress, has been received by us, and we take this opportunity to congratulate you on the splendid improvement in its appearance. We have long realized that The Review was a Magazine, and not a pamphlet, and we are glad to see that you have given it a fitting cover. We have seen a great many trade papers in all lines, but have never seen a weekly paper that compares favorably with yours. As consistent advertisers we are pleased to say that the results obtained from our advertisements are very gratifying. M. Rice Co.

Homer, N. Y.

Now you HAVE done it. The new dress is commendable in every way. It will take in the line of publications for business and add to your prestige. Glad to see it. Have read The Review ever since the start. It is a world-wide attractive window for our work. H. A. Catlin.

Putting the Index to Advertisers and Table of Contents on pages 2 and 3 is one of the finest improvements you ever have made in your always most excellent paper; it is most gratifying to your customers.

Shiremanstown, Pa.

We certainly are pleased with The Review in its new dress; it shows "some class." Putting the Index and Contents in front is a marked improvement and you have made a hit putting the Classified section on the last pages; it is much more convenient. We appreciate your endeavors to serve the trade. John F. Rupp.

Denton, Tex.

In sending my renewal I take the opportunity to commend the new magazine style in connection with the excellence of the contents for the last year. I believe The Review is the most complete trade paper in existence today. N. W. McGinnis.

Gladstone, Ore.

How do we like the cover of the new magazine style of Review? Not at all! It should be green.
H. H. Hughes.

Chicago, Ill.

The new fall dress is fine. It will pay you well, for the trade will use The Review even more than in the past.
A. L. Vaughan.

I hand it to The Review; you certainly know how to make a trade paper. E. E. Pieser.

Lethbridge, Alta.

I wish to compliment you on your progressiveness in putting out such a striking new idea in your already up-to-the-minute trade journal.

Fernandina, Fla.

The Review has been a good friend in the past, but the new magazine dress, with the date on the square, thick edge at the back, is quite an improvement.

The Florists' Review,
Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen:-

I like the new fall dress very well. However, this is only the outside, and no matter how attractive the appearance might be, you could not get along on that. It is the inside of your magazine which makes it really worth while.

I have obtained great assistance and at times much inspiration and encouragement from reading the articles pertaining to the retail part of the florists' business, which have appeared in The Review week after week from its very beginning.

The Review has my hearty congratulations on its recent progress and my best wishes that it may continue to fill the place with the florists which it has filled in the past.

Very truly yours,
Z D Blackistone

it is better in its new dress than ever before. C. E. Moore.

"Equally Well Edited."

We are pleased to say that The Review in its new dress makes a very favorable impression. It always has been a splendidly dressed medium, well put together mechanically and equally well edited, but we believe you have made another step forward in your newly adopted form.

MUM SHOW AT INDIANAPOLIS.

The final premium list has been issued for the annual exhibition of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, which is to be held in conjunction with the meeting of the State Florists' Association of Indiana, at the German House, Indianapolis, November 6 to 8, at which time the latter organization will celebrate its twenty-fifth anniversary. The premium list includes forty-five classes, most of which are for cut blooms, although plants and sprays of singles and pompons receive due recognition.

Indiana florists have made preparations for a first-class exhibition, and from present indications their plans should meet with full appreciation. The judges are to be R. Witterstaetter, of Cincinnati; Frank A. Friedley, of Cleveland, and J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, Ill. The fall show committee consists of A. F. J. Baur, chairman; John Hartje, superintendent of exhibition; O. E. Steinkamp, secretary; W. J. Vesey, Jr., Theodore Dorner, E. G. Hill, Harry White, W. W. Coles, Irwin Bertermann and H. L. Wiegand.

AMERICAN WONDER LEMON.

I have some American Wonder lemon seedlings. Will they grow and fruit from seed as well as cuttings, and, if so, how long will it take them to fruit?

E. C. C.

Seedlings of American Wonder lemon will grow as well as, or better than, cuttings, but should be budded to make them fruit. Cuttings do not require budding. If the plants are pot-grown, they sometimes fruit the second season. If your climate is mild in winter, they will make stronger growth outdoors than in pots, but lemons are more tender than oranges and must have a climate as nearly frost-proof as possible.

WIDOW HAS SAD EXPERIENCE.

Murray M. Himowich, an attorney in the Woolworth building, New York, has issued the following statement on behalf of his client, Mrs. Charles Krombach, widow of the well known Brooklyn florist who died August 18, 1913:

"Recently Mrs. Krombach has had considerable trouble with a man whom she knew by the name of Charles Berger, and the police authorities are seeking to apprehend that gentlemen and they have asked me to request that in the next edition of The Review you insert an article concerning this man and warning your readers.

"That gentleman is a good and clever talker and pending the drawing up of papers, he entered Mrs. Krombach's place in Brooklyn and in a few days sold out her entire stock, got the cash for everything and left the city. She is informed that he bought considerable merchandise from other people and turned it into cash in a few days, and did not pay for the merchandise.

"His description is as follows: Five feet, seven and one-half inches tall; dark; slim; weighs 145 pounds; high cheek bones; small teeth; looks like a Jap; is nervous. He is of German descent and knows the florists' business thoroughly and is clever.

"It is requested that the police headquarters in Brooklyn be notified immediately if any one of your readers come across this man."

HOW TO USE FORMALDEHYDE.

Replying to the inquiry in regard to the use of formaldehyde as a soil sterilizer which appeared in The Review for October 1, we have found that a solution of one part formaldehyde to 2,000 parts of water will destroy nematodes and almost all other soil pests. A thorough saturation should be made, and after twenty-four hours the soil should be worked to let all the formaldehyde gas escape. A thorough watering should be given, and planting can then be done.

IN A GARDENIA HOUSE.

Please advise me what I can grow for winter cut flowers in a house with gardenias and ferns. The house is too low for roses, and I will have some space that I should like to use to the best advantage. J. G.

There are but few flowers which can be successfully grown in the same house as gardenias. During midwinter you could utilize any vacant space for the forcing of tulips, narcissi and hyacinths; also, for such shrubs as lilacs, deutzias, Azalea mollis, etc., removing the plants to cooler quarters as they become well developed. Eucharis Amazonica could be profitably grown either in benches or pots. Lilies could be grown and might prove as profitable as any other crop you could grow. Giganteums would be quite at home in a gardenia temperature. C. W.

News from Abroad

Edinburgh, Scotland.—One-third of the staff of Dobbie & Co., seedsmen, have gone to war.

London, England.—The trade in this country is quite generally demanding of the Hollanders a liberal discount for cash payment on bulb orders, usually twenty-five per cent.

Nancy, France.—In the center of the hostilities in western France is the famous nursery of V. Lemoine & Son, which has sent out a wonderful list of novelties since 1892, including Begonia Gloire de Lorraine.

London, England.—Flower shows, nearly all canceled on the outbreak of the war, are being resumed. The exhibition of the Royal Horticultural Society September 8 brought out the usual attendance by the trade and stock enough to fill the hall, but was somewhat sparsely attended by the public.

Hamburg, Germany.—English houses have refused to have valley pips shipped via any neutral port. American importers want cold storage on board boat from Copenhagen and in the absence of it have ordered their stock into cold storage here to await further orders.

Bruges, Belgium.—The nurseries of F. Sander & Son have been used as quarters for Belgium soldiers, the quota being about 700 men. The army has done no damage to the equipment or stock. The bay tree sheds are 50x250 and would easily accommodate 5,000 men.

Rotterdam, Holland.—As the principal open port of western Europe, the docks here are becoming seriously congested with the arrivals of freight beyond the capacity of the boats to New York. Damage to plants and bulbs is almost inevitable. Quantities of bulbs are moving and plant shipments are increasing.

Ghent, Belgium.—The investment of Antwerp has interrupted the exports of azaleas and other plants; the district is overrun by refugees and many nurseries are without care, the owners or employees having departed.

Langport, England.—James Kelway was for many years in command of the local company of guards. Though now too old for service, he has assured the employees of Kelway & Co. who have joined the colors that their positions will await all who return.

Wandsbek, Germany.—E. Neubert, the valley exporter, states that in spite of the war conditions are in best order and that his customers may depend upon getting all their valley delivered in due time. The digging began October 1, and arrangements have been made for shipments via four different steamship lines. Freight and insurance cost more, so Mr. Neubert has reduced the price of pips accordingly. He further states that as Russia, France and Great Britain have canceled their orders, he will further reduce his prices this fall.

Yokohama, Japan.—When war first broke out business was greatly disturbed and international business was difficult to conduct. In the bulb business some orders from Europe were canceled. Since then, however, the outlook is much better and many of the orders have been reinstated, excepting German business. The German orders for lily bulbs are small, however, and as the crop is much shorter than expected, there will be no large surpluses of giganteum and prices will be well maintained. Large sizes of giganteum are short this season—shorter than ever before. Shipments are leaving Yokohama more slowly than usual, owing to the withdrawal of many boats from the Pacific service.

A. N. PIERSON'S NEW RANGE.

Nearly 150,000 square feet of glass were added to the establishment of A. N. Pierson, Inc., at Cromwell, Conn., with the erection of the range shown in the accompanying illustration. The entire work, which has just been completed, was done by the concern's own employees, under the personal supervision of A. N. Pierson. The ventilating apparatus, glass, and gutters complete with the posts were the only finished materials bought. The lumber for the sashbars was shipped direct from the south in the rough and dressed in the firm's own mill. The iron was bought at the mills and worked up in A. N. Pierson's own shops.

There are five houses 33x500, one 40x500, one 53x500 and a connecting house 40x400, not shown in the illustration, through which the steam main is carried from the power house. The power plant has also been increased; five small boilers were taken out and replaced with four larger ones, having a total capacity of 1,100 horse-power.

The late spring retarded building operations, so that it was necessary to change the plans for planting somewhat. It was originally planned to plant all the houses to roses. There are six houses of roses; the varieties planted are American Beauty, Killarney Brilliant, Shawyer, Milady, D'Arenberg, Ward, Hadley and Cecile Brunner. The call for greens has always greatly exceeded the firm's supply, and so 6,000 Croweanum, 7,000 smilax and 1,000 asparagus have been planted to meet that demand. About 30,000 Formosa lilies are bedded out for cut flowers during the winter. R. C. S.

HARTUNG'S HAPPY HOME.

Happy is the lot of the rural florist! Take, for instance, the case of Louis Hartung, at Two Rivers, Wis. With a town large enough to afford all the comforts and conveniences, he still is able to enjoy the pleasures of country life. Business always is good in such a place. Most of the trade is in the spring, a big business being done for Memorial day, but there is funeral work all the year around, and more or less regular call for plants and flowers, enough to keep things going nicely. Mr. Hartung has 6,000 feet of glass. Carnations are his principal cut flower crops, but he grows a general line of pot plants. An office building and workroom will be his next improvements.

SCHOOL GARDENING.

With a special appropriation from Congress, the United States Bureau of Education has just begun the work of investigation and promotion of home and school gardens. The new division will be under the direction of a specialist in school gardening. Miss Ethel Gowans, a graduate of the New York State College of Agriculture at Ithaca, is temporarily in charge of the work. Eventually it is hoped that every city school in the United States will have a teacher employed twelve months in the year who knows gardening both theoretically and practically.

In announcing the new work, Dr. Claxton declares: "School gardening will develop habits of industry, an appreciation of the value of money as measured in terms of labor, and a realization that every man and woman must make his or her own living, and contribute to the welfare of the community."

WAR RISK INSURANCE.

The United States government is ready to write war risk insurance for florists, seedsmen or nurserymen and the Bureau of War Risk Insurance at Washington has issued regulations that provide in part:

"Cargo and freight policies are issued for voyages only, and insurance may be placed through the collectors of customs at the various ports or by applying direct to the bureau at Washington.

"Applications for cargo insurance require the name of the applicant, description of the merchandise, giving marks and numbers, the vessel, her line or owner, and not only the amount of insurance required, but also the value of the goods to be insured. It is necessary that the applicants have marine insurance on each shipment and a statement as to the company and the amount of insurance carried is required.

"The amount insured against war risks cannot, in any circumstances, excede the amount insured against marine risks.

"It is also warranted by the assured that the vessel will sail within fifteen days from the date on which this insurance is effected, but in the event of the vessel sailing after that time it is agreed to hold the insured covered on notice to and payment of the additional premium required by the Bureau of War Risk Insurance, based on rates current at the time of sailing.

"It is quite impossible, with the conditions changing so rapidly, to quote rates to apply for more than fifteen days."

IRIS FOR FORCING.

Can irises be forced profitably? If so, please give cultural directions.

J. G.

Spanish irises now are quite largely grown under glass. They succeed well in benches or in flats containing five inches of soil. They need a cool house, not over 50 degrees at night. Plant the bulbs as soon as received. Keep in a coldframe. Do not cover with coal ashes or other material, as they start into growth quickly. House the first batch early in December to flower about the middle of March, and later batches at intervals. Good sorts are Blanche Fleur, British Queen, Louise, Chrysolora and Thunderbolt. C. W.

Kirkwood, Mo.—This is the Rhinebeck of the west, great quantities of violets having been grown here, mostly for the St. Louis market. But this season there will be few violets from Kirkwood. In their place sweet peas and snapdragons have been planted. The switch has been so general that there begin to be forebodings, many believing the new crops will be as seriously overdone as the old one was.

The Comfortable Establishment of L. Hartung, Two Rivers, Wis.

LEAF-SPOT ON MUMS.

The diseased mum leaves enclosed come from Polly Rose. No other variety seems affected. Of these, we had two lots of plants benched, one older and from 3-inch pots, the other from 2-inch pots. The older and larger plants are badly affected; the younger but little, if any. Can you tell us what is the trouble? The plants have daily been given stiff sprayings of water and have also been sprayed with nicotine and fumigated with Nicofume. Can it be thrips?

We are also having trouble with a small spider. Is there any way to get rid of it except by stiff spraying with water? It looks much like red spider, but seems lighter in color. W. V. F. C.

The leaves sent are affected with septoria, one of the fungoid diseases, commonly known as leaf-spot. This always appears at the bottom of the plant, to a greater or less degree, as the wood ripens in the fall, and is caused largely in the first place by crowding the plants, which does not permit sun and air to penetrate, rendering the leaves an easy prey to disease germs, and as the wood of the stem ripens and begins to "bark up," as the growers call it, the nourishment being withdrawn from the bottom leaves causes them to die. If it does not become too bad, leaf-spot is rather an advantage than otherwise, because it compels the grower to take off the bottom leaves and give the sun and light a chance to get in. Where the disease appears in pot plants that are isolated, it is an indication that the plant has been receiving too much water or sprayed too late in the day. Plants in the hot summer weather can hardly get too much spraying, but conditions are different when cool nights come. Polly Rose and Pacific both make heavy foliage, which accounts for their being affected when other varieties under similar conditions are not. The only remedy for leaf-spot is one of the fungicides sprayed carefully on the underside of the leaves in order to kill the spores and prevent the disease spreading to the other plants. One of the best fungicides is sulphide of potassium applied at the rate of a quarter ounce dissolved in a gallon of water. A simpler way to get this preparation is to use Fungine, which can be bought at any seed store. Bordeaux mixture is good also, but has a tendency to disfigure the foliage.

Regarding the small spider, this tiny pest, which would almost seem to be a cross between a red spider and a thrips, is prevalent some seasons, working on the underside of the leaves. There is nothing I know of any better than water applied with a fine spray with some force, which washes away the pest, or at least makes things so unpleasant that it goes elsewhere. This spraying, of course, should be done on bright days, as at this time of year surplus water should be avoided in the mum houses. C. H. Totty.

BORERS IN MUM PLANTS.

Under separate cover I am sending you the root and part of the stem of a chrysanthemum that is attacked by what Herrington, in his book on chrysanthemum culture, describes as a borer. As this pest gives no sign of the havoc until the plant is done for, I thought that perhaps you could suggest some remedy that would at least prevent its harming the stock in another season. I wrote to a florist who is a reliable grower of mums, but he could give me no satisfaction, only stating that the trouble begins in the early stages of the plants' growth and that the larvæ must be deposited in soft wood. This seems to be true, as I have another bench of mums that are unharmed, though only five feet from the ones affected. Not a single plant of my own cuttings or plants is affected—only this one bench, bought last spring, as I did not have enough of the kinds I wanted. It is discouraging to see a plant, when just ready to put out its buds, suddenly become wilted without apparent cause. The pest enters the stem just at the surface of the ground, eats its way into the heart and goes quickly on to the top. An entomologist of Baton Rouge, La., was here, and advised me to use tobacco dust, but so far it has not put an end to the pest. Up to this time about twenty-five fine mums have been destroyed. We remove all the soil and fill the hole with quicklime, so as to try to kill the borer or whatever is left. I have not yet discovered whether this does any good or not. M. R. J. C.

I do not know of any means of exterminating this pest. While we hear every year of occasional cases, this pest is by no means common, nor do I think it will become common. Tobacco dust is about as good as anything I know of, but if the plants are far advanced now, even were any remedies available they could not be used in sufficient strength to make them effective. We had this borer about ten years ago, but have never seen it since; therefore I do not think M. R. J. C. need worry about its causing any great trouble another year. C. H. Totty.

Sheldon, Ia.—Two new houses have been erected at the plant of the Sheldon Greenhouses. One is 25x80 feet and the other 30x90 feet. The rest of the range has been remodeled this last summer.

Meridian, Miss.—Adolph Arp, superintendent of parks, recently sent out a circular offering a surplus of park plants to the trade, with the statement that any left unsold October 1 would be offered to the public. Naturally, the trade objects.

Norfolk, Va.—The opening of the East End Floral Co., at 224 Church street, September 24, was a decided success. The large number of people who attended were pleased with the decorations of the store. Music and floral souvenirs helped draw the crowds.

Mt. Carroll, Ill.—Edward Margileth & Son say: "We have just completed a greenhouse 100 feet in length, the only one in our town, and have purchased the materials and stock from numerous advertisers in The Review, all of whom we have found reliable in selling goods as advertised."

St. Louis, Mo.—Owing to the quarter centennial celebration of the organization of the board of trustees of the Missouri Botanical Garden, October 15 and 16, the series of indoor floral displays will be begun in October instead of November this year, announces the September bulletin of the garden. Cannas, salvias, foliage plants, gladioli, Torenia Fournieri and China asters are among the plants to be exhibited. The articles in the September bulletin are on palm fruits and seeds, and the banana.

Chillicothe, O.—Louis Elsass had charge of the decorations for the White-Dwinell wedding September 24, which was one of the important ones of this season.

Mamaroneck, N. Y.—The George Baldwin Co., orchid grower, reports a busy season, large shipments of plants going out daily. Daily shipments of cut orchids are made to the New York market. The entire establishment is in fine order.

Bay City, Mich.—Smarting under the sting of a double defeat at the outing September 16, the Bay City florists challenged the representatives of Saginaw to another game of baseball. The match was played at Mulbun park October 4 and the challengers secured revenge. John Marsh is authority for the statement that the score was 20 to 8.

Merchantville, N. J.—The first flower show of the Merchantville Floral and Civic Association, held September 25, was well supported by the florists of this vicinity and Philadelphia. Special awards were made to Leonard J. Smith, Merchantville, for his display of dahlias, roses, palms and ferns; H. F. Michell Co., Philadelphia, for hardy perennials; Andorra Nurseries, Chestnut Hill, Pa., for collection of mixed evergreens; Stokes Seed Farms Co., Moorestown, for ferns and bulbs; Harold Otter, of Moorestown, ferns and cut flowers; Pennock Bros., Philadelphia, baskets and vases of cut flowers; J. J. Habermehl's Sons, Philadelphia, basket of cut flowers; Charles H. Fox, Philadelphia, basket of flowers, and Peacock Dahlia Farms, Berlin, N. J., for dahlia display.

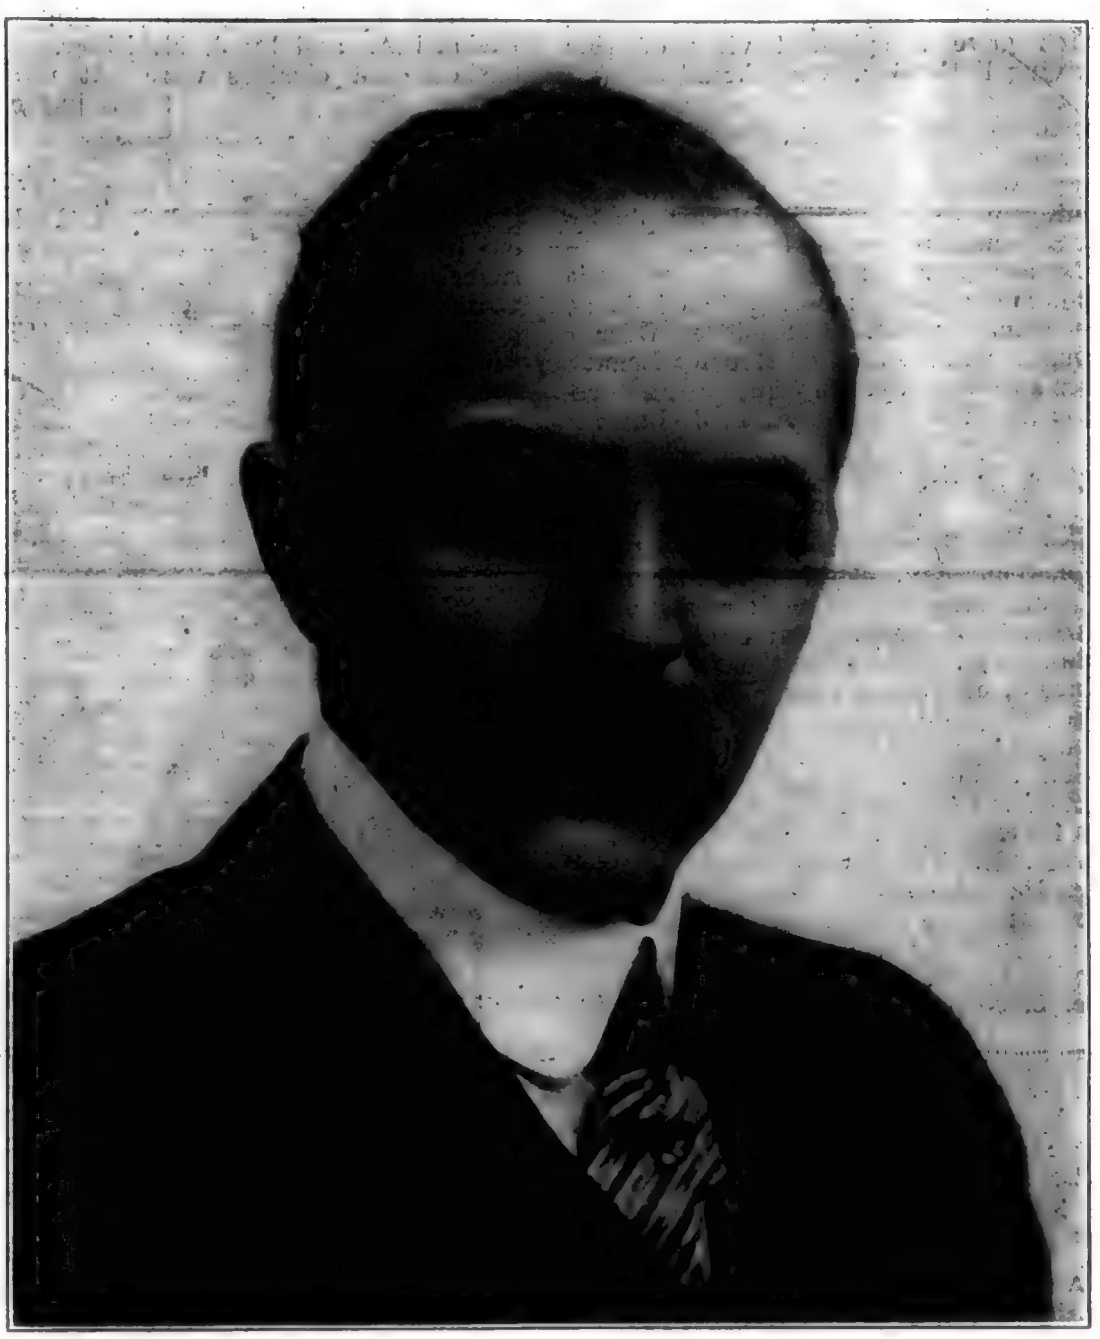
Some thirty odd members of the State Florists' Association of Indiana took advantage of the invitation of President W. W. Coles and his fellow florists to visit Kokomo October 6. There is perhaps no city of equal size in the middle west that can boast of a more progressive lot of florists than can this little city fifty miles north of Indianapolis. The day was ideal.

The Indianapolis party was met by the hosts at the station and taken by automobile to the establishment of the senior Coles. Many of the party had visited this place on previous occasions, and had a fair idea of what to expect in the way of well-grown stock, but even these were surprised by the thriftiness of the roses and their general good condition. As in most rose establishments, the Killarney varieties occupy by far the greater portion of the bench space. Some of the beds are in full crop, while others are coming on in succession. Mr. Coles finds that his trade demands a continuous supply of roses and every effort is bent in that direction. A whole bed, for nearly all the roses are growing on solid beds, of Killarney Brilliant looked good, but did not show the vigor of some of the beds of Killarney and White Killarney. The one bed of Mr. Coles' choice carries about 500 Ophelia. The plants literally are growing like weeds and a bud tips every shoot, making it a grand sight. We are informed that it is selling quicker over the counter than any other rose on the place. Perhaps the next variety of his choice is Mrs. Chas. Russell. There is a fine bed of this variety. Richmond is gradually losing out and will likely be entirely replaced within a year or two by the new reds that are coming on.

The carnation houses are equally interesting, all the leading varieties being grown. After the rather dry summer, during which the plants did not grow to extra size, the weather since housing has been ideal and the plants more than made up for lost time. The Enchantress varieties are all there in good shape and there is an elegant lot of White Wonder. Gloriosa seems to take kindly to the soil and treatment, and there is little complaint of sparse growth. Philadelphia was planted rather largely for a new variety. The later planted bed of this variety carried many more buds than those which were planted early.

In the mum houses some nice stock is shown, and Mr. Coles threatens to clean up some of the classes at the Indianapolis mum show next month. Unaka is being cut with fine quality and Chrysolora will be ready in a few days. Some fine buds of Wm. Turner are being coaxed along for the show, a supper for four being at stake in a competition which is to be staged at that time. Chieftain promises to make good all the claims of the introducers, but Alice Salomon looks only fairly well. There seems to be a general complaint of this variety coming uneven this year. We must not fail to mention the fine bed of King Humbert canna which greets the eye of the visitor as he approaches the place; some 1,500 plants in full bloom and not one yet touched by frost.



The next stop was at the Lincoln Coles place. There is one 300-foot house here, and only Beauties are being grown. Mr. Coles grew Beauties in this house for several seasons, but thinking that carnations might pay equally well and with less worry, he tried them out for a season. An unsatisfactory market, however, reduced the revenue per foot of bench space to such an extent as to make a return to his first love desirable. Mr. Coles' success with Beauties is rarely duplicated, and the opinion was expressed by several that there is more money in sight in this house of Beauties than they had ever seen before in a house of equal size.

At Thomas Knipe's place the party found an additional house and a new salesroom, built since the last visit. Mr. Knipe does a local retail business and during the few years since locating in Kokomo has built up a splendid trade. A varied line of stock is being grown here, all in nice condition. The roses are principally the Killarneys and Richmond. The carnations are getting established nicely and the list of mums embraces a number of varieties not seen on many places. Mr. Knipe finds that old white variety, Yanoma, a profitable late sort. Mr. Knipe is fortunate in having a capable helpmate, Mrs. Knipe being found busily engaged in making up some tasteful baskets.

Fred Kelly was busy with the fall bulbs, but he took time to show the visitors around. The stock is coming on in good shape. Some sweet peas are coming into bloom.

Mrs. Bilter met the party at the door of her establishment and had a pleasant word for everyone. Much of the stock used in her business is bought, as the size of her greenhouses forbids the production of all that is needed. The stock is in nice condition and reflects credit on the able manager.

THE MEN YOU MEET

E. C. AMLING.

BORN with a genius for the conservative handling of money, it took Ernst C. Amling forty-three years to become a banker, but having become a banker, it took no time at all for him to become a bank president—the choice was inevitable. Possibly there are people born at Maywood, Ill., who have not made a success of life, but that does not include any who went into the florists' business. E. C. Amling began as a grower—not a large one—but he soon sold out to start a commission cut flower business in Chicago—not a large one, but one that grew as he applied his genius for organization. In fifteen years he had the commission business running so smoothly that there was nothing for him to do except preside at company meetings, so he helped organize a bank—the State Bank of Oak Park—his home town. Now he's almost ready to tackle another job, for the bank appears to have got over all the rough places in its first year. And Amling won't be 45 until October 10.

After visiting the several establishments the party was driven around the city and through the parks for an hour, which gave a splendid view of this thriving little city. One should not fail to mention the visit to the new store owned and operated by Miss Elsie Coles. Although only open for business a few days, Miss Coles finds much business coming in. Everyone wished this plucky little woman unbounded success.

Dinner was served at the Francis hotel and a short meeting was held at the same place. Theodore Dorner brought a fine bunch of Hoosier Beauty roses and was kept busy answering questions about it. A. F. J. Baur.

A VISIT TO VINCENT'S.

The Dahlia Farms at White Marsh.

On Thursday, October 1, a number of Baltimore and Washington florists journeyed to the annual exhibition of dahlias and cannas at the farm of R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co., White Marsh, Md. They traveled by train and auto, some going on the special train and others making their way by auto to the grounds. On arrival at Cowenton the travelers by train were met by auto busses, on which they were conveyed over the mile and a half of road from the station to the farm. The weather was ideal for the occasion and the largest crowd of the week was there, over 5,000 people being on the grounds during the day. On entering the grounds, as far as the eye could reach were acres and acres, rainbow-colored, of dahlias in full bloom. There were also about fifteen acres of cannas of all varieties, but about half of these were the well known variety, King Humbert.

The Indoor Display.

A ride of a half mile through these glories brought the visitors to the exhibition hall. This was a building 30x200, used at other times as a potting shed and packing room, but it had been transformed for this occasion. The interior walls were freshly adorned with a coat of white paint, while the ceiling was completely covered with autumn foliage, pine boughs and greens. On all sides dahlias of all descriptions and colors, from the darkest maroon through all the blending shades to the purest white, were arranged in artistic manner.

On one side a wall of moss, about six feet high and 120 feet long and standing at an angle of 45 degrees, was entirely covered with dahlias arranged in arch effect, with columns dividing the entire space into 4-foot panels, each filled with a different color, and standing out from this were 4-foot wreaths of dahlias of contrasting colors, loosely arranged. The whole formed a riot of color and beauty, which had to be seen to be appreciated. On the opposite side, on panels about two feet square, were shown nearly all the different varieties, numbering about 175. Down the center of the wide hall were large vases holding probably 100 to 150 blooms, some of which looked as though the entire plant had been cut to obtain the long stem. These formed the center, with aisles between the rows. Farther down on the side was a bench given over to decorated baskets and sprays, made up as funeral designs, showing the many ways in which dahlias could be utilized for this purpose.

The entire display was staged under the supervision of Thomas Vincent, assisted by his brothers, John and Richard A., and by J. M. Rider. The baskets and clusters were put up by Samuel Feast & Sons, of Baltimore.

The Stock in the Fields.

Pages could be written on the indoor exhibition, but we moved from the hall out to the fields, where the plants were to be seen in all their natural beauty. Standing among them, one was reminded of the famous poem, "The Charge of the Light Brigade," but in this case there were dahlias, not cannon, to right of them, dahlias to left of them, dahlias in front of them and dahlias behind them. As far as could be seen in any direction, nothing but one mass of rainbow color was visible.

Of course it would be impossible to describe more than a small proportion of the 175 different varieties of dahlias grown, so I shall confine myself to a few of the newer and more prominent sorts. Golden Gate is the new, large buff yellow, of partly quilled cactus type, on which enormous flowers are produced. Mrs. Chas. Seybold is another large, peony-flowered variety of a distinct crimson pink, tipped white; this is a strikingly beautiful color. One of the largest red, true cactus varieties is Kalif. One variety of a striking color is J. H. Jackson, which is probably the darkest color known in any flower, being only a few shades removed from black. Geisha is one of the largest peony-flowered varieties and shows a rich combination of color, shading from a golden center to a scarlet edge on the inner petals. There are plenty of other rare varieties that are well worthy of mention, besides all the well known standard sorts, of which there is a large collection

The cannas were beautiful earlier in the fall, but the cool weather had caused them to lose their flowers to some extent; still they remained gloriously brilliant. Besides these, the fields of geraniums and other soft stock were in bloom, forming a picture no artist could reproduce in its natural beauty and color.

Several nationally prominent members of the trade were visitors during the week, besides the general public, of whom it was estimated that 25,000 to 30,000 attended. This show is an annual feature at the Vincent establishment and continues to increase in beauty and popularity each succeeding year. Its equal would be hard to find, and it would be worth while to travel far for the privilege of viewing it.

W. F. E.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—A permit has been issued to John Dailledouze for alterations to his range at 640 Lenox road, to cost $4,000.

Battle Creek, Mich.—Work has been started on another greenhouse at the range of the Battle Creek Sanitarium. This is the sixth greenhouse in the range and will be the fourth to be devoted to vegetables.

Union Grove, Wis.—The first of the three houses, each 57½x350 feet, which are to be erected by the Union Grove and Yorkville Greenhouse Co., is practically completed and work is well along on the second.

Allentown, Pa.—The Phoenix Silk Co. will erect a greenhouse next to the ribbon mill for the purpose of growing flowers and shrubbery with which to beautify the surroundings of the company's mills, a work which was begun last year.

Des Moines, Ia.—As the three small greenhouses now in Union park are in such bad condition that heavy expenses for repairs are incurred each year, the park department is planning two new ones, if the appropriation can be obtained. At any rate, one house, 25x75 feet, will be built shortly.

Cedar Rapids, Ia.—The Polland Floral Co. will erect a large range on Twenty-seventh street, between First and Second avenues, the material for which will be furnished by the Lord & Burnham Co. Part of the glass is expected to be ready for use this fall, while the rest will be completed in the spring.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Lord & Burnham Co. will erect a $2,000 addition to the greenhouse of A. H. Dollard, at 704 Ocean avenue.

Reesville, O.—J. W. Gregory & Son have begun the erection of a greenhouse. This firm is the successor of Wm. Merriweather.

Clear Lake, Ia.—Fred Pushee has purchased five acres of land and will shortly commence the erection of a greenhouse on the property.

Carthage, Mo.—Stephen Hyde, proprietor of the Fairview Greenhouses, is adding a house 60x350 feet, which will be devoted exclusively to roses.

Hannibal, Mo.—E. A. Hodge is adding a greenhouse to his range on the south side, in order to accommodate the increase in business he looks forward to next year.

Houston, Tex.—Robert C. Kerr is building a conservatory above his store, at the corner of Main and McKinney streets, the top story already having been torn down. The idea is the result of Mr. Kerr's trips through the florists' centers in the north, and the structure will cost $5,000.

Lake Linden, Mich.—The Pearce Hardware & Furniture Co. will erect an addition to the range near Torch Lake. The new house will be 27x75 feet. The company started in the flower business rather as an experiment three years ago, and the success of the venture has been so great as to demand an increase in the size of the range.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

Carnation Register.

With the purpose of making the "Carnation Register" of the society as complete as possible, so that it may be the supreme authority on carnation nomenclature, Secretary A. F. J. Baur is sending to each raiser of new varieties a list of those credited to him, with the request that each one supply data that are lacking in the register. As there are about 300 carnation raisers and 1,500 varieties recorded, it has been a matter of much labor to hunt out of the alphabetical list the varieties each man raised. That this work may not be wasted, it is hoped that each one who receives a list will not fail to supply the data wanted.

The information desired about each variety is its color, parentage, raiser, disseminator, date of registration and date of dissemination. There are some raisers of varieties in the register whose addresses are not to be found. Their names and those of the varieties credited to them are printed herewith in the hope that they will be able to supply the missing data and send it to Secretary A. F. J. Baur, Indianapolis, Ind. The list is as follows:

Raiser.	Variety.	Description.	Year Reg.
Kirk	Volunteer	White, striped rose	1888
Muller	Springfield	Rosy pink	1876
Page	Victor	Red	1887
Pyfer	W. E. Rowlands	Pink	1886
Temple	Uncle Sam	Deep crimson red	1886
White	King of the Crimsons	Crimson	1876
Bergman	American Flag	White, striped red	1890
Conrad	Ida May	Canary yellow, splashed pink	....
Ussing	Alexander	Deep pink	1891
Shupelt	Euphemia	Light pink	....
Shupelt	Marie	Scarlet	1893
E. J. Cloud	Trilby.	Bright cardinal	1896

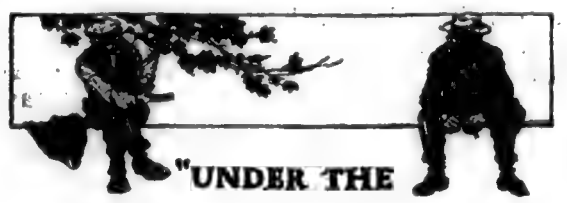
SAGINAW, MICH.

The Market.

The usual run of business is about normal, with no reports of frost yet. Carnations are more plentiful and find a ready sale. Roses are in big supply, and the quality is getting better every week. Chrysanthemums have made their appearance, but without a buyer. September seems too early for the general public. The supply of mid-season and late mums will be tremendous this fall.

Dutch bulbs are arriving as in former years, but there is doubt whether the blooms will be as good as those from bulbs that were not packed up so early.

Various Notes.



The Wm. Roethke Floral Co. had phenomenal luck with asters this year. As they were on high land, the heavy rains did not affect them, so that they brought good returns.

Grohman the Florist is cutting some choice carnations in quantity, which are all sold before the day is over.

Chas. Frueh & Sons have the first mums to show, and they are well done for early stock.

J. B. Goetz Sons are cutting a choice lot of roses, especially Killarney and White Killarney. They have received their Dutch bulbs, and all are busy getting them into flats and pans.

Among recent visitors were: Walter Mott, representing Benjamin Hammond, Beacon, N. Y., and Stephen Greene, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia. Both were fortunate enough to be guests at the outing September 16. Gee.

"UNDER THE SPREADING CHESTNUT TREE"

[Readers are invited to contribute to this column. No story so old that it isn't new to someone, but the fresher the better. No bar against originality. If clippings are sent, add name of paper.]

Potts & Nix, Clanton, Ala., are not florists, but they are thinking of getting into the business.

Decorations vs. Deceased.

A prominent Virginian had died, and his daughter, in arranging the house for the funeral, had gone almost to an extreme in placing palms and ferns and plants in the drawing room—in fact, it had more the appearance of a wedding than a funeral. One of the old darkies came to pay his last respects.

"Miss Mae," he said, "dis surely is fine, all dese here trees; but, Miss Mae, where is you going to put your pa?"—Chicago Examiner.

There's Always a Reason.

With a firm tread and a masterful air, the lady strode into the florist's shop. Her choice fell on a remarkably green palm in an ornamental pot.

"Will it do well in the sunshine?" she inquired of the shop assistant, with a sharp glance from her eagle eye.

"Yes, madam," was the courteous response.

"Don't say it will, if it won't!" snapped she amiably. "If it does well in the sun, will the shade hurt it?"

"Oh, no, madam!"

"What!" she exclaimed with a triumphant, now-I've-caught-you air. "You tell me it will do equally well in sun or shade? Young man, you don't know your business! Fetch your master! Fetch your master!"

The owner of the establishment was instantly summoned. Even he quailed before her; but, for all that, he backed up his employee's statements.

"Then it's a really remarkable and accommodating plant!" she commented, waxing sarcastic. "My good man, it's both ridiculous and unnatural!"

"That's just it," interrupted the floral expert. "It's an artificial plant."—Old Tale Revised.

It has been said that traveling salesmen acquire a fondness for feeding the chickens. That most domestic of gadders, Arthur Zirkman, never will be able to deny the impeachment.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS.

Stewart's Seed Store, at Omaha, Neb., reports a large increase in the summer business, owing chiefly to the favorable season for outdoor flowers, whereas there was practically nothing to be had last year, owing to the drought. S. B. Stewart has charge of the seventeen acres of outdoor stock and is sending in, at the time of writing these notes, a fine assortment of dahlias, that make an attractive display and sell well. C. J. Stewart says the sale of grass seed is phenomenal, blue grass being a large factor. Mrs. S. B. Stewart is the artist and relates pleasant reminiscences of the florists' convention held here several years ago.

Hess & Swoboda, of Omaha, Neb., keep up a most attractive up-to-the-minute store, the result of travel and close observation. Lewis Henderson and the Arnolds both are well pleased with the business stimulated by the carnival now in progress. Crowds of flower lovers are noticed admiring the window displays.

Manager H. G. Windheim, of the Nebraska Seed Co., Omaha, prophesies another big year, following a record breaker of corn and cereal crops.

J. F. Wilcox & Sons, of Council Bluffs, Ia., are cutting their usual supply of roses, carnations and chrysanthemums, and are well pleased with the demand, both wholesale and retail. The Younkerman Seed Co. has had a large share in the season's good things and is stocking up in anticipation of another such. Dutch bulbs were never of finer quality.

The Iowa Seed Co., of Des Moines, has absorbed the Des Moines Seed Co. and is well established in its handsome new building. Part of the store is partitioned off as an aviary. Birds and fish are sold in considerable numbers. The plant and cut flower department is kept well supplied from the range of 125,000 feet of glass. Some fine Beauties were noted. The bulb section is well represented. A special effort is being made to induce customers to plant more largely this season, owing to the extra quantity and quality of the stock. The Wilson Floral Co., under the able management of Friend Wilson, formerly of Western Springs, is keeping up his reputation for producing first-class stock. The Guthrie-Lorenz Co. finds its new location has increased the volume of business in all branches.

George Kranz & Son, of Muscatine, Ia., find the seed branch a profitable adjunct to their business, a large proportion of their trade coming from the country districts. Apropos of the extraordinary growth of corn, I counted twenty-two rows of kernels on one ear, which is, I believe, a record breaker.

Andrew Bather, of Clinton, Ia., recently moved into a new store, which, having window frontage on two streets, enables him to stage an attractive display. Funeral work has kept the force busy. J. R. Bather & Co. have a store near by, well supplied from the houses, and separated only by a road from those of Brother Andrew. It is refreshing to see the spirit of friendly rivalry that exists between the two establishments. The public seems to appreciate it. W. M.

Easthampton, Mass.—George McIntyre is opening a greenhouse at 3 School street.

PITTSBURGH.

The Market.

Pittsburgh is enjoying most delightful fall weather, not too warm and with an occasional light frost. There has been no rain for so long that everything is drying up and the leaves are falling more from the drought than from any frost we have had.

General trade conditions are fair, not quite all that could be desired, possibly better for the wholesalers than for the retailers, who continue to complain that business is not picking up as it should.

Flowers are about equal to the demand. Asters are gone and only an occasional lot of gladioli are seen. Cosmos is not grown much in this locality and few dahlias. Chrysanthemums have been more plentiful during the last week, in white, pink and yellow. Valley, which was scarce, is quite plentiful again. There are plenty of good roses and Beauties for all.

Various Notes.

Pittsburgh florists have had several large funerals lately, which called for immense quantities of flowers. Among them was the funeral of Harry Darlington, at which there were more really good flowers than at any funeral in years. There were probably about 150 separate orders. Mrs. E. A. Williams had the majority of them. There was a pall, 5x10½ feet, made solid of valley and cattleyas on green plush, with a casket cross five feet long, of solid white carnations, resting on the top when it was in position. There were a number of designs from out-of-town. These came from some of the best stores in the business, but, in comparison with the beautiful, fresh flowers from the local florists, they were not a credit to the senders. It might not be out of place to suggest to some that it would be advisable to follow the example of others and telegraph their out-of-town orders to some reliable man in the city in which they are to be used. A number of these designs arrived so late that had they been for anyone less prominent than Mr. Darlington they would never have been delivered in time. As it was, a number of them were taken direct to the church after all the other flowers had been arranged.

W. F. Drewes has discontinued his Wilkinsburg store, believing that most of the business he got there he would get at his Braddock store without the additional expense.

Visitors: Edward Swayne, Kennett Square, Pa.; H. C. Neubrand, representing A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn.; Mr. Kiel, manager for Chas. Peterson, East Liverpool, O., and Geo. S. Huscroft, Steubenville, O.

Clarke.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

Trade is still quiet, but it is a little more brisk than it has been of late. Most of the stores were cleaned out of asters last Saturday, the growers having picked about every available one. A few America gladioli are on the market, but little is seen of other varieties. Sweet peas in October are rather unusual, but some good outdoor grown flowers reach us twice a week. Now that some of the other flowers are scarce, they sell fairly well. Carnations are fairly large, but their stems are quite short. They sell well. Valley, which has been slow in arriving, is now sufficient to meet the demand. Dahlias are good sellers, and we are receiving good varieties. The first violets of the season arrived Thursday, October 1, and were in good condition. Roses are plentiful. During the last week My Maryland has been especially good. Mrs. Taft sells well. American Beauties are in splendid condition and are quickly cleared, prices ranging from $3 to $9 per dozen. Golden Glow chrysanthemums have sold fast during the week, but Smith's Advance does not move so readily. Yellow and red flowers are favorites in this city. Ferns, galax, asparagus and smilax all are plentiful.

Various Notes.

The 5 and 10-cent stores have been doing a big business in 10-cent ferns. They also have a large quantity of Dutch bulbs, which they are selling cheap.

Salter Bros., at their East Main street store, are showing large quantities of Japanese lilies, both growing and cut.

John Dunbar, president of the Florists' Association, has been at Boston, where he met Professor C. S. Sargeant, of the Arnold Arboretum.

William Ballantyne, of Greece, N. Y., is growing some fine dahlias, which he disposes of quickly.

The greenhouses of Joseph W. Craig, of Irondequoit, N. Y., are in good condition, with an excellent supply of stock. His poinsettias are doing well and promise to be in good shape for the Christmas season.

R. E. Blackshaw, of the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, had a good display of baskets and supplies at the Seneca hotel last week. He says he is having a quite successful business trip.

Visitors last week were: John R. Fridlington, of the Wright & Graham Co., New York; W. Knight, of Knight & Struck Co., New York; Wm. Baum Lake, of the W. B. Lake Co., New York, and the representative of the Climax Mfg. Co., Castorland, N. Y. H. J. H.

Mainly About People

Steubenville, O.—George L. Huscroft has completed a rose house, 40x120 feet, at his establishment west of town.

Trinidad, Colo.—Miss Gertrude Barrett succeeds Miss Kittie Reeves as bookkeeper for the Central Park Floral Co.

Milwaukee, Wis.—M. Dippman, formerly in business at 1244 Nineteenth street, has retired and moved to Rockfield.

Hutchinson, Kan.—J. G. Lamont, who recently bought a store and greenhouses in Topeka, has left to take charge. Mrs. Lamont and Miss Cecile Lamont followed him a few days later.

Kenosha, Wis.—Oscar Hoefer, who has charge of the gardening operations on a number of the larger private places here, reports general trouble this season with the yellows among asters.

Simsbury, Conn.—O. H. Stacy's new house, on the Phelps-Croft tract, is nearly ready for occupancy. He is building greenhouses on the lot and will continue in this line of business.

Washington, Kan.—After the dull two months just past, Mrs. M. L. Penwell welcomes the approach of the busy season, which is already forecasted by gradually increasing sales. Fall stock is in fine condition.

Indianapolis, Ind.—C. C. Thomas, formerly with the Bertermann Bros. Co., now is manager of the Indianapolis store of the E. G. Hill Floral Co. C. M. Balluff, the former manager, now is with the company's Cincinnati store.

Hutchinson, Kan.—The Kline brothers, who conduct Kline's Flower Shop, have purchased a greenhouse in Topeka, and Norval N. Kline has gone to that town to take charge. G. L. Lamont is now associated with the Klines and it is planned to build a range in this city, at Eleventh and Monroe streets.

North Attleboro, Mass.—John Nolan is making extensive alterations in his greenhouses on Smith street.

Parkersburg, W. Va.—A new automobile delivery truck has just been put into service by the J. W. Dudley Sons Co.

Glassboro, N. J.—A recent recruit in the ranks of the trade is Miss Emma A. Leap, who is planting peonies for wholesale cut flower purposes. Gladioli for shipping cut spikes to market will be planted in the spring.

Boulder, Colo.—Stock is looking fine here. French and Dutch bulbs are all in and potted up. Charles Fawcett says prospects are excellent but that trade has not picked up so well as it should, as the weather still is too warm.

Galesburg, Ill.—J. Byers, of Chicago, has come to this city to take charge of the flower shop in the store of the O. T. Johnson Co. Mr. Byers was formerly connected with the Bohannon Floral Co., Chicago, and Fischer Bros., Evanston.

Oklahoma City, Okla.—L. Foster, for nine years with the Barteldes Seed Co. and for six years at the head of this concern's flower department, will be the manager of the store just opened by Furrow & Co., at 120 West Main street.

Des Moines, Ia.—In the baby contest during the recent style show Lorenzo Thomas Chrisman, Jr., was among the prize winners and his portrait appeared in the local papers. His father is L. T. Chrisman, manager of the flower department of the Iowa Seed Co.

Manitowoc, Wis.—Henry Levenhagen, who recently returned to this city to engage in the florists' business, has secured a downtown office and display window with George Bros. Co., on South Eighth street. His greenhouses are on South Tenth street, where he expects to erect a store next year.

NASHVILLE, TENN.

The Market.

The week has seen a radical change in the situation here, as most of the people are home from their summer vacations and are beginning to give parties. Everyone is finding business good, with sale for about all the really good flowers that are available. Carnations are coming in freely and a good many are being wholesaled. The quality is nothing to brag about as yet, but they are coming better every day. Chrysanthemums are appearing in all of the stores, but they still are small. They sell readily, however. Roses are also coming in more freely. There are few dahlias and those that are coming in are inferior. Gladioli are all but gone and there is no valley to speak of. Lilies are scarce. The general feeling is that this season is to be a good one in spite of the war.

Various Notes.

The Dutch bulb men are abroad in the land and almost every day brings one or more. They are anxious to sell, but are not offering much if any better prices than they did last season. They all seem to have surpluses in New York that they are willing to sell at a low figure.

Geny Bros. continue the improvements at their store. They are putting in a new front, with enamel pillars, making one of the handsomest store fronts in the city.

It is reported that McIntyre Bros. are planning to open a downtown store. Of course they will continue their store on West Broadway.

Herman Rynveldt, of Rynveldt & Sons, was in the city two days last week. He gave some vivid word pictures of the European war, as their nurseries are in sight of Liege. He says that a part of their nurseries has been flooded as a precaution against a German invasion.

The state entomologist has made his annual inspection of the nurseries and greenhouses in this vicinity and reports that all are clean. He says that there will be a general shortage of hardy ornamentals this season as a result of the drought.

Frank Cornell has been delayed in the construction of his new place and will not have it finished for another two or three weeks.

The Joy Floral Co. has issued an 8-page pamphlet on bulb culture that is being given a good circulation. This is the sort of work that helps us all. The Joy windows are decorated with Dutch bulbs.

Haury & Sons still are selling many ferns. Their store is filled with them and publicity is the thing that sells anything. F. B.

Waynesboro, Pa.—L. C. Happel is erecting a greenhouse, 40x110 feet, which will be used for pot plants.

Baraboo, Wis.—E. T. Ross is adding another greenhouse at his range at East and Eighth streets. The new house is of the same dimensions as the two already erected.

North Olmsted, O.—H. Christman & Son have taken over the houses of Irving Dunford, comprising 12,000 square feet of glass, and are making extensive improvements. A 40-foot brick smokestack has just been completed.

OBITUARY

John M. Griffith.

John M. Griffith, aged 77 years, died of apoplexy, superinduced by the infirmities of old age, at his home, Eldon, near Lutherville, Baltimore county, Md., Sunday, October 4. Mr. Griffith was stricken Saturday night and never rallied. He was up until about a month ago, actively engaged in business, being the founder and president of the Griffith & Turner Co., seed and implement dealers, an old-established firm in Baltimore. He was a native of Baltimore county and for many years owned and conducted a large farm near Long Green, where he enjoyed a large circle of friends among the farmers not only of his own locality but of the entire state. A widow, one daughter and two sons survive. Mr. Griffith was a member of the Society of Friends and the funeral services were held from his home October 6. Interment was made in the Friends' cemetery near Cockeysville, Md. The obsequies were attended by a committee from the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Baltimore, of which the deceased was a member.

George T. Hodges.

George T. Hodges, 74 years old, a retired florist of Louisville, Ky., died September 25, of senility, at his home, 1926 Ivanhoe court. He had been ill for more than a year, but had been confined to his room only during the last six weeks.

Mr. Hodges went to Louisville from Frankfort, Ky., fifty years ago and worked for a time with his father, Col. Albert G. Hodges. He later embarked in the florists' business. For a number of years the business was carried on by his wife, Mrs. Fannie Hodges, but when the greenhouses were destroyed by fire, three years ago, the land was divided into lots and sold.

Mr. Hodges is survived by his wife, Mrs. Fannie Hodges; a daughter, Mrs. Steve Q. Gentry; a brother, James A. Hodges, and three sisters, Mrs. Annie E. Thomas, Miss Elizabeth B. Hodges, of Philadelphia, and Mrs. Wattie N. Crutcher, of Los Angeles. The funeral was held at the residence Sunday afternoon, September 27. Burial was in Cave Hill cemetery.

Jesse Bell.

Jesse Bell, for a number of years in the employ of William Fraser, of Baltimore, Md., committed suicide September 29 by shooting himself in the right temple in an outbuilding at his home. Mr. Bell had been grieving for some time over the ill health of his wife, and this is given as the cause of his act by relatives and friends. From evidence found afterward it was apparent that the deed had been carefully planned. Mr. Bell was 56 years old and formerly lived at Govans, where he had a brother.

Henry W. Pierce.

Henry Walter Pierce, for several years a well-known florist of Woonsocket, R. I., died October 1 at his home at 453 Transit street in that city. Death was due to a complication of diseases which had troubled him for the last two years, but only during the last three weeks had he been confined to his bed. He would have been 60 years of age on his next birthday, November 10.

Mr. Pierce was born in Woonsocket, where he had lived all his life, and was the son of Levi L. and Melissa (Hopkins) Pierce. He was married in February, 1889, and his widow, with one son and one daughter, survives him. While building his summer home at Oakland Beach early last summer he fell and fractured a rib, which aggravated the complications from which he was suffering, and from which he never recovered. He was a member of Union Grange, No. 13, Patrons of Husbandry. W. H. M.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

Business did not improve much last week. The warm weather was right on the job, and, as there was no killing frost, the outdoor stock is still plentiful. The weather has certainly been beautiful, but one big frost would be a boon to the entire trade. Carnations are becoming more abundant every day and are looking fine. The quantity is sufficient to take care of the present demand and this puts the sale of asters away below what it has been. Asters are shortening up. Roses are not quite so plentiful as they have been, but have improved in quality and are moving well. Dahlias are at their best. It is remarkable that they are still with us and there is no telling how long it will be before they are entirely gone.

The supply of valley is still large enough to take care of the demand and it is a relief to see that this stock is not as scarce as was expected. Violets are coming in, but the demand is light. Lilies are not so plentiful and, in consequence, are bringing better prices. The quality is fine. There will be a number of large openings next week and the florists already have some good orders.

Club Meeting.

The Milwaukee Florists' Club, at the last meeting, listened to an interesting and instructive talk on "Insects," by Prof. C. V. Holsinger, of the Milwaukee County Agricultural School. There is a large enrollment of students at this school and it is without a doubt one of the highly successful schools of the country.

The next meeting of the club, November 5, will be mum night, and all outside as well as local growers are invited to exhibit. The display will be attractive and a number of novelties will be seen.

The club has recently received the following new members: C. F. Pritzlaff, A. Reinhardt, F. Gutermuth and C. A. Koch.

Various Notes.

Arthur Leidiger, who has been away on vacation for some time, is again on the job and his smiling countenance is seen daily at the market.

John Kruchten and his father, both from Chicago, were in Milwaukee October 2. The main purpose of their trip was to visit the enlarged plant of the Holton & Hunkel Co.

The Holton & Hunkel Co. had a large order for a society wedding at Oconomowoc, Wis. The wedding was a big affair and the decorations and bouquets were unusually attractive. H. J. S.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Incorporated by Act of Congress, March 4, 1901.

Officers for 1914: President, Theodore Wirth, Minneapolis; vice-president, Patrick Welch, Boston; secretary, John Young, 53 W. 28th St., New York City; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo.

Officers for 1915: President, Patrick Welch, Boston; vice-president, Daniel MacRorie, San Francisco; secretary, John Young, 53 W. 28th St., New York City; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo.

Thirty-first annual convention, San Francisco, Cal., August 17 to 20, 1915.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

IT isn't enough to adjust complaints promptly—it is necessary to avoid complaints.

IT is easier to decline credit at the start than to cut off credit after it has been unwisely extended.

THERE are immense quantities of chrysanthemums to be merchandised in the next six or seven weeks—considerably more than ever before.

FERTILIZER is not lacking on account of the war abroad; on the steamer Zyldyk, from Rotterdam, which reached New York last week, were 3,069 bags of bone meal.

TIME was when a florist must be extremely improvident to score a failure—but that day has gone. It now is necessary to exercise the utmost prudence in the handling of funds.

As a reminder that azaleas and other plant stock from Belgium are coming along as usual, it may be noted that on the manifest of the steamer Hanseat, from Rotterdam, which reached New York October 1, were 705 cases and eighty-nine tubs of plants.

FLORISTS of the state of New York who have felt concerned in regard to the possibility of the provisions of the workmen's compensation law applying to their employees will be somewhat relieved if they read the opinion of the commission printed in this week's Nursery Trade News under the heading, "New Yorkers Need Not Worry."

BUSINESS IN THE WEST.

Possibly there is no better evidence of the way business in the west is responding to the splendid crops now being marketed at high prices than that afforded by the sales of the Chicago general mail-order houses. Here is the record of the largest one:

HONORABLE MENTION.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper. Among those who have this week enrolled themselves for more than one year in advance are:

FOUR YEARS.

Hansen, Henry, Catskill, N. Y.

TWO YEARS.

Groves, Robert, Adams, Mass.
Varela, Federico C., Teneriffe, Canary Islands.
Leap, E. A., Glassboro, N. J.
Gerbing, G., Fernandina, Fla.

The Review stops coming when the subscription runs out. The new green notice with the last copy tells the story; no bills are run up; no duns sent.

STATEMENT DAY.

The up-to-date florist mails each customer a statement on the last day of each month.

Some florists print at its head the words "Accommodation Account."

If not paid by the tenth day of the month another copy is mailed. If still neglected, on the twentieth day a third copy is mailed, marked "Please remit."

If this process runs through two months without result, the accommodation is withdrawn and the account in full placed in the hands of the store collector.

EVERYBODY HAPPY.

A trade paper best succeeds that is most helpful to its readers—if the readers profit, then everybody profits. Otherwise, "nothin' doin'." With The Review it's this way:

I am enclosing a check to renew my subscription to The Review, and also a classified advertisement that I shall be glad to have published. I had good results last season and only hope I shall do as well this year. With pleasure I can tell you that I am now erecting my new Lord & Burnham house. I am proud of this house and if it had not been for The Review I do not suppose I would ever have heard of Lord & Burnham Co.; it was by reading The Review I found them, and as long as I am in the business I expect to use the paper.—Charles Taynor, New Carlisle, O., October 5, 1914.

IMMORTELLES IN FIRE.

Three hundred sixty-four cases of immortelles, just arrived from France, were in a fire in New York September 30.

The steamer Sant' Anna, in from Marseilles September 28, was waiting to discharge cargo at the Bush docks in Brooklyn, when fire was discovered, early in the morning, in No. 2 hold. Along with other merchandise, the hold contained the second shipment of immortelles that has reached the United States this year, the first shipment, September 19, having been only 185 cases. It took two fireboats several hours to extinguish the fire, and it was not accomplished until the hold had been submerged. The immortelles that were not burned were soaked in dirty water. What the salvage will be is problematical.

The consignments were as follows:

"THE WAR, THE WAR!"

[By Beatrice Plumb.]

The florist sighed, and then he swore,
As Mr. Brown minced in the store
And said, "Dear sir, because of war,
We raise our price!

"The baskets made in Germany
Were worth their weight in gold," said he,
"In gold, and at the price they'd be A sacrifice!

"The tulle and pins from England came,
So rose." The florist did the same,
And called that traveler a name
That wasn't nice.

Brown smiled to see the florist dance
With rage, and cooed, with soothing glance,
"'Most all our stuff's held up in France;
Let that suffice!"

They raised the coal, the grasping lot!
A cent on ev'ry flower pot;
On paper, string, and Lord knows what,
In half a trice.

To draw the dollars, please observe,
The European war would serve.
(They actually had the nerve
To raise the ice!)

So can you wonder, honest true,
That when his wife said, "Come out, do;
The moon's to rise at eight-two-two;
Brown told me twice,"

He yelled out, "What! The moon as well?
What won't they raise? It's hard to tell!
Tell Brown to rise and go to—well,
Not Paradise!"

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The continued prevalence of unseasonable weather has been the principal factor in the market this week. The needed drop in temperature has not developed and this abnormal condition has had a baneful effect upon the market for all flowers.

It is worthy of note that a shortage in short-stemmed Beauties has developed, due to the favorable growing conditions and owing to the large percentage of sun which the stock has received lately. Practically nothing but long-stemmed flowers have been received this week, short stems being almost out of the market at this time. This condition is expected to remain dominant as long as the warm, sunny days continue.

Of other roses, a continued large supply is coming in. Shorts are less abundant than long roses, and the greatest demand seems to be for the former class of stock. Russell continues to lead the market. It has been necessary to supply a rose which, in a measure, could take the place of Beauties under present conditions, and Russell, being a strong popular favorite because of its novelty, has been used for this purpose. The supply of Killarney and White Killarney continues large. The color and quality of this stock is excellent, but the buds are soft on account of the warm weather. A good cold snap would bring these roses into the market in fine condition. It may be noted that the call for red roses, and red flowers in general, dropped off somewhat from last week, when the Jewish holidays accelerated the sale of this color. As the season advances into winter the demand for red will increase. My Maryland, Killarney Brilliant and Mrs. Ward are

WE HAVE FANCY CATTLEYAS AT MODERATE PRICES.

You can make good money on the Orchids we offer. It is fine stock and prices are such that you can afford to carry them in stock and put them before your customers who appreciate the better kinds of flowers.

VALLEY

We have not been without Valley for a single day. You always can get what you want if you order of Amling.

VIOLETS

Double Violets are ready and the stock really is excellent for the first of the season. Better try some with today's order.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

Pink has come this week, so we now can supply the three staple colors. The stock is good—never better for so early in the season. No notice necessary on ordinary orders—just time to cut the flowers and get them in from the greenhouse if you need them in big lots—they're ready.

FANCY ROSES

We have had good roses, yes, and many of them, but the cut this week is the best of the season to date. Can you use

CARNATIONS

Our supply is increasing rapidly. Excellent flowers, good stems, and enough to take care of some more orders.

BEAUTIES

We shall take care of our Beauty buyers right through the season—a larger supply than ever.

HOME-GROWN GIGANTEUM LILIES

If you haven't had good lilies, it was because you have not ordered of us. The lily, cut right, is a good shipper, but there is a limit. The lilies you get from us are home-grown, fresh cut, and you get them with only one handling. Our supply is so large no one need be content with any less good lilies.

If you look to us for your supply of green goods, you will be well pleased. Fancy ferns, good smilax, fine adiantum, plumosus and Sprengeri bunches, galax, leucothoe, boxwood—we have them all.

in strong demand, while Richmond is selling well.

Mums are active, especially for fancy, large stock. These flowers are not finishing off properly on account of the warm weather and are being cut by some growers before reaching a sufficiently ripe stage, in order to reach the market early. Colder weather is needed to bring mums around in the best shape. Golden Glow, Smith's Advance and October Frost are the main varieties coming in this week. Unaka, pink, is of good quality, but is not fully ripened as it arrives. The utmost care therefore is necessary in handling the flowers to avoid bruising.

Though the warm weather is detrimental to the shipping of carnations in good condition, the supply is rapidly increasing. A large proportion of carnations received are too short for shipping orders and this class of stock is used up on city trade almost exclusively. Enchantress and Beacon this week are the strongest in demand, with Ward a good seller on certain kinds of work.

Easter lilies have shortened up. Some excellent rubrum is being sold and lily prices, in general, are firmer than they were. Bouvardia has just come in, with no demand to speak of. This stock is too early this year and should not arrive yet if any kind of a market is desired. Cattleyas are more abundant and prices are less firm. Violets now are a daily item of supply and are of fair quality for the first of the season. The weather is too warm for them, both for quality and sales.

In general, it may be said that city business is sluggish and, for those houses which handle only a desultory shipping trade, times appear rather below normal. For those wholesalers whose shipping business is at all extensive, the out-of-town trade has a bolstering-up effect, and makes conditions, on the average, seem fair, though business is nothing like what it ought to be at this date. Many wholesalers make the mistake of comparing the conditions of the last two weeks with the same period a year ago. It will be remembered that an early frost, coming about September 15, last year, killed all outdoor flowers and toned up the market for cut flowers considerably. It is something of this sort that we need right now.

Bank Opening Boosts Business.

A quickening influence was exercised on city trade, especially in Beauties and chrysanthemums of best quality, as a result of the opening of the Continental & Commercial National bank, now established in its magnificent new building on La Salle street. Flowers were appropriately used for decorative and gift purposes in connection with the bank opening, which was attended October 5 and 6 by many thousands of people.

A beautiful array of chrysanthemums and American Beauties covered the main banking floor, desks of officers; in fact, every available nook and corner throughout two floors of the bank where flowers could be placed to advantage.

Souvenirs, in the form of Beauties, were presented to ladies who visited the opening. The demand was large and some thousands of flowers were distributed in this way. Harry Rowe filled an order for 1,000 Beauties to be sent to the bank October 5, and later was called upon for 1,000 more, in addition to 500 White Killarney, making a total of 2,500 roses. O. J. Friedman also supplied 1,000 Beauties for the bank opening. The Friedman staff also did a large part of the decorative work necessary for the proper display of the flowers. All the leading stores supplied flowers for the occasion and assisted with the arrangement. It was noted that most of the flowers sent were in basket arrangements or in big vases loaned by the florists. There were no good-luck horseshoes or that sort of thing. On the whole the flowers at the bank represented the largest and most impressive display ever shown here on any occasion of similar character.

Evanstonians' Plans.

It is reported that Weiland & Risch, looking into the future, have closed a deal for property adjoining the North-Western railroad at Evanston about three-quarters of a mile from their present establishment. There is no thought of using the property inside of two years, but eventually it is expected to carry a range of fifty 250-foot houses grouped around a central boiler house. The present establishment consists of four detached ranges, necessitating four boiler sheds, which means extra expense, but the real reason for planning ahead is the rapid building up of the neighborhood and the consequent advance in realty values and taxes. When removal is made it will be gradual, a few houses at a time, as rebuilding is necessary.

Various Notes.

with order filling, shipping and store and office routine. The idea is to so simplify and perfect the business system as to minimize complaints and secure maximum efficiency, thereby increasing sales and profits.

Two car loads of azaleas arrived October 3 for Frank Oechslin and there are advices that another car is on the way.

Anton Then and Fritz Bahr returned last week from their trip to California, the latter reaching home three days ahead of Mr. Then, who made a stop in Wyoming. Mr. Then was so favorably impressed with the part of California just north of San Francisco that he is negotiating for the property adjoining the prune ranch in which Mr. Bahr is interested.

Walter W. Adams announces that hereafter he will conduct the business at Rush street and Bellevue place under his own name, instead of as the Adams-Robertson Co. D. A. Robertson retired last year and returned to Boston, whence he came several years ago to enter the employ of the E. Wienhoeber Co.

C. G. Anderson is receiving many compliments on the condition of several houses of cyclamens at the establishment of Poehlmann Bros. Co. The plant department appears to have expanded on its merits.

C. L. Washburn is well pleased with Bassett & Washburn's success with early mums. They have cut fine Golden Glow during a time that much of the stock on the market has been mediocre. They will be through by the time the glut comes on.

At Maywood Ernst Amling is cutting from about 14,000 plants of Mrs. Russell. He is doing well with it, but says he fears it will bloom no more freely than Beauty.

John T. Muir has been looking over the trade interests in New York and Philadelphia.

At Joliet the Thompson Carnation Co. has had excellent success with its early mums. The glass is all in carnations except for the mums in space soon to be used for propagating.

The cut of carnations in the last fortnight has been fifty per cent heavier than in the same time and from the same space last year, according to the records of Zech & Mann.

Eric Johnson has resumed his duties on the cut flower floor of the A. L. Randall Co. after his wedding trip.

Bulgarie has been dropped from the list of roses at the Peter Reinberg establishment. Nine benches, shortly to be used for propagating purposes, were planted to mums this year, the first of which were cut October 2.

Erne & Klingel report that garden flowers have sold much better this season than usual. Many growers dropped feverfew, having realized little last year. Zinnias, scabiosa, dahlias, etc., are selling well.

Charles Wolf, of Downers Grove, built a new house this season and has it planted to Killarney. Heretofore he has grown nothing but greens.

W. H. Amling, at Maywood, has 30,000 mums to cut in the next six weeks.

O. W. Frese, of Poehlmann Bros. Co., comments on the increased use of the long distance phone. Many buyers now send their daily order by it.

A. L. Vaughan says the delayed frost has been the salvation of the dahlia growers, who are now beginning to ship heavily.

The Albert Amling Co., Maywood, is devoting most of its energies to roses this season. There will be no sweet peas, although last season as many as 100,000 per day were picked.

Beauty stock at the J. A. Budlong greenhouses presents an excellent appearance, but A. H. Budlong says fewer than the usual number of buds are being set by this rose just now. It is said that the J. A. Budlong establishment is devoting its attention more exclusively to rose culture, depending on consignments to take care of a large part of the carnation business which goes through the store.

Sam Pearce believes he has an excellent arrangement in the way of a greenhouse shed at his new range in Jefferson. The shed is more than 200 feet in length, with hot water boilers and electric circulator in the center, while there is sufficient room for an automobile roadway from end to end of the structure. A box-making outfit has just been installed near the circulator, to enable the circular saw to be driven from the same motor.

C. Frauenfelder, 3343 West Madison street, reports an increasingly strong demand for good Beauties and is busy filling orders for these flowers just now. Trade in basket work is a feature at the Frauenfelder store this month and the owner regards business in general as showing a steady improvement.

John Sinner is a man of analytical mind when it comes to judging market conditions and trade tendencies. Mr. Sinner carefully weighs all conditions which are commonly known to affect the flower market, but he goes further than that and takes into consideration the psychology of the situation and the effect of other trades upon the business of florists. He says the season for cut flowers has opened up later each year for the last few years, because of the increase in the popular use of automobiles. According to Mr. Sinner, large numbers of people who are logical flower buyers and who bought flowers in quantity at this time of year in the past, are now spending their leisure hours in motoring and outdoor recreation. This has postponed the heavy demand for flowers until later in the autumn, when people are more closely housed.

The situation as regards valley pips has become more favorable and H. N. Bruns has sent orders to his representative in Germany to make shipments to him whenever ready, in small lots, via Rotterdam or Copenhagen, in Dutch or Danish steamers. As there can be no refrigeration, it is thought that shipments will be held for about a month.

The German-Austrian Relief Association appointed H. N. Bruns and Ernst Wienhoeber a committee of two to solicit funds from Chicago florists. Mr. Bruns reports that the trade has been liberal and that over $500 has been collected.

The cut flower department of Marshall Field & Co. opened for business October 5, the day of the annual fall exposition in the store. It is situated on the third floor of the State street building, adjacent to the ladies' rest rooms and also the book and candy sections. Although not especially practical, the fixtures all are elaborate. Display cases, counters, etc., all have artificial refrigeration, electric lights and running water. The department is in charge of Richard G. Kootz under the supervision of O. W. Smith, who also has the millinery department.

McCRAY

Florists' Display Refrigerator

The McCray keeps flowers fresh longer than any other. Its system of refrigeration maintains an even temperature of the proper degree for the preservation of cut flowers and entirely eliminates the great loss that is caused by imperfect refrigeration.

The McCray is built to permit an attractive and inviting display of your flowers, its various compartments being of different sizes to accommodate the different lengths of cut flowers.

The interior linings are of either opal glass, bevel plate mirror or white enamel and are very handsome and easy to clean. The exterior may be of any finish desired to match the interior of your woodwork or other fixtures.

The handsome appearance of the McCray is an improvement to any store and is a great stimulant for increased sales and pleased customers. Investigate the McCray and ascertain why they are the best for florists.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

We have had a week of warm, bright, pleasant weather, with cool nights. This had a good effect on cut stock, and the quality in all grades has improved greatly. Business, too, showed improvement last week. Stock at the wholesale markets was not nearly so plentiful as it had been. Roses are still in large supply and the prices of these have not changed much from last week's quotations. Outdoor stock is gradually diminishing. Asters are about over for the season. Gladioli and tuberoses are falling off daily. Cosmos and dahlias still are plentiful. Chrysanthemums are as yet somewhat scarce and the few Smith's Advance and Golden Glow are cleaned up quickly. Another week or ten days will see plenty of all the early varieties in the market.

The bulk of the rose supply consists of Killarneys in all varieties. Russell and Milady are scarce. Maryland and Richmond are equal to the demand.

Beauties are somewhat off color; the better grades are in good demand. Fancy carnations are not any too plentiful. Of the short-stemmed stock there are large quantities in all the markets. Extra fancy carnations bring from $3 to $4 per hundred. Easter lilies are extra fine and have a good demand. Valley is somewhat scarce and high in price. With dahlias, cosmos, gladioli and tuberoses coming in daily, this market will be well supplied for the usual fall festivities which take place this week.

Various Notes.

The American Association of Cemetery Superintendents is holding a three-day session this week at the Planters' hotel. M. P. Brazell, of St. Louis, is president of the association. W. N. Rudd, of Chicago; James Currie, of Milwaukee; Frank Eurich, of Detroit, and Alexander Hauton, of Barre, Vt., are scheduled for talks during the session. The association will be guests of the directors of the Missouri Botanical Garden, October 8, when a meeting will be held at which John Noyes, landscape designer of the garden, and W. W. Ohlweiler, general manager, will read interesting papers. Mr. Noyes' paper will be on "Pictures in a Park Cemetery," and Mr. Ohlweiler's on "Flower Displays Without Rain." One hundred members of the association are expected to attend.

The South Broadway Merchants' Association's street fair and carnival, to be held this week, should make business good for florists. Oscar Heile and the Diemer Floral Co., who have stores along the route of the carnival, have their store fronts gayly decorated for the occasion.

Harry Young, of H. Young & Son, on Maryland avenue, says that business has opened up nicely with them and that a good, steady trade is looked for from now on.

The Shackelford Nursery Co. received its bulb importations from France, Holland and Japan last week. H. C. Lloyd, head of the nursery, says the bulbs this year are the best they ever have received.

The death of Captain Robt. McCulloch, president of the United Railways, created a lot of extra work for the florists September 29 and 30. Telegraph orders for designs were heavy.

Paul C. Standley, of the U. S. National Herbarium, Washington, D. C., and Dr. David Griffiths, of the office of Farm Management and Plant Industry, U. S. Department of Agriculture, were recent visitors and guests of the Missouri Botanical Garden. Both gentlemen were much impressed with the work at the garden.

Carl Haltenhoff, of Gotha, Fla., called on his friends here recently on his way to Marshall, Ia., where he will engage in the landscape business with A. H. Smith. Both men are graduates of the Missouri Botanical Garden and have many friends among the trade.

President Bourdet and Treasurer Smith, of the Florists' Club, were judges for the St. Louis Republic as to the best kept window box in the 2100 block on Olive street. The prizes were $5, $3 and $2. Mr. Bourdet says the judging was easy, as not many of the boxes were well kept.

Anton Haitoeblen, an employee of the city forestry department, was seriously injured October 1, while trimming trees on Bailey avenue. His trimmer came in contact with a charged wire and the shock threw him from the tree. He was taken to the City hospital for treatment.

Frank McCabe, the smiling traveling salesman for the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, called on the local trade last week. It is needless to say that he left with a well filled order book.

Montrose W. Hayes, district forecaster, says he will gladly furnish, to florists who desire warning during the coming winter, forecasts of sudden falls in temperature, heavy snows and sleet, if requests are sent to him in care of the local office of the weather bureau.

J. J. Martin, representing the Roseville Pottery Co., of Zanesville, O., was a caller last week. Mr. Martin carries a nice line of samples and did quite a business among the local florists.

Grimm & Gorly's east side branch, which is in charge of Marion Uhlschmidt, had an unusual run of good funeral work last week. Mr. Uhlschmidt says business is improving daily on the east side.

John S. Carter, president of the Nicotine Mfg. Co., has returned from his Chicago trip. The company is running full force, with a large number of orders ahead for shipping.

George H. Angermueller is enjoying a splendid shipping trade in florists' supplies. His consignments of cut flowers have been large and of good quality.

The Review's advertisers in the retail florists' pages again reaped a harvest last week, when telegrams came from all parts of the country for the funeral of the late Robert McCulloch.

Vandervoort's flower department has a window display on the Olive street side, where plants and cut flowers advertise the flower department in the basement of the main store.

William Bouche, Edward Buechel and Max Herzog are the hustlers among the local trade collecting funds for the aid of the Germans in the war zone. They did good work at a benefit given at Delmar Garden.

is not growing any mums this year, but has his entire plant in carnations, with which he has always had good success, growing first-class stock.

Vennemann Bros., of Kirkwood, will soon commence cutting a big crop of carnations. Their sweet pea crop will come a little later. Brother Gus brings in the daily cut.

The W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. has brought out its new delivery truck, a Mitchell, all dressed up in its new fall array. Artie, the chauffeur, says morning delivery can now be made in much quicker time.

Henry Berning received a nice lot of cut mums last week. The varieties were Smith's Advance and Golden Glow, which sold well. Mr. Berning expects a large crop from his consignors this season. J. J. B.

DENVER.

The Market.

Denver is having a touch of cold weather, which will most likely put an end to the outdoor stock. Chrysanthemums are beginning to arrive. Roses and carnations are good and are coming in large quantities. There are enough lilies to supply the demand. Blooming plants are in good demand. There seems to be a scarcity of white cyclamens, but, aside from these, there are plenty of fine plants to supply all demands. The first mum plants came in last week.

Various Notes.

A number of florists are bowling each Saturday night at the Denver Bowling Alleys, on Champa street.

Roses and carnations are looking fine at the Elitch-Long Greenhouses.

The Park Floral Co. has some extra fine cyclamens, begonias and obconicas.

Most of the growers received their Holland bulbs last week.

The Denver Wholesale Florists' Co. is handling some extra fine roses and carnations. R. S.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

The demand has been somewhat irregular during the last two weeks, but on the whole business has been good, showing a big improvement over last month. As always is the case at this season, the cuts are increasing heavily. Prices have not been high; the quality of cut stock has been excellent for the money.

Roses have been the most abundant item of the indoor stock. The newer roses, such as Milady, Russell and Killarney Brilliant, are plentiful; they bring a good price and attract the retail trade. Beauties are plentiful and are increasing in size rapidly. The chrysanthemum market is strong, compared with last year, and it is expected that next week will find plenty of them available at reasonable prices. Carnations are becoming more plentiful and the demand is rather heavy. Gladioli and dahlias are still in the market. Dahlias took the lead last week in outdoor cut stock and the public seemed to like them for a change.

Various Notes.

Stevens & Hepting are cutting some first-class carnations for this time of the year and find a ready sale for them. Their houses of mums are in excellent condition.

Adolph Mohr has his houses in fine shape. His stock shows that it has had every needed attention. Mr. Mohr devotes most of his space to pot plants

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

There is a decided improvement in the cut flower market, despite the unseasonable warm weather. Flowers have been used in a way that removes all doubt about their popularity. The fashionable shops have affairs of unusual size on hand and the small stores are at times busy, while the department stores are creating flower buyers from the masses by their seductive prices.

Dahlias are the flowers of the day. All kinds of buyers are using them in quantity at prices that are in the main excellent. Some of the fancy varieties like John Wanamaker, Jack Rose and McCullough have suffered from the drought more than others, like Princess Juliana, Delice and Mrs. J. G. Cassatt. There are not so many dahlias as there should be, but when the almost rainless September is considered their number and quality are surprising.

Roses come next, with sales that run into thousands to the quantity buyers, who care not too much for quality. There are fairly satisfactory sales to the quality buyers, who must have them just so. Carnations are improving in number, in stem and in size. Valley has got over its war scare and the price has, in consequence, declined a point in anticipation of imports of pips through a neutral port. The first double violets have joined the singles. With them have come yellow daisies.

Chrysanthemums can now be had in several varieties, although not with certainty, as the cuts come in slowly.

transfer the business management of his retail flower store, at 233 South Eleventh street, and of his greenhouses, at Secane, to his second son, Harry R. Crawford.

Robert Crawford, Jr., is one of the pioneers among the retail florists of this city. After an apprenticeship with Henry A. Dreer, at Riverton, and Louis C. Baumann, in Germantown, he opened his flower store and by industry and perseverance built up a successful business. His store was beautifully arranged and attractive in appearance. His arrangement of flowers was effective, combining taste with good judgment. Mr. Crawford is a man of strong personality, who made his impress on all those with whom he dealt. He always aimed to keep pace with the times, putting the first electric delivery car on the street before any of his competitors had done so. He now feels that the time has come to relinquish the active cares of business to his son.

Club Meeting.

There was an excellent meeting of the Florists' Club October 6, it being election night. There were no contests, however, the leaders for next year being chosen unanimously, as follows:

President—George Burton.
Vice-president—John C. Gracey.
Treasurer—George Craig, reëlected.
Secretary—David Rust, reëlected.

The officers each made happy addresses and J. O. Thilow, just home from the Yellowstone, gave an interesting address regarding his travels.

Various Notes.

Griffin Bros., of Frankford, have completed, planted and are cutting fine carnations from their new Hitchings house at Torresdale, Pa. Their varieties of carnations, with which the entire house is planted, are Enchantress, White Enchantress and Beacon. Bruce Griffin is in charge.

R. F. Whitmer, the lumber king, has his Ellenwood Greenhouses, at Hatboro, Pa., in fine shape. His house of Double White Killarney is superb. Joseph Towill is manager.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. had 249 cases of immortelles on the steamer Sant' Anna. Unfortunately a fire occurred in the hold of the steamer before all the cargo was discharged. Mr. Bayersdorfer went to New York to investigate the matter and reports the loss as light. Baskets from Germany are beginning to arrive through neutral ports.

Recent visitors include: Edward W. Bayley, Westerly, R. I.; Louis Hoover, Washington, D. C.; John T. Muir, Chicago; C. D. Mills, Jacksonville, Fla., and George E. Campbell, Flourtown, Pa.

Herbert Baker has abandoned his place at Lansdowne, Pa. Mr. Baker purchased the place of the late A. J. Pennock, from Mrs. Pennock, on the installment plan, shortly after the death of the owner. He became tired of his work and left recently.

Philip Freud is conducting a dahlia show for the Henry F. Michell Co., with dahlias from Andalusia, at the store of Gimbel Bros., for three days this week.

J. Otto Thilow returned from the Yellowstone park and the Pacific coast October 3.

Berger Bros. had one of the greatest days in their history last week. The sales of dahlias were enormous.

Clarence W. Moore reports the bulb market in satisfactory condition.

Henry A. Dreer, Inc., held a fine dahlia show at the store, 714 Chestnut street, commencing October 6.

Pennock Bros. had a handsome wedding out of town for the daughter of a well known political leader October 7.

Edward Reid and Stuart H. Miller visited Myers & Samtman, Edward Towill and the Ellenwood Greenhouses this week. All three places were in promising condition.

Charles H. Grakelow has declined the nomination for vice-president of the Florists' Club, owing to a previous engagement made for the evening the club meets each month.

Casper and George L. Pennock are sending in some magnificent roses of Jonkheer J. L. Mock and Mrs. Charles Russell to S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co.

George Burton is sending in some fine Hadley to the Leo Niessen Co.

The picture of an aeroplane followed by the words, "The Rice man is coming," is a card sent by the travelers of the M. Rice Co. in advance of their calls. A Chambersburg florist who received this card saw an aeroplane sailing over his city and told Samuel Edlman, on his arrival, that he expected him but supposed he had gone to Hagerstown first, as he saw the machine sailing in that direction! Phil.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

With a slight sagging in demand and a stiffening in prices, florists had to do some close figuring to close a week of even mediocre caliber. Frosts have practically killed off the outdoor stock, but the demand for indoor blooms has not yet struck its stride. A few funerals have kept things moving slowly. There is a shortage of first-class stock of all kinds, although the growers in this vicinity have some excellent houses just beginning to come on. Mums are coming larger and better every day and will hold the center of popularity until Thanksgiving.

Club Meeting.

At the monthly meeting of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island, held last week with President Cornelius Hartstra in the chair, there was a good attendance and plans for the winter were discussed. There is to be a general effort made to increase the membership and to have a series of meetings that will call for the support and attendance of every person eligible. The club proposes to take more interest in local exhibitions and an animated discussion was held regarding the holding of a chrysanthemum show separate from that of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society, or in conjunction with it. There was a decided feeling in favor of coöperating with the view of making the exhibition larger and better than ever.

Various Notes.

Walter S. Sword and wife, of Cumberland, are in New York.

Among the property owners in Johnston taxed on $5,000 or over, according to the latest assessment by the tax assessors just filed, are Albert Holscher, $7,200, and Olney H. Williams, $7,600.

Peter S. Byrnes has been elected a member of the Republican town committee of Warwick.

Ernest Carl has returned from a visit in Germany. He was in the thick of the mobilization of troops and while he was making his way to Holland he witnessed some fighting.

Alonzo Vose, of Woonsocket, who has been spending a vacation on Prudence island, in Narragansett bay, has returned.

Edgar Nock, of Warwick, has upwards of 14,000 orchid plants and is preparing for a big cut this season. He has recently completed his second new house; both of the new houses are for orchids.

Paul Frey has been granted permission to erect a greenhouse at 50 Radcliffe avenue.

James Burke, of the Warwick Greenhouses, has completed grading and landscape work at the estate of Congressman Peter Gerry in Warwick. Mr. Burke recently put in two large new boilers and is ready for cold weather.

Richard Barnett, of Woonsocket, has announced his retirement from the florists' business.

One of the largest boilers from the Kroeschell Bros. Co., Chicago, for the greenhouses of Joseph Koppelman & Co., East Providence, arrived last week.

John Johnston returned last week from an enjoyable fishing trip down Narragansett bay.

The engagement of Max Fishelson, son of Nathan Fishelson, with whom he is associated as Fishelson & Son, of Boston, to Miss Rebecca Lando, of Paris, France, was announced at a gathering of friends at the homes of the young man's uncles, Joseph Koppelman and Charles Smith, in East Providence, both of whom are identified with the florists' business in this city. Mr. Fishelson, Sr., also is a member of the florists' supply house of J. Koppelman & Co.

Max Villier, with Galvin, of Boston, formerly employed in this city, was a visitor last week. W. H. M.

The Market.

Things are beginning to boom. The spell is broken and business is picking up. The demand is larger than the supply in some cases. September 28, a heavy frost, with the mercury down to 22 degrees, put an end to outdoor flowers where there was no means of protection. Now business is picking up, with no flowers to supply the demand. Carnations are scarce, short-stemmed and poor. Roses are good and quite plentiful. Lilies are fair. Valley is about the same, with the price up to 75 cents to $1 per dozen. Single violets are coming in and are exceptionally good. Some fine Golden Glow and Smith's Advance chrysanthemums are coming in. Potted plants, such as ferns, solanums and begonias, sell well.

Various Notes.

Meacham & Hassell have been making various changes in their store, having had it repainted and a balcony office put in. Business is picking up. They had a fine window display of aconitums last week.

S. H. Saunders has repainted the front of his store and is making various improvements. He had a fine window display of ferns and mosses this week.

Louis Robinson has received his shipment of azaleas from Belgium.

N. F. Higgins has a fine lot of Boston and Whitmani ferns. His mums are looking fine and will be ready for cutting this week.

Mark Aitken's new store is finding favor with the flower buyers. Business has been fine since the opening.

The flower beds at Forest park have been unusually fine this year. Plans are being made for a rose garden next season. There is need of a public rose and perennial garden here, as there are none of any account nearer than Hartford, Conn. The North End Green has been quite a success. From a barren spot last year, it has been changed into a beauty spot. Next year more smooth-leaved plants will be used on account of the dust. It presents a fine appearance and gives a good impression to people entering the city to see something green in the midst of a busy thoroughfare. F. J. C.

Notice to Growers of Rose Stock

Space is reserved in 5-acre Potpourri Rose Garden of Panama-California Exposition for a competitive display of best roses by eastern growers and those of the Pacific coast, 250 plants each, in one variety or several, prepaid. These, planted in early November (expert care), will in this friendly climate show luxuriant growth and bloom through entire year 1915. Growers' names and varieties will be plainly seen. A large proportion of U. S. inhabitants will inspect these beds and vote for favorite growers and roses. Prizes of potpourri of California flowers, in large jars of choice pottery or made from metals used in making Panama Canal, given as prizes to winners of 1st and 2d. Please apply promptly to

For Sale

Eight acres of fine garden land. This fine property consists of about 14,000 feet of modern greenhouses and seven-room cottage; both greenhouses and dwelling are in first-class condition; steam heat and electric light throughout greenhouses and dwelling; city water throughout. Poultry house, 16 x 56; incubator; cellar, 20 x 20; brooding house, 20 x 20; barn, 24 x 24; tool house, 24 x 30. This place is just across the street from city limits, hence low taxes. Price, $12,000.00—$5000.00 cash, balance in payments to suit, or would consider an improved farm for the balance, but must be in the middle states. Sales last April were $900.00, May $1200.00, June $500.00. There are two boilers—either one will furnish heat enough; one is for a reserve boiler. Reason for selling, want to try farming. PAGES OF RETAILERS' CARDS

THIS department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

Fred H. Weber,

...Florist...

St. Louis, Mo., September 5, 1914.

Florists' Review,
Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen:-

During the SIX MONTHS from March 4 to September 4 I have received from other Florists, by mail, telegraph or cable, orders to the amount of $513.25 as a result of my advertisement in the Retailers' department of The Review. With the allowance to senders the record for SIX MONTHS is:

Value of orders received----------	$513.25
Less 20% allowed senders--------	102.60
Net value of orders for SIX MONTHS--	410.65

It should be noted that this showing covers the DULL SUMMER MONTHS, when any addition to a Florists's business is decidedly welcome.

Retail Florists not advertising in The Review should profit by this letter.

Respectfully,

The Market.

In over a month one shower is the whole cloud contribution to the thirsty earth. We need rain and need it badly. But as last week ended there was "not a cloud in the sky." It is perfect October weather, cool and crisp night and morning, Indian summer in the daytime. The cut flower market feels the uplift and is steady and growing stronger. There is a good undertone, which promises better times. The week past was not inspiring until near its close. Prices were barely steady, and the glut of short-stemmed roses continued. Now, a much better tone is evident. American Beauties give an encouraging outlook for all roses, and the specials of every variety begin to rise, slowly, it is true, but the best of anything here does not have to "go a-begging" at any time. Roses generally are improving in quality, especially grades No. 1 and 2.

There are plenty of good carnations now arriving and prices are better, selected stock bringing $3 per hundred. Nothing worthy of the name carnation is selling under $1 per hundred. The quality grows better daily, in Wards and Beacon especially. Longiflorum lilies maintain their improved level and nothing half-way perfect was seen under $6 per hundred and from that the price advanced, for the finest grade even up to $10. The supply is light. Valley is abundant. The high figure of last month has not been maintained; $3 per hundred is top.

Asters have departed. Frosts up state cut off the last of them. Gladioli will continue lightly, perhaps, another week. Dahlias are about at an end. But the flood of mums has just begun. Fine in quality, size and variety, their potency is already manifest in the beautifully decorated windows of the retail stores. The dahlia season was a failure. The long drought was against them from the start. Shipments were far below normal in quantity and the demand was almost nil.

Violets are already abundant and their quality continues to improve. Up to this date 50 cents is top, and most of the arrivals are sold below this figure. Of orchids there is a constant increase, and prices are remarkably low, the range of values fluctuating between $15 and $25 per hundred. Oncidiums are slightly improved and their graceful beauty and decorative value are now emphasized in the window exhibits.

Various Notes.

Next Monday, October 12, Columbus day, is the date of the meeting of the New York Florists' Club. The essay committee has promised a lecture; there will be mum and rose exhibits, and the publicity question, brought up by Max Schling, will again be earnestly discussed.

Carl Cropp, of Chicago, was a recent visitor.

The park department of Brooklyn has announced its intention of furnishing any residents of the city ornamental trees for yard or street at a uniform cost of $8 each, planting them and guaranteeing to replace them within three years in case of failure to grow. Brooklyn is ''doing itself proud,'' horticulturally, in the development of its botanical garden. Its Japanese garden will be an elaborate affair, while Prospect park, with its greenhouses and trees, is one of the beauty spots of this country.

At the plant auctions held by the MacNiff Horticultural Co. every Tuesday and Friday some fine decorative palms are offered, which some of the retail florists are securing at most reasonable prices for their winter needs. Among the principal buyers last Friday was Joseph Trepel, of Brooklyn, who is to the florists' business of Brooklyn what his brother, C. C. Trepel, is to New York. Mr. Trepel has four stores in Brooklyn, on Manhattan avenue, Lewis avenue, Broadway and Decatur street and Broadway and Reid avenue, and is making a success of every one of them.

A great many flowers are used by the theaters, and some of them have continuous decorations. The October weddings are more numerous than ex-

James Coyle has had excellent success in his plant branch and will continue it during the fall season and perhaps permanently.

J. Kervan, of the Kervan Co., and Mrs. Kervan are back from the Adirondacks. J. Austin Shaw.

A. J. Verelle is proprietor of the Kentia Nurseries at Santa Barbara, Cal.; but the last autumn he leased the establishment to his brother and spent several months in Europe. Having recently returned, Mr. Verelle has taken up headquarters at 2774 Bainbridge avenue, in the Bronx, to introduce a new insecticide named Flora, which he says has had much success on the other side of the Atlantic.

The first giganteums of the 1914 crop reached New York October 2, says

FLOWERS BY TELEGRAPH

Ralph M. Ward, having crossed the continent by rail after traversing the Pacific in the steamship Minnesota.

The chrysanthemum show of the American Institute will be held at 25 West Thirty-ninth street November 4 to 6. Copies of the schedule may be had by addressing W. A. Eagleson, secretary of the board of managers, 324 West Twenty-third street.

The fall exhibition of the Horticultural Society of New York will be held at the American Museum of Natural History, October 30 to November 3. An invitation is extended to all to make exhibits. Prizes of $50, $35 and $15 are offered for twelve vases of cut chrysanthemum blooms, in twelve varieties, three blooms of each, stems eighteen inches long. This should bring out keen competition. Schedules will be sent on application to the secretary, George V. Nash, New York Botanical Garden, Bronx park.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Frosts a week ago killed off a good many outdoor flowers and improved the tone of the market. Another warm spell arrived October 3 and materially increased the output of flowers, besides making them quite soft, and conditions are not so good as one would desire. Roses, which sold better up to October 3, again are lower in price. Beauties are not selling well, but Hadley, Russell, Ophelia, Shawyer, Sunburst, Mock and Double White Killarney are in good demand. Killarney Brilliant as yet does not sell so well as Killarney Queen. Of the older roses, Killarney, Hillingdon and Ward are doing better than a week ago.

Carnations are moving at from 50 cents to $2 per hundred; probably $1 would be a fair average price. Quality is steadily improving. Chrysanthemums are somewhat soft, owing to the hot weather. Golden Glow and Smith's Advance are the two leaders. Quite a few single violets are arriving. All these are picked outdoors as yet. Lilies are abundant and good, but these and lily of the valley are not going so well as they should. There still is a good supply of asters at from 25 cents to $1 per hundred. Dahlias are about done and gladioli are nearing the end. Cosmos, hunnemannia, bachelor's buttons, yellow marguerites, pink snapdragons, white bouvardia and sweet peas are seen in small quantities.

Cattleya labiata is abundant and cheaper, with a poor demand. Gardenias of better quality are coming in. The demand for both asparagus and adiantum is poor. Pot plant trade shows some improvement, but is not yet brisk.

Various Notes.

The Halifax Garden Co. is this season growing roses particularly well. The leaders are Taft, Ward, Sunburst, Killarney, White Killarney and Richmond. In carnations extra good success is being had with Beacon, Mrs. C. W. Ward, Enchantress Supreme, White Enchantress, Philadelphia, Pink Delight and Matchless.

A. A. Pembroke, of North Beverly, has White Wonder carnations with 24-inch stems. White Enchantress also is fine. Pink Delight, Benora, Matchless and Champion are extra good. The last named is well liked.

The annual fruit and vegetable show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, held October 3 and 4, brought out a first-class exhibition with keen competition. Peter Fisher showed a fine vase of his new carnation, Alice.

James Wheeler, of Natick, has his carnations in splendid condition this season and makes a large shipment four times weekly. His favorite sorts are White Perfection, White Wonder, Pink Delight, Benora, Yellow Prince, Beacon, Matchless and the old Harry Fenn, which still does grandly for him.

At Penn's the windows of Asplenium Nidus-Avis and Japanese gardens in miniature continue to prove strong attractions. A basket of cattleyas and lily of the valley in a box draped with green velvet, on which an electric reflector threw varying lights, made a regular moving-picture show and caught the attention of many pedestrians. Wedding orders are reported more numerous.

Among the growers who are sending in extra good mums are Frederick Southworth, of Lynn, whose Golden Glows are handsome, and John Davie, of Dedham, who handles October Frost particularly well.

Nathan Lerner now is salesman for W. C. Stickel, of Lexington, Mass., and C. S. Andem, of Putnam, Conn. The first named grows carnations heavily. His varieties are Pink Delight, Benora, Philadelphia, Beacon and White Wonder. Mr. Andem grows White Enchantress and Matchless most heavily.

The Boston Cut Flower Co. has had several large decorations this week, which have used up considerable material. A good share of both funeral and wedding orders come to this concern.

October 3, tag day in Dorchester, used up 60,000 carnations, the returns being given to a local charity.

The Brockton fair September 29 to October 2, as usual, attracted enormous crowds. In the floral department W. W. Hathaway was judge. The dahlias, of course, were a feature; also roses from the Waban Rose Conservatories.

Robert T. McGorum, of Natick, does not like Rose Killarney Brilliant so far, as it is proving a poor grower and shy bloomer. Russell in solid beds is fine with him. Richmond is still grown for red and Hillingdon for yellow; also Killarney and White Killarney. Mr. McGorum has a fine house of mums, among which the old Mrs. Henry Robinson still is a leader. He finds that by taking the terminal bud the stem is stiff and holds up the flower well.

Charles E. Evans, of Watertown, is having a good sale on rubber plants. He still has a good cut of asters and from now on will have chrysanthemums.

We continue drought-stricken. September proved the driest month since the weather bureau started keeping records, forty-four years ago.

A. M. Davenport is one of the largest and most successful growers of Asplenium Nidus-Avis in the country, always having many thousands of all sizes in stock. He grows many other ferns in quantity. His flowering plants for Christmas all are looking fine.

Among those sending in nice pink snapdragon at present are A. E. E. Koch, of Nobscot; Lewis Smith, of Tewksbury, and Mann Bros., of Randolph.

At Galvin's this week the staff has some large wedding decorations to handle.

J. A. Budlong & Sons Co., of Auburn, R. I., is having excellent success with Russell and is cutting Sunburst with 30-inch stems, splendid Ophelia, Double White Killarney and J. L. Mock.

grower of pot mums, is marketing large quantities of neat, bushy plants of Golden Dragon.

S. J. Goddard, of Framingham, is sending in some excellent carnations. His best kinds are Matchless, dark seedling No. 59, Pink Delight, Beacon and White Wonder.

Two of the best growers of valley for the local market are J. Leach & Son, of North Easton, whose flowers are always good, and W. Jurgens, of Newport, R. I.

The windows of J. A. Carbone, on Boylston street, always are charmingly arranged, the proper use of flowers in the vases, etc., being the feature, and not a mass of flowers and plants as in many windows. Just now gladioli, lilies, hunnemannia, Oncidium varicosum Rogersii and the newer roses are effectively employed.

W. D. Howard, of Milford, is a carnation specialist whose flowers are always good. Mr. Howard's leaders are Mrs. Ward, Pink Delight, Fenn, White Perfection and a salmon sport of Winsor.

E. O. Orpet, of Lake Forest, Ill., has been here for a few days, calling on old friends. Harry Turner, formerly of Castle Gould, has been around in the interests of the Morris Nursery Co. George H. Noyes is handling some fine Gorgeous and Alice carnations from Peter Fisher.

William Capstick, of Auburndale, is making a specialty of Asparagus Sprengeri and plumosus.

A. Leuthy, of Roslindale, has received a large shipment of azaleas and other plants from Belgium and other local growers are expecting early shipments. Some growers even think a moderate supply of valley may arrive.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

President, Lester L. Morse, San Francisco, Cal.; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

Thirty-third annual convention, San Francisco, Cal., 1915.

THE German seeds are beginning to move via Copenhagen.

FRENCH seeds are coming via Marseilles as well as from Havre.

THE giganteums are in. The first shipment reached New York October 2.

THE death of John M. Griffith, founder of the Griffith & Turner Co., Baltimore, is recorded in this week's obituary column.

IN one way or another most of those in the seed trade will be able to pretty thoroughly cover their needs for the 1914 season.

YOU can set it down as certain that there will be no shortage of valley. When the pips are wanted, they will come. At present there is no urgent reason for moving them from Hamburg, where there are excellent cold storage facilities.

THE Shugart-Ouren Seed Co., of Council Bluffs, Ia., starts the twenty-first year of its existence with the following official roster: President, C. G. Ouren; vice-president, F. R. Davis; secretary, J. P. Davis; treasurer, E. H. Gregory.

WHOLESALE seedsmen whose travelers call on country general stores find a general disposition to go slow in placing orders, although in the middle west it is recognized that the big crops insure plenty of money for the next few months.

UPON request of the War Department, the Treasury Department has authorized the free entry of twenty-three cases of bulbs imported from Holland for planting in the public grounds of Washington, including the White House. The bulbs were shipped from Rotterdam on the ship Westerdyck and arrived in Baltimore.

H. A. JOHNS, of the Sioux City Seed & Nursery Co., was a visitor in Chicago from October 1 to 5. Mr. Johns was on his way home to Sioux City after a tour in the bean section of Michigan. He confirms the reports that the Michigan bean crop is poor, but scarcely more so than in other sections. While in the city Mr. Johns spent a day at the office of the Leonard Seed Co.

THINGS are seldom so bad as they at first seem, and this appears to be the case with the European war and its effects on seed supply. While certain crops in northern France have not been harvested, it now appears that in other places the harvest has been or is being made and that America will receive, not only its usual quota, but some seeds that ordinarily would have been sent elsewhere. The English are strong in their determination to get along without supplies from Germany.

IT is apparent that seedsmen are devoting their attention to ways and means which will facilitate the movement of bulbs at this time. Special sales, window trims of bulbs and appropriate advertising are being resorted to. Reports indicate that sales of this stock are better than usual for early October, which would seem to show that the public is gradually being educated, through the

Horse Sense

A young man once called on us in answer to an ad for a salesman. His pedigree ran away back to our Pilgrim fathers, and he rattled off such a string of bull about his blue-blooded relatives that we had to rap for order and shut him off. We gently broke the news to him that what we wanted was a salesman, and not a man for breeding purposes. We let him out the side door, so as to let a real man in the right way. Now this fellow was a regular Ed Pinaud in manners and appearance, but he lacked common horse sense. Horse sense is a most valuable asset—you can always use it in a practical way. Luck is a gambling chance—horse sense is an investment-and-security chance. The man with horse sense may not go as far in a day as the man with luck, but he will progress more days and go further eventually than the lucky man. The business of producing Horseshoe Brand Giganteum has been built up by Japanese men who had horse sense, rather than luck. That's why it is the best brand known today. Good, plain horse sense used in the production, packing and marketing, year after year, is what makes Horseshoe Brand Giganteum average higher than any other brand produced. And the florist who grows Horseshoe Brand Giganteum will progress further eventually than the fellow who takes chances with unknown brands. Deliveries being made now. Write for prices.

advertising efforts of seedsmen, to buy more bulbs for fall planting around homes.

A MAN whose 1915 catalogue can't be kept under eight ounces might as well let it go to the pound, so far as postage is concerned.

H. F. DARROW, New York, has word from Vilmorin-Andrieux & Co., Paris, France, that they are slowly recovering from the first effects of the war and have already made some small shipments to the United States. The outlook at date of writing was that they would be able to complete all their shipments, although there may be some unavoidable delays under the present circumstances. The steamships sailing between Havre and New York have resumed almost their regular services.

ENGLISH SEEDS SITUATION.

James Carter, Dunnett & Beale, London, have written the following letter to their friends in this country:

"We have noticed more than one reference in the American press to the war conditions which unhappily prevail in Europe at the present time, suggesting that seedsmen in the United States and Canada cannot look with confidence to Great Britain for their usual supply of seeds. We feel called upon to send you this communication, as one of our old correspondents, to give you the assurance that there is no foundation for such fears. We at home have every confidence in the British fleet being able to safeguard the high road across the Atlantic and to assure uninterrupted traffic, which will maintain with regularity the commercial relations between the two continents. Our Americans can look to British sources of supply with the same confidence as they have done in times of peace."

THE BRITISH ATTITUDE.

The following shows clearly the English trade attitude toward German seeds and is of more than passing interest to American seedsmen. It is a clipping from the Gardeners' Magazine, London:

"For two or three weeks past the staff of the Gardeners' Magazine has been keeping a sharp lookout for a possible effort on the part of the German trade to export their seeds to Great Britain. We have no personal quarrel with any German seedsman or nurseryman, but at the present we are, as a nation, at war with Germany, and therefore must do all we can to prevent the exportation of seeds from that country, and to encourage the cultivation of flower and vegetable seeds within the Empire and in friendly countries. As a result of our inquiries we obtained a letter directed to a wholesale seed house from a firm in Copenhagen, offering German seeds, among others, and stating, 'as we can import by Danish steamers from Russia, Germany and Austria via German ports, and ship again by Danish steamers from Copen-

As it was obvious Germany was endeavoring to ship German seeds through an agent in a neutral country, we communicated with the Board of Trade; the latter has now taken steps in the matter, and we are free to make this statement. The Copenhagen firm referred to bears a distinctly German name, and we therefore warn our readers who are in the trade against dealings which may put money into the pockets of our enemies.''

FIRE DESTROYS FRENCH BULBS.

Nearly three-quarters of a million Paper Whites were destroyed in New York September 30 as the result of fire on the Sant' Anna.

The Fabre line steamer arrived from Marseilles September 28 and was waiting to discharge cargo at the Bush docks in Brooklyn. In her No. 2 hold were 496 cases of Paper Whites for Ralph M. Ward & Co. and twenty-two cases consigned to Maltus & Ware. The fire started early in the morning and was extinguished shortly before noon, but not until the efforts of two fireboats had submerged the No. 2 hold. Of the bulbs only a portion were touched by fire, but all were so badly water-soaked that it is doubtful if the insurance people will be able to realize much salvage. Ralph M. Ward & Co. state that their shipment contained 604,500 bulbs.

MONTANA PEA CROPS.

The pea crops in the comparatively new Montana district are not turning out so well as had been expected. ''The dry weather of the early part of the season promised an unusually good sample of seed peas from Montana and Idaho,'' said William A. Davis, of Bozeman, ''but since September 12 we have had continued wet weather that has done considerable damage to about half the crop, which is still in the field. Damage by frost to seed that is wet and swollen will greatly increase the expense of hand picking. Alaska peas, while a short crop, are generally in good condition. The yield has been much better on Advancer, Horsford and other medium late and late wrinkled varieties, but since there is perhaps not more than half of them threshed, the final returns are uncertain. Gradus and like sorts have made a light yield and some of the crops are still in the field. American Wonder, Nott's Excelsior, Little Marvel, Laxtonian and other early dwarf varieties will be a little less than an average crop, but the seed is in good condition, with the exception of Gems, Sutton's Excelsior and British Wonder, which have suffered greater damage. Telephone, Alderman, Stratagem, Dwarf Telephone, Champion of England and all late large-podded sorts are not an average crop and need considerable good weather to make a large part of the crop merchantable.'' beet seed, several representatives of the domestic beet sugar interests visited the State Department at Washington last week and appealed for aid. The delegation was headed by Henry T. Oxnard, of California, and H. A. Douglass, of Detroit, Mich. They told the State Department officials that the domestic growers of sugar beets purchase annually from abroad $2,000,000 worth of sugar beet seed. The industry of raising sugar beet seed has not been developed in this country and most of the supply comes from Germany. The beet sugar people told the government officials that it was desirable that some means be devised for making monetary exchange with Germany and for the transportation of sugar beet seed from that country. The State Department has promised to take the matter under consideration.

BEATING THE PARCELS POST.

Last season there was some discussion in the seed trade with regard to the feasibility of shipping catalogues in bulk to central distributing points, there to be mailed at the local zone parcels post rate to avoid the payment of the higher rate for carrying through several zones. Seed catalogues in most cases do not run above one pound, although a few go higher, so that the opportunity for economy is limited, but in this connection the reported action of one of the big Chicago general mail-order houses will be of interest.

Information comes from Lincoln, Neb., to the effect that the Chicago mail order houses, which have been commonly credited with being the chief beneficiaries of the parcels post plan and its chief sponsors, have discovered a way to beat it.

One of the greatest benefits they were expected to derive from it was in the cheaper rates for distributing catalogues, but the Lincoln story has it that they have worked the zone system to save expense even over that. To ship from Chicago would involve carrying the catalogues through more than one parcels post zone, wherefore, it is said, they evolved the plan of shipping two car loads of catalogues by freight to Lincoln, to be distributed by parcels post from that city instead of from Chicago. It is estimated there were about 22,000 catalogues in the two cars, and that it saved them on an average of about 5 cents each on postage, or a total of $1,100.

CATALOGUES RECEIVED.

New England Nurseries Co., Bedford, Mass.—Two catalogues, wholesale and general. The wholesale list consists of thirty pages, neatly and compactly arranged, without illustrations or descriptions. The general edition, comprising sixty-four pages, is well illustrated and contains a list of bulbs as well as general nursery stock.

St. Louis Seed Co., St. Louis, Mo.—An illustrated catalogue of bulbs, seeds, plants, insecticides, tools and miscellaneous supplies; twenty-four pages and cover.

Standard Pump & Engine Co., Cleveland, O.—A handy little book of forty-eight pages, in pocket form, with illustrations and descriptions of pumping units, water supply systems, gas engines and electric lighting plants. "Not a complete catalogue," the firm says, "but a pocket edition of Catalogue No. 15."

Leedle Floral Co., Springfield, O.—Wholesale catalogue of roses; in the first part of the 40-page booklet the varieties are carefully arranged in groups, according to classes and colors; then follows a complete alphabetical list of all the roses offered, with "dependable descriptions." Enclosed with the rose catalogue is a separate list of ferns, begonias, geraniums and other plants.

WINTER-FLOWERING ORCHID SWEET PEA, "MRS. A. A. SKACH."

My Original Winter-flowering Orchid or Spencer Sweet Pea

revolutionized the cut flower market last winter. It has brought higher prices than the best carnation, from the start to finish. They will be more sought for this year.

Mr. A. C. Zvolanek, Lompoc, Cal. Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 29, 1914.

Dear Sir: We handled your Winter-flowering Orchid Peas last year in quantity. We sold nearly all of the Peas from Messrs. A. Harvey & Sons, which firm no doubt you know very well. There was nothing in the cut flower line last winter that sold more readily than the Orchid Peas. We believe that all the growers who had your Orchid-flowering Peas last winter had a most profitable crop. As you know, some of the retailers are rather slow to take up something new. After the first purchase of Orchid Peas, however, they invariably bought them in preference. * * *

THE LEO NIESSEN COMPANY.

On account of the War, I will not take any chances to ship many of my foreign orders. This will enable me to send all American orders in full of the following varieties, besides having some to spare:

Pink and White Orchid, White Orchid, Mrs. A. A. Skach (clear pink), Orchid Beauty (dark rose), Venus (white, pink blush), Mrs. M. Spanolin (white), Mrs. Jos. Manda (light pink), all, 1 oz., $4.00.
Lavender Nora, the best and largest clear lavender in cultivation, 1 oz., $1.50.

WINTER-FLOWERING SPENCER MIXTURE

This consists only of the best light pink, pink, white, salmon, lavender and very few dark. Every commercial grower should plant at least one house of these, and he will be taking no risk. 1 oz., $3.00; 4 oz., $10.00; 1 lb., $30.00. Ask for special prices on 10 lbs. or more.

You need one ounce of the Winter Orchid Sweet Pea seed for 100-foot row.

Commercial Sweet Pea Culture, 50c, free with every $5.00 order.

We have all other Winter Grandifloras.

Our Summer-flowering Spencers are the best re-selected in the United States. Ask for list.

BODDINGTON'S "QUALITY" CHRISTMAS-FLOWERING SWEET PEAS

WE ARE SUPER-HEADQUARTERS

All true stocks of Winter-flowering Sweet Peas will again be scarce this season. The winter-flowering Spencer types are almost a total failure owing to the exceptional season in California this spring, and through the ravages of Aphis we regret that we are unable to offer any seed with the following exceptions. Our advice to intending planters is to order at once.

REGRET THAT WE ARE SOLD OUT OF YARRAWA AND ANITA WEHRMAN AND ALL OTHER VARIETIES WITH THE EXCEPTION OF THE FOLLOWING. ORDER TODAY AND SECURE YOUR SEED—WHILE THE STOCKS LAST.

ROSE QUEEN "ROSE QUEEN" is Orchid-flowering, borne on long stems, extremely free and early and of pink color most attractive, is a decided acquisition, and like all meritorious novelties is sure to be in demand wherever grown. Prices:—Trade pkt., $1.00; 3 trade pkts. for $2.75; 1 oz., $12.00.

Four-Fold Indorsement.

We again repeat that REPEAT orders are the strongest possible indorsement of any commercial article, and when it comes to four times repeating it is truly a FOUR-FOLD INDORSEMENT. We have many such cases but mention one because of the national reputation of the firm, Messrs. Gude Bros. Co., of Washington, D. C., whose FOURTH order for 1000 seedling plants of our Silver Pink Snapdragon reached us last week. They have said that my seedling Silver Pink was the finest and most productive snapdragon that they have seen, and they back it up by heavy planting of same year after year.

Why take chances with loss of time and money by growing common varieties when my seedling Silver Pink can be had so cheap? We are now shipping XX plants, ready for the bench, at only $4.00 per 100; $35.00 per 1000. Less than 100, 5c each. Also new crop seed of same at $1.00 per pkt.; 3 for $2.50; 7 for $5.00. Cultural directions free. All orders positively cash.

We specialize in snapdragons and have several good ones in colors. Garnet Gem is a rich one and is offered at $6.00 for R. C. and $8.00 for plants. A splendid yellow, $4.00 for R. C. and $6.00 for plants. Rooted cuttings of Nelrose, $4.00, and of Buxton's varia-named, $2.00. Seed of Buxton's and Nelrose, 35c per pkt.; 3 for $1.00. The introducers of these varieties have repeatedly said that they would not come true from seed and we offer them without recommend. Seed was carefully selected from greenhouse plants and is as good as money can buy.

Remember, we are Snapdragon folk. We know the business and attend to it. Send your order, especially for seedlings of S. P., while we have them.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

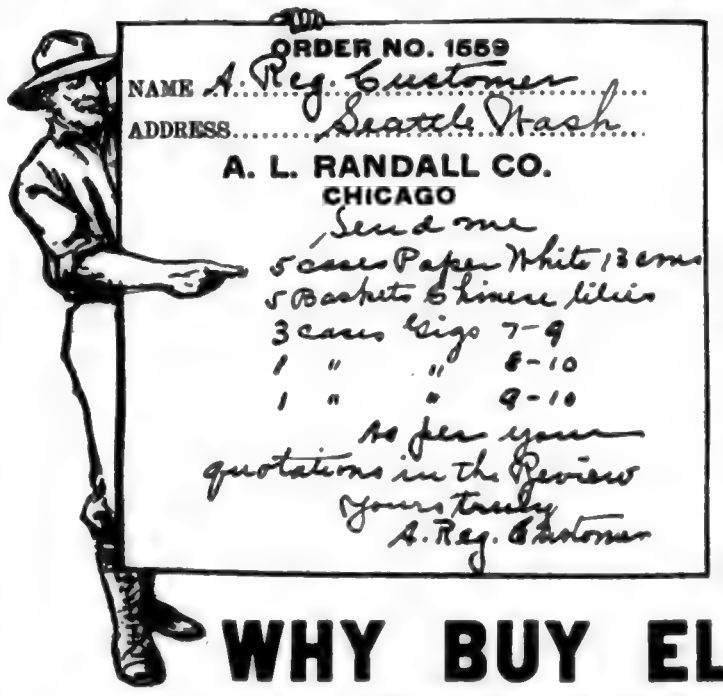
The Market.

The cool nights of the early part of last week had the effect of shortening up the supply of flowers and increasing the demand. Carnations are coming in more plentifully and are bringing from $1 to $2 per hundred, according to the length of stem. Although not plentiful, there are enough roses to meet all demands, at from $2 to $8 per hundred. The stock at the latter price is the equal of any midwinter roses and is in good demand. Dahlias are good and are far more plentiful than they have been. They seem to have been a little more backward than usual this year and there has been no glut of them up to this writing. Delice is meeting with a ready sale and bringing good prices, but there is not a large supply of this variety. Of chrysanthemums, October Frost and October Yellow made their appearance October 1 and are really fine. Some indoor chrysanthemums are bringing up to $2.50 per dozen and are worth the money. Cosmos is another addition to the market, although not in large supply. It is predicted that Washington will see its first frost within the next ten days and that it will kill off the cosmos and prevent a glut.

Various Notes.

A large conservatory, which will cost approximately $22,000, is being added to the home of John R. McLean, at 1500 I street, northwest, after plans prepared by John Russell Pope, a New York architect.

W. E. Leganger, representing the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, visited the stores in this city last week. Mr. Leganger reports business quite good with him and showed a newly filled order book to prove his assertion. He stated that the florists in the places which he had visited are looking for a satisfactory fall and winter season.



Increased stocks are being shown at the Florists' Exchange, 1214 H street, northwest, which was recently taken over by the Leo Niesson Co., of Philadelphia, and the opening of many new accounts has necessitated an enlargement of the icebox and storage space.

C. L. L.

Several amateur flower shows have been held in this vicinity in the last week. Dahlias have been the feature at all of them. At the Brookland show these were prominent, as they were also at the exhibition at Hyattsville, Md. Wm. F. Gude assisted in the promotion of the Petworth show, the first in that suburb, and decorated the church in which it was held. Geo. H. Cooke, C. W. Colliere and John Cotton Smith acted as judges at the Petworth show, and local florists gave their support to all of the exhibitions.

Kennett Square, Pa.—C. L. Powell, who was a grower of carnations, tomatoes and mushrooms, has gone out of this line of business for the present.

THE THIRD EDITION

Of the most successful book ever published for the trade

The original Album of Designs was published in response to many requests from florists who felt the need for an up-to-date book that could be used in taking orders for Funeral Designs, Wedding Decorations and Bouquets, Table Decorations and all cut flower work where it was not practicable to show the customer the finished article as it would be when ready for use. With the publication of this Album it became possible to show the finished work in beautifully printed pictures. The first edition sold like hot-cakes, and a second edition went quickly. The third edition is now ready. Everything is in it—all the standard designs and many new and heretofore unpublished pieces.

96 pages, nearly 300 designs and decorations, beautifully printed on heavy glazed paper, handsomely bound in a cover that will stand wear.

Stevenson, Wash.—W. T. Jackson attributes dull business to the unusually dry summer.

Palo Alto, Cal.—The schedule for the fall flower show of the Menlo Park Horticultural Society, to be held in Armory hall, October 23 to 25, has been issued. The manager of the show is G. Ward, and the exhibition committee consists of J. M. Daly, chairman; G. Nunn, D. Bassett, J. T. Lynch and P. Ellings. Entries for the first day's competition must reach the secretary, P. Ellings, forty-eight hours before the opening of the exhibition; entries for the following days require only twenty-four hours' notice.

TACOMA, WASH.

The Market.

With the passing of outdoor stock, business has taken a decided change, prices advancing all along the line. Chrysanthemums are coming to the market. The local stock is not yet on in sufficient quantity to meet the demand and supplies are drawn from California, but many of the shipments would be the better for more careful handling. Carnations are in short supply, but are improving. Roses are none too plentiful, as they are selling well. Smilax is scarce, while other greens seem to be about equal to the demand.

There are few pot plants being shown, most growers preferring to have their stock in best shape later in the season.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club's meeting October 1 was well attended and much important business came up for consideration.

A. G. Seamons spent part of last week in the Greys Harbor country.

Henry Benthien, the well known local grower, is busy these days, planning a drainage district in the tide flats, he being one of the committee of three selected for this purpose.

About twenty-five of the florists and their wives gave a surprise party in honor of F. H. Atchinson September 26. The evening was spent at cards. Refreshments were served. J. L. S.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

Conversations with representatives of all the leading flower and seed stores show that a spirit of optimism prevails. Business for September is uniformly reported as equal to or better than that of September a year ago.

The fall trade is just opening and the demand for decorative plants and potted flowering stock is good. In cut flowers the supply of roses and carnations about equals the demand. These are from local growers. The stocks of mums are partly local grown and partly from the California markets. The quality of the cut flowers now offered is considered exceptionally good and the growers are getting good prices.

In asking you to discontinue our present ad we wish to say it has given us very good results, and that you will hear from us again when carnation cuttings are in season.—HOLLYWOOD GARDENS, Hollywood, Wash., Sept. 22, 1914.

Frequent rains since the middle of September, following an unusually long season of drought, have taken all the outdoor grown flowers off the market except dahlias and a few late gladioli.

The seed stores have just received their supplies of foreign bulbs and are now distributing them.

Various Notes.

A new flower store has been opened at 430 Washington street by Clark & Breeze. They display some fine Christmas peppers, which sell at popular prices.

Robert D. Mauff, of Denver, visited some of the Portland dealers this week.

Max Smith is showing some excellent cyclamens of his own growing.

H. J. Millatt, who has been with Clarke Bros., has taken a position with A. J. Burt, of Spokane.

S. G. Lubliner has a supply of baskets which left Japan the day before war was declared.

The new rose, Ophelia, distributed last year by the E. G. Hill Co., has attracted a great deal of attention in the window display of Martin & Forbes Co.

The Swiss Floral Co. has had exhibits at the county fair, held at Gresham, and at the state fair, held at Salem. Rahn & Herbert Co. had an exhibit at Salem and the Mountain View Floral Co. one at Gresham.

Donald Wadsworth, who has been with the Holden Floral Co., has taken a position with the Kelso Floral Co., of Kelso, Wash.

W. Thompson, greenhouse builder, has had a severe case of blood poisoning and, while he is now out of danger, is still confined to his home.

Rahn & Herbert Co. has completed additions to the greenhouse range at Clackamas, amounting to about 35,000 square feet, and has installed a new tubular boiler of 100 horse-power. Martin & Forbes Co. has added about 25,000 square feet this season.

Some fine violets are in the market. A single variety grown by J. Kioda and a double grown by R. Byron are the favorites.

Niklas & Son display a splendid lot of Cecile Brunner roses of their own growing.

introduced last year, is being grown in a number of places here and is giving general satisfaction.

The houses of the Woodmere Floral Co. are now devoted entirely to ferns and potted plants.

Clarke Bros. show an excellent lot of cut and potted stock of their own growing. Among them are Mrs. Francis King gladioli and Countess of Lonsdale dahlias.

Miss Coral Van Kirk, daughter of President Van Kirk, of the Floral Society, has just been brought home after an operation for appendicitis at a local hospital. She is recovering as rapidly as could be expected.

Visitors this week from outside districts were: Mrs. F. D. Owen, of Roseburg; Mr. Fletcher, a gladiolus specialist, of Hood River; H. T. Fleishauer, the aster specialist, of McMinnville.

The Market.

The season is getting into its stride and every day seems to show an improvement. There were one or two hot days, such as we always get late in September, which seemed to damp the ardor of the flower buyers, but this has only been a temporary setback and October weddings are coming along in good shape. Good Major Bonnaffon mums are in, and a few Appletons, while White Queen holds its own in spite of the long neck. Roses have been decidedly scarce, but are now coming in more freely again. Cosmos makes a pretty show and the peony and cactus-flowered dahlias help out along the same line.

Various Notes.

I had occasion to call on J. McGilvray the other day, at Eastlake park, and was surprised to see the great improvements made there within the last few months. It seems only a week or two ago that everything around the place was in an uproar, the greenhouse builders not having nearly finished.

WM. BORSCH, R. 1, Hillsdale, Ore.

Now the houses are looking fine and are exceedingly interesting. There is a fine lot of orchids in bloom, comprising elegant stock of Cattleya labiata. I also noticed a deep-lipped form of Cattleya Bowringeana, quite distinct from the ordinary type and possibly a natural hybrid. Great credit is due Mr. McGilvray for the progress made under many difficulties. Outside, too, Gus Peterson is getting the lawns in shape and everything around the place is improved wonderfully.

Martin Reukauf, representing Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, was in the city last week, calling on the trade.

Fred Sperry opened a wholesale store at 112 Winston street, September 28, under the name of the L. A. Floral Co.

Henry W. Turner is well pleased with the reports received from the east on his new rose, September Morn. He shipped several thousand plants to C. H. Totty, of Madison, N. J., and to S. J. Reuter & Son, of Westerly, R. I. Both write praising it highly. Eastern roses that have been sent to Mr. Turner are doing finely here. Lady Ann Borodell, the light pink sport of My Maryland, came from the Reuter establishment and surely is fine under California conditions. It is of a lovely pale flesh tint and is of the same habit as the old favorite. The light pink Shawyer, Mrs. F. F. Thompson, was named by Mr. Totty in honor of the first lady he worked for in the United States. It is an improvement on the type and does well here. While I have the history stop out, I may say that growers here are interested in seeing that Milwaukee, where the beer grows, is also the native place of Prima Donna, according to recent reports. And under that name, too!

The opening cards sent out by the Freeman-Lewis Co. are unusually attractive, as is the store in its new fall dress. Business is reported good here.

Some of the finest Ulrich Brunner roses I have seen this season were shown last week at the store of Wolfskills' & Morris Goldenson. These were produced by our old friend, Jim Menasco, who prides himself on being able to cut this fine rose every day in the year. Good work!

Wright's Flower Shop reports that the season is opening up well and the stock coming from the greenhouses is a credit to the cultural skill of T. Brown. I noticed the first Appletons of the season here, rather early in the game. The indoor carnations, too, are excellent and they are also showing some elegant Lilium giganteum from cold storage bulbs.

The H. N. Gage Co. is growing a considerable part of its crop of Asparagus plumosus seed under glass this year and Mr. Gage says it is already flowering. This is the first instance that has come to my knowledge of its being so grown in California, but Mr. Gage says he wants to be sure of having seed, even should a frost occur. This crop is growing at the Long Beach place, where Mr. Littel is still in charge.

W. Groen, brother of Cohn Groen, of Polder & Groen, Montebello, is now in charge of the Whittier city parks. He has had considerable experience on good private places here and should prove a good man for the place.

Quite a stunt in tree moving was pulled off by Albert Youngerman at the new place of the Selig Polyscope Co., when two large, old Washingtonia robusta, at least forty feet high, were moved to the grounds from south of the city. The architect's plan of the entrance called for a pair of palms that would tower above and behind the building and these meet the conditions exactly. In the orchid house I noticed some good flowers of Odontoglossum grande and O. Bictoniense.

Another large consignment of kentia seeds arrived last week at the warehouse of the Germain Seed & Plant Co., from Australia. The first shipment had been all taken up immediately on arrival. The seed arrived in elegant order. The last of the cold storage Lilium giganteum has been cleaned up, but the firm is lucky in holding a large stock of first-rate valley pips, which are naturally meeting with a good demand.

Smith & Dieterich's formal opening is booked for next week.

DIGGING AND STORING BULBS.

I should like to know whether it is all right to dig bulbs, such as daffodils, amaryllis, gladioli, etc., after they are through blooming. What care is necessary to keep them from drying, after digging? I am located, you will notice, not far from San Francisco, Cal.

F. A. P.

Daffodils need not be dug unless they become too crowded, in which case they can be taken up as soon as their foliage has matured, and stored in boxes in a cool, dry shed or room until fall. Gladioli do better if lifted and replanted each season. Take them up early in November, cut the stems back to within four or five inches of the bulbs and lay them on shelves in any cool storehouse which keeps above freezing. Amaryllis, in your locality, need not be dug up at all. Unless you want the bulbs for sale, leave them alone; they will flower all the better for it. Like other bulbs, they should not be dug while their foliage is green.

NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

CONSTRUCTION of the 2-story office building, of concrete blocks, erected for the Texas Nursery Co. at its plant at Sherman, Tex., is completed.

THE organization of a nursery at Wyndmere, Minn., is reported to be under way. J. A. Mogren, of the firm of J. A. Mogren & Sons, proprietors of the Kenyon Nurseries, at Kenyon, Minn., is said to be the prime mover in the enterprise.

INCORPORATION papers have been issued to the La Grange Nursery Co., of La Grange, Ill., to conduct a general florists', greenhouse and nursery business, with a capital stock of $10,000. The incorporators are Henry Mehl, Peter E. Evans and Albert Peterson.

ANOTHER government nursery is being planned at the Great Plains experimental station, near Mandan, N. D. Free trees to farmers will shortly be as bad for the nurseryman as free seeds are for the seedsman. But while the latter is nearing its end, the former practice is increasing.

FIRE destroyed the barn, wagon house and two outbuildings at the Morrisville Nurseries, Morrisville, Pa., September 25. Lack of water prevented the firemen from checking the blaze. These nurseries, formerly conducted by the late Samuel C. Moon, are now operated by Miss Jane C. Moon.

REORGANIZATION of the Naomi Nurseries, Inc., of New Orleans, La., recently, led to the election of the following officers: President, William J. Fomento; vice-president, M. M. Jones; secretary-treasurer, George H. Penn. Mr. Jones made a success as local manager for Griffing Bros. Co., of Jacksonville, Fla.

HORTICULTURAL inspection in the state of Washington may meet with a hindrance as the result of a recent decision of the Supreme court of the state, upholding the Yakima County Supreme court in restraining the county commissioners from including in their 1914 budget $14,000 for inspection. The court held that the law passed by the 1913 legislature creating the state department of agriculture repealed the 1909 horticultural law.

NEW YORKERS NEED NOT WORRY.

Since the passage of the workmen's compensation law members of the trade in the state of New York have been trying to find out whether they would come under the provisions of the act and be compelled to take out insurance for their employees. An opinion on this subject which has been forwarded by the commission to The Review will, therefore, bring rest to their minds. The nursery and florists' trades as a whole are not hazardous occupations. Only employees engaged in the occupations definitely listed in the act come under the provisions of the law. A few employees of nurserymen and florists, such as drivers of trucks, boiler tenders, mechanics and the like, must be provided for with insurance by their employers. But the larger number will not be regarded as engaged in a hazardous occupation. While the workmen's compensation commission has given no concrete and binding decision on this point, yet F. A. Spencer, the secretary of the commission, states as an informal expression of opinion that "nurserymen and florists employ certain men who would have to be insured, although their enterprises as a whole are probably not covered by the act. Men driving teams, operating boilers or electrical appliances should be insured."

OKLAHOMA ASSOCIATION MEETS.

The Oklahoma Nurserymen's Association met at the Lee Huckins hotel, Oklahoma City, September 22, with President Jim Parker in the chair. The reports of the standing committees were received and the committees continued. Many topics of interest to the nurserymen of the state were thoroughly discussed. Prof. C. E. Sanborn, state entomologist, gave a most interesting talk. By the unanimous vote of the members present the old officers were continued. They are:

President—Jim Parker, of Tecumseh.

Vice-president—Benjamin Davis, of Tahlequah.

Secretary—P. W. Vaught, of Holdenville.

Legislative committee—Jim Parker, of Tecumseh; J. A. Lopeman, of Enid, and C. E. Garee, of Noble.

The attendance at this meeting was not what it should have been, but all present were enthusiastic. Several new members were added, and there was not a calamity howler present.

Nursery affairs in this state are in good condition. The nurserymen were influential in getting one of the best nursery inspection laws of any state in the United States passed by the last legislature, and the entomological board is satisfactory to all. The legislative committee is on the watch for any proposed bill that will be a detriment to the nursery industry of the state and has authority to call a special meeting at any time it is deemed advisable.

The next annual meeting will be held during the first days of the 1915 state fair.

STOCK FROM HOLLAND.

On the steamer Zyldyk, from Rotterdam, which arrived at the port of New York September 28, were over 200 cases of nursery stock from Holland. Maltus & Ware received over half of it; their consignments were fifty-six tubs of trees and fifty-four cases of shrubs. The other consignments, which all consisted of shrubs, were twenty-six cases for G. W. Sheldon & Co., eight cases for Lunham & Moore and seventy-one cases for the American Express Co.

These amount to nearly a hundred cases more stock than the receipts of the previous week, as noted in last week's Review. There seems to be little doubt, therefore, that imports of nursery stock for this season have started to come in good earnest, and that the

MAINTAIN INSPECTION SERVICE.

Sixteen pages of the service and regulatory announcements of the Federal Horticultural Board for August are given over to a list of the countries which now maintain nursery stock inspection and a list of official inspectors of these countries, with the wording of their seals. All the countries which send to this country any quantity of nursery stock long ago fell into line. Others, which send only occasional shipments, are finding it to their advantage to add their names to the list. Italy is the latest to show signs of activity to this end; the province of Padua already certifies export nursery stock. The Market.

Business is up to the average for this season of the year. Stock, other than Killarney roses, is none too plentiful and fair prices are being realized. Beauties are in better supply and are finding a fair market. Dahlias are about at their best and are selling well. The war scare on valley suddenly passed over and a good grade of stock is now to be had for $4 per hundred—a drop of $1 under the former price. White and medium-grade pink roses are in short supply; so, also, are lilies, for which there is a good demand, with the prices continuing to hold up well. Carnations are still poor. Mums are in good demand at good prices, with only a little local stock to be had. Smilax is to be had in any quantity and meets with a poor sale even at low prices. Asparagus is being taken up better, with plenty in sight for immediate demands. Single violets made their appearance in the local stores during the week, but are not selling well as yet; neither are they of really good quality.

Various Notes.

B. G. Merritt is sending some fine Beauties to the Pennock-Meehan Co.

Chas. L. Seybold, formerly superintendent of public parks in this city, but now of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., was a visitor here last week, renewing old acquaintances.

On Monday night, September 28, the outside temperature in this locality dropped to 36 degrees and some of the growers felt rather worried about stock which had not yet been brought inside. At Vincent's dahlia farm a number of spots were blackened by frost, but an exceptionally heavy dew saved the stock from destruction. Coming on the eve of the firm's annual show, such destruction would have been doubly serious.

The show committee of the Maryland Horticultural Society held its preliminary meeting at the office of William Feast, October 2. Matters pertaining to the exhibition to be held at the Fifth Regiment armory, November 17 to 21, were discussed and it was decided to hold another committee meeting in the near future, when plans will be formulated and further arrangements made.

This week's obituary column contains a report of the death, by suicide, of Jesse Bell, who was employed in the greenhouses of William Fraser, at Rider, Md.

Hardy Perennial Phloxes

The Most Extensive Stock in the World

Strong one-year field-grown plants, which will make a fine display next season

General Collection of Hardy Phlox

Albion (Medium). One of our own introductions; producing very large panicles of pure white flowers, with faint aniline-red eye.
Bacchante (Tall). Tyrian rose, with crimson-carmine eye.
B. Comte (Medium). Brilliant French purple, with crimson-carmine shadings. 85 cts. per doz.; $6.00 per 100.
Coquelicot (Dwarf). A fine pure scarlet, with crimson-red eye. 85 cts. per doz.; $6.00 per 100.
Diadem (Dwarf). A fine dwarf, pure white.
Eclaireur (Tall). Brilliant rosy magenta, with large lighter halo.
George A. Strohlein (Medium). Bright scarlet, with crimson-red eye; does not bleach. $1.00 per doz.; $7.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1,000.
Henry Murger (Tall). White, crimson-carmine center.
H. O. Wijers (Tall). White, with bright crimson-carmine eye.
Henry Marcel (Medium). Pure red, with bright salmon shadings.
Jeanne d'Arc (Tall). A good standard late white.
Jules Cambon (Medium). Bright rosy magenta, with large white center and light halo.
La Vague (Medium). Pure Mauve, with aniline-red eye.
L'Erenement (Dwarf). Orange scarlet overlaid with salmon-pink.
Louise Abbema (Dwarf). Very large dwarf, pure white, fine form.
Mme. Paul Dutrie (Tall). A delicate lilac-rose, reminding one of some of the beautiful soft pink Orchids.
Mrs. Jenkins (Tall). The best tall early white for massing.
Obergartner Wittig (Medium). Bright magenta, with crimson-carmine eye; large flower and truss; one of the best.
Professor Virchow (Medium). Bright carmine, overlaid with orange scarlet.
R. P. Struthers (Tall). Rosy carmine, with claret-red eye, fine.
Selma (Tall). Large flower, pale rose mauve, with claret-red eye.
Siebold (Tall). Bright vermilion-red overlaid with orange scarlet; crimson-red eye, 85 cts. per doz.; $6.00 per 100.
Sunshine (Dwarf). Large, aniline-red with crimson-red eye and light halo.
Von Hochberg (Tall). Bright French purple, one of the finest dark colored varieties. $1.00 per doz.; $7.00 per 100.
Von Lassburg (Medium). The purest white in cultivation, individual flowers larger than any other white.
Vesuvius (Dwarf). Pure red, with bright purple eye.
Price. Any of the above General Collection, except where noted, 75 cts. per doz.; $5.00 per 100; $40.00 per 1000.

New Varieties of Phlox

Europa. A white variety with very decided crimson-carmine eye; the individual flowers as well as the trusses are very large, entirely distinct.
Elizabeth Campbell. Very bright salmon-pink, with lighter shadings and dark crimson eye; an entirely new and much-wanted shade in Phlox.
Frau Anton Buchner. The finest white variety yet introduced, having the largest truss and individual flower; of dwarf habit.
Gefion. A new color in Phloxes, a tender peach-blossom pink with bright rose eye. $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100.
Manzelbrunner. A very large bright soft pink, with a large white eye.
Rynstrom. An improved form of the popular variety Pantheon; fine for massing, of a Paul Neyron Rose color.
Rosenberg. Bright reddish-violet, with blood-red eye, large truss and individual flowers as large as a silver dollar.
Rheinlander. A beautiful salmon-pink with flowers and trusses of immense size, the color of the flower is intensified by a very decided eye of a deep claret-red. $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100.
W. C. Egan. One of the best and largest flowering varieties in our collection, panicles of immense size, of a delicate pleasing soft shade of lilac which is illuminated by a large bright solferino-red eye. $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100.
Thor. Bright orange scarlet, overlaid with salmon pink with deep claret-red eye. $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100.
Widar. A splendid improvement on Edmond Rostand; in color a light reddish-violet, with very large white center, which intensifies the color.
Tragedie. Deep brilliant carmine with blood-red eye. $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100.
Wanadis. Entirely distinct, a mottling of white and light violet, reminding one of the native Phlox Divaricata Canadensis. The color is intensified by a bright reddish-purple eye, a strong grower, producing trusses of immense size. $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100.
Price. Any of the above varieties, except where noted, $1.00 per doz.; $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

Early Flowering Hardy Phloxes (P. Suffruticosa).

While this type does not contain the rich colors which are a feature of the other well-known sorts, it is invaluable on account of coming into bloom in May, or fully six weeks earlier than the others, and continuing throughout the season.
Miss Lingard. The grand, free-flowering early white.
Hercules. Bright rosy lilac.
Mrs. Dalrymple. White shaded rose; scarlet eye.
Ninon. Deep rosy lilac.
$1.00 per doz.; $7.00 per 100; $60.00 per 1000.

COLUMBUS, O.

The Market.

Trade is still rather quiet. About the only thing is funeral work, and that is quite heavy at times and at other times slow. The present week makes a stir in decorative stock, as the style show is on, and no doubt some elaborate windows will be seen.

Roses are quite heavy and some good stock is to be had. At times there is a considerable surplus of them. Beauties are good and, from the outlook, there will be more than double the amount of Beauties grown here last year. Carnations are coming in heavily and the quality is good. There is enough to go the rounds now except in red, which is just beginning to appear on the market, but with rather short stems. Mums are a little more plentiful and we shall soon be wishing there were not so many. There is little besides white up to date. Valley is a little scarce and the demand is light.

Various Notes.

The Columbus Floral Co. reports business still a little slow, but they look for it to open up soon.

The Munk Floral Co. says business is looking up a little, with plenty of stock to be had.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. reports business on the mend. They are cutting heavily on roses from their new house.

The Livingston Seed Co. reports things opening up somewhat, with good stock coming in.

The Art Floral Co. is making a strong display of gladioli and mums at present.

Block & Crane are back on the job again after the summer season. They are still at their old stand opposite the university. J. M.

Easthampton, Mass.—G. H. McIntyre will open a store in the Bosworth building, on School street.

PAWTUCKET, R. I.

The Market.

Funeral work has been the main support of the trade during the last two weeks, although there have been several weddings calling for small quantities of cut flowers, etc. Slowly but surely asters are going, while carnations and chrysanthemums are coming in to take their place. Gladioli held a prominent part in the trade this season and next year no doubt will be still more in evidence.

Various Notes.

Walter Kelton soon will enter our ranks as a retail florist, with a store in the Brownell building.

Charles Olney, of Rehoboth, is bringing late sweet peas to this market.

Jacob Brunner, of the China Folding Box Co., Castorland, N. Y., called on the trade last week.

John J. Kelley, of Valley Falls, and Neil Ward were recent visitors to the Warwick Greenhouses, whose proprietor, James Burke, had the contract for landscape work on Congressman Gerry's estate at Warwick Neck.

A. W. Vose, of Woonsocket, has returned from an enjoyable vacation spent at Prudence Isle.

Charles Lapham, of Central Falls, has reported to the police that numerous panes of glass have been broken in his greenhouses. It has been the work of boys, as stones were found inside.

At the Union Grange show at Slatersville recently, the judges of the flower classes were Mrs. Foster, with Vose, the Florist; Mrs. Arnold, of Union Village, and Charles Morey, of the Woonsocket Hill Nurseries. A. W. Vose made a display of plants.

J. J. Kelley, Valley Falls, was elected a delegate to the state convention by the Democratic party. T. F. B.

PANDANUS VEITCHII

I have about 10,000 pot-grown Pandanus Veitchii, well rooted, nicely variegated, no white ones; plants are grown only from small cuttings from 4 to 6 inches high. This is the best lot of such plants I ever had. Surplus over the requirements of my regular customers.

Special low net price is $80.00 per 1000; 500 at 1000 rate.

For 18 years I have been growing Pandanus Veitchii on a large scale, having standing orders from the largest houses in the country. I have increased my acreage of stock plants so that I now have some surplus over the requirements of my regular customers.

The Market.

The market has improved in the last few weeks. Easter lilies and valley are in especially good demand. Carnations are coming in quantity, with quality good for the season. Several large weddings are booked for late October and the outlook for increasing business is bright.

Club Committees.

President Knoble, of the Florists' Club, has appointed the following committees:

Executive committee—H. Bate, chairman; H. B. Jones, Albert Lingren, L. F. Darnell and William Kruesen.

Industrial committee — Charles E. Russell, chairman; John Kirchner and John Boddy.

Convention committee — Frank A. Friedley, chairman; George Bate, George W. Smith, T. Smith, F. C. Witthuhn, S. N. Pentecost, Charles J. Graham, Frank Ritzenthaler, F. C. W. Brown and H. P. Merrick.

Membership committee—H. B. Jones, chairman; W. I. Potter and Charles F. Bastian.

Welfare committee—F. C. W. Brown, chairman; George W. Smith, Paul Kunze, T. Smith and C. Hagenburger.

Entertainment committee — Albert Lingren, chairman; L. Utzinger, Frank Gompf, P. Backhofen and Walter Witthuhn.

Various Notes.

The Smith & Fetters Co. has received a Willys-Overland delivery car. Painted in soft lavender, it attracts much attention. It is one of the handsomest cars to be seen here.

The suffragettes' parade October 3 called for a large number of yellow flowers.

R. F. Koch, representing the Grasselli Chemical Co., a local concern, has been calling on the trade, introducing a nicotine product which this firm is putting on the market. F. A. F.

How Much Longer Will You Sleep?
How Much Longer Will You Worry?

Worry makes gray hair. Don't get old when you can prevent it. Don't let the war worry you. Wake up! Go right ahead into business. Look out for yourself, for nobody will give you anything if you have nothing.

Look here:—I will help you and give you a chance, but for one week only, at prices seldom offered. We need the room for our great importation of Azalea Indica, and have decided to make a big reduction on the following plants:

A 7-inch $1.00 Boston Fern we shall reduce to only 50c.
A 6-inch 75c Boston Fern we shall reduce to only 40c.

A large 6-inch 50c Scottii Fern, reduced to 35c.
A large 5½-inch 40c Scottii Fern, reduced to 30c.

And look, to give you an additional chance, we shall give a reduction of 25% on cash with order on everything we have advertised, with the exception of Araucarias.

HONOR TO WHOM HONOR IS DUE.

Godfrey Aschmann, the Philadelphia plantsman, at the age of 60, is as active as ever (a visit to his establishment will convince you). He is a native of Switzerland, of the right thinking, active, fiery type, and, like the Deutsche Kaiser, full of courage and ambition. He is not afraid of the combined armies of the so-called florists, and he is sure he will carry the field when other florists are down-hearted and holding back on account of hard times and afraid to invest a dollar. Godfrey Aschmann has his eyes open—he watches and looks into the future—buys up all the good stock he can get, fills his houses with the choicest and is prepared when the rush comes.

ARAUCARIA
OUR SPECIALTY

WAR ABROAD will make the Araucarias scarce this fall and winter. But look, it won't affect Godfrey Aschmann. Why? We were not afraid to invest thousands of dollars in importing the plants in the spring of 1914, hence we do not care for the war, and are prepared to fill all orders—4 houses are filled with the choice ARAUCARIA EXCELSA. We are again able to fill all orders. 5½ and 6-inch pots, 2, 3, 4, 5 years old, 14, 15, 20 to 25 in. high, well established, 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. EXCELSA GLAUCA and ROBUSTA COMPACTA, large plants, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00.

AZALEA INDICA, beautiful strong plants, full of foliage and buds, in good shape, the best commercial varieties, Christmas or Easter blooming, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00.

PALMS.

BELMOREANA and FORSTERIANA, bushy, stocky plants, new importation, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50. K. BELMOREANA, single plants, bushy, 5½-inch pots, 50c, 60c and 75c; made up of three plants, bushy, 5½ and 6-inch pots, 50c, 60c and 75c. FORSTERIANA, single and made up, 5½-inch pots, 50c, 60c and 75c.

COCOS WEDDELLIANA, 3-inch, 15c, 18c and 20c.

Greenhouse Heating.

HOW MUCH RADIATION?

What amount of radiation will be necessary to heat two greenhouses, each 12x21x110 feet? The two houses have been made into one. M. J. C.

The temperature desired is not stated, nor is there anything to indicate whether steam or hot water is to be the heating medium.

If there is no glass in the walls and they are not more than five feet in height, the two houses can be heated with steam to 60 degrees with 900 square feet of radiation, for which a 15-horse-power to 20-horse-power boiler will be desirable. With hot water about 1,750 square feet of radiation will be needed and the boiler should have a rating of at least 2,000 square feet. If 50 degrees will answer, 750 square feet of radiation will be needed for steam and 1,400 square feet for hot water.

HEATING AN ONTARIO HOUSE.

I am building a greenhouse 22x45 feet and should like to have your advice in regard to the heating of it. I have a Taylor-Forbes hot-water boiler in my residence, which adjoins the greenhouse. It is rated at 1,000 feet of radiation. The dwelling requires 425 feet of radiation when it is all heated. Do you think the boiler is large enough to heat the greenhouse in addition? The boiler is round, with five pans one above the other. The firepot is twenty-six inches in circumference. The boiler was manufactured to burn coal, but I have only burned wood so far, with good results; the smallest fire I can keep alive gives a great deal of heat. The temperature sometimes reaches 20 degrees below zero here in Ontario.

In building the greenhouse, can I put any glass under the eaves, and how much? I want to grow lettuce, vegetables, plants, etc.

There will be three feet of fall between where I expect the returns will run, under the benches, and the high-water line in the boiler. The boiler is plugged for two 2-inch and two 2½-inch flow pipes and three 2-inch and two 2½-inch returns for heating the greenhouse.

You will notice from the enclosed sketch that there is a door to the woodshed at the north end of the greenhouse. How shall I carry the returns from the east side of the house across the doorway, to the boiler in the residence, which juts a few feet each way into the northwest corner of the greenhouse? Would it be all right to drop them at

The Value of a Thermostat

LET A FLORIST TELL IT

HERE is what a greenhouse man said in a letter to The Review: "The value of a thermostat in a greenhouse may possibly interest you, so I take the present opportunity of explaining its advantages. Three weeks ago I installed a Standard thermostat, made by the Standard Thermometer Co., putting it in my rose house, 200 feet from the residence. After sundown each day I set the low contact hand at 57 degrees and the high contact hand at 65 degrees. The black temperature hand, to record 60 degrees, plays between these figures. Should the temperature rise or fall, the alarm bell, just over my bed, rings loudly. I consider this instrument a boon to any florist with a medium-sized range, for it dispenses with the services of a night fireman. With correct firing, I can keep a steady temperature of 60 degrees at night in the rose house and also in four other houses, in all about 5000 feet of glass."—THOMAS E. TOWERSON, Spring Station, Ky.

the end of the bench and run them under ground to the boiler? Shall I carry the returns on the west side straight through the south wall of the dwelling or run them around the corner and through the east side in the same place as the returns from the east side of the greenhouse?

Is a lapped glass house any easier to heat than one of butted glass?

G. A. R.

It is stated that the fire-pot of the boiler is twenty-six inches in circumference, but twenty-six inches in diameter is probably meant. A boiler of this size should easily heat the greenhouse described.

The height of the wall is not given, but two or three feet of glass in the south wall of the house will be desirable.

THE SYSTEM WITH Back to Boiler SYSTEM A PROVEN VALUE

You'll find every progressive florist has some plan or other in mind for improving his greenhouses. And one of the most important features of any greenhouse is the steam apparatus. That's why the most progressive florists have installed the Morehead System—the system that means perfect drainage—even temperature—condensation returned to the boiler above ground—in addition to numerous other advantages. But you will want the complete information. Our engineers have enabled many a florist to increase his greenhouse efficiency where before he thought it wasn't possible. Let them help you.

to 55 degrees, I should suggest the use of three 2½-inch flow pipes, with one on each plate and the other under the ridge, and twelve 2-inch return pipes, arranged in three coils of four pipes each, one being on each wall and the other under the benches. Each of the coils should be reduced and connected to the boiler by a 2½-inch return. The piping on the east side of the house should drop under the doorway and then connect with the boiler. The return from the west coil should enter the dwelling cellar.

As the tighter the glass fits in a greenhouse the easier it is to heat it, it naturally follows that a lapped glass house is the best. Practically speaking, however, the difference in tightness between a house of lapped glass and one of butted glass well fitted is so slight as to be almost negligible. If the glass is not well butted, on the other hand, the difference in tightness and in heating will be greater.

STEAM FOR AN ILLINOIS HOUSE.

I am about to pipe a new greenhouse, 28x142 and six feet high to the gutters, with two feet of glass in each wall. Please inform me how many runs of 1¼-inch pipe will be needed to heat this house to 50 degrees in zero weather. Also state the right size of flow. We use high-pressure steam, with a Morehead steam trap. The boiler has 2-inch openings. Will it be necessary to have a check valve on each return, or will any other valve answer the purpose?

A. C.

For maintaining the temperature stated, eight or nine 1¼-inch returns should be used. With high-pressure steam a 2-inch flow pipe will answer, but a 2½-inch pipe should be used with low pressure. This estimate is made with the idea that the flow pipe is to be carried overhead to the farther end of the house and the returns distributed on the walls and under the benches.

If only one house is to be heated it will answer if valves are placed at both ends of about one-half of the coils, but if several houses are to be heated from one boiler, there should also be valves on the main flow and return pipes. Although ordinary valves will answer, check valves may be used on the boiler end of all of the pipes.

The Market.

Trade has improved in the last two weeks. However, we need a heavy frost before we can expect conditions to change much. We have had unusually fine weather for this time of the year and few florists have had their boilers going up to this time.

Stock of all kinds is available in almost any quantity. Beauties and roses are exceptionally fine for this season. Carnations are improving daily. Dahlias are to be had in almost any quantity. Cosmos and other outdoor flowers are plentiful.

Various Notes.

Clarence Thomas, for many years with Bertermann Bros. Co., has taken a position with the Hill Floral Co. as manager of the retail store. His many friends wish him well in his new venture.

Baur & Steinkamp report heavy sales of carnation plants this year. This firm has been cutting some first-class carnations of late.

E. T. Barnes, of Spencer, has been flooding the market with dahlias of late. His stock is unusually fine this year.

Hartje & Elder have a fine lot of mums coming on for the show. John Hartje has been sitting up nights with them and says they will be right on hand when show time arrives.

The Market.

Market conditions are, at the best, fair. The demand for stock is large and active, but the supply is so large and prices are so low that it takes a large amount of business to run into good money. Everything seasonable is plentiful. Roses are arriving in large quantities and are of high quality. The shortness of last week in American Beauties and lilies is over and there are again more than enough of them to go around. Dahlia receipts are fine. Asters continue to be in heavy supply. Other offerings include carnations, cosmos, orchids, valley and early chrysanthemums. The supply of greens is sufficient for every requirement.

Various Notes.

The next meeting of the Cincinnati Florists' Club will be held Monday, October 12, at the home of Ray Murphy, in Upper Delhi. Automobiles will be at the end of the Warsaw avenue car line at 2:30 p. m.

Wm. Murphy has returned from his cottage at Les Cheneaux islands.

The dahlias that John C. Rutenschroer has been sending to C. E. Critchell were some of the finest that were ever offered in this market.

L. H. Kyrk reports that he cleaned up nicely last week on large receipts at prevailing market prices.

Harry Smiderhaus, of C. E. Critchell's force, spent several days in New Albany, Ind., last week because of the death of an uncle.

Ed. Schwartz, the popular young Norwood florist, is to marry this week. His bride is Miss Field.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

Cold weather and frosts have made outdoor stock somewhat scarce, so that but few asters are to be had and these are of poor quality. There are not many gladioli left, but some fine America still are coming into the market. Dahlias of all kinds are available and sell well, being used in funeral work and for all purposes. The cactus varieties are just beginning to arrive. Yellow and white mums are becoming more abundant; the price, however, remains high. There is a strong demand for carnations, but the supply is meager, for the fall crop has not come into bearing as yet.

Killarney and White Killarney are excellent. Richmond, Milady and Key are in splendid condition. Taft, Mrs. Aaron Ward and Russell are improving right along. Valley is not plentiful at present. Calendulas, snapdragon, mignonette and cosmos are among the garden flowers seen at the various stores. Violets are again with us, but they are small and short of stem, and the color is somewhat pale. The price is low, owing to the inferior quality. There are a few weddings booked for October; not large ones, however.

Various Notes.

Thomas Tobin has severed his connection with W. J. Palmer & Son and is now running a parcel delivery of his own.

The window display of S. A. Anderson last week was most unusual. Crotons were grouped here and there with yellow and bronze dahlias on a groundwork of lavender crepe paper. Baskets of yellow dahlias and cattleyas were also used. Large vases of white mums with oak foliage formed the background for the window.

Harry L. Aust and William Gottevald will open an up-to-date flower shop at 392 Genesee street October 7. Attractive announcement cards have been sent to their many friends and acquaintances, inviting them to their opening exhibition.

William Lake, the ribbon dealer of New York city, was a visitor last week. E. C. A.

Cast Iron Gutters Below Cost

I have just purchased 2650 feet of new cast iron gutters of a standard pattern (see cut). These gutters vary just a trifle in straightness, about ⅛ inch to ¼ inch in a length, and were refused at the foundry on account of a misunderstanding with the purchaser. They are brand new and the prices I am quoting are lower than actual cost at the foundry. The selling price of these gutters was 75 cents per foot. I can furnish them made up in runs as desired, with sash bar brackets for any pitch of roof. These gutters will sell like hot cakes, so hurry your order in today. Cash with order preferred, but will give time to responsible parties.

The Market.

As the weather has been fine for outdoor sports, the flower buyers have not started their usual entertaining indoors. This would, of course, mean a loss of some business for the florists, but on the whole there is no reason to complain.

Never before has the local supply of dahlias been so good as this season and this flower is now recognized as being of considerable value commercially, though but a few years ago dahlias were hardly ever seen in this market. Carnations are coming along nicely, with fairly long stem and blooms of good size. Roses are of fine quality and the supply is such as to bring the prices within easy reach of all buyers.

Various Notes.

Hudson's store was appropriately decorated for the fall opening by Breitmeyer's. This firm also did the decorating for the fall opening of the Crowley-Millner Co.

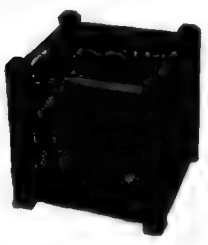
B. Schroeter had the fall opening decorations for the Newcomb-Endicott Co. In addition to several hundred palms and ferns, several thousand roses and Beauties were used.

E. A. Fetters' window is most attractively decorated in autumn colors, with highly colored crotons predominating. Mr. Fetters spent several days last week in Grand Rapids with the Rotary Club.

Mark Sullivan, editor of Collier's Weekly and a brother of J. F. Sullivan, was a recent visitor in this city.

H. S.

HARTFORD, CONN.



At the annual dahlia show of the Connecticut Horticultural Society, held September 23 and 24 in Unity hall, the displays by commercial growers attracted a great deal of attention. George L. Stillman, of Westerly, R. I., showed in the neighborhood of 200 varieties of dahlias, it is stated, and carried off the first prize for fifty varieties of three blooms each, as well as many other prizes. Other professionals who figured largely in the list of dahlia awards are: N. Nelson, of Hartford; C. Louis Alling, of West Haven; Alfred E. Doty, of New Haven; Nathaniel Slocombe, of Farmington; Warren S. Mason, and John F. Huss, of Hartford. Most of these exhibitors also won prizes in the classes for asters, gladioli, vegetables, etc. W. W. Hunt & Co., of Hartford, received a special diploma for their exhibit of bay trees and boxwoods, and took second place in the hardy perennial class.

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

UP-TO-THE-MINUTE WINDOWS WIN

It's not everybody that can get up a striking window display; one that will compel the passers-by to stop and look. And even a crackerjack at the business can't make that kind all the time. But there's a way to make the people stop and look just the same. It's told in this article.

WHY are the shopkeepers in every line of business displaying maps of Europe in their windows these days? The answer is easy. Everybody, no matter whether he has an atlas at home or not, stops to look at a map of the district where war is being waged, and the shopkeeper finds this an easy and inexpensive means of attracting the attention of the people passing by. For the same reason, photographs of current events are seen everywhere in shop windows. People stop to look at things in which they have an interest, and the thing which holds the interest of the greatest number of persons is the best basis for an advertisement.

One Step Better.

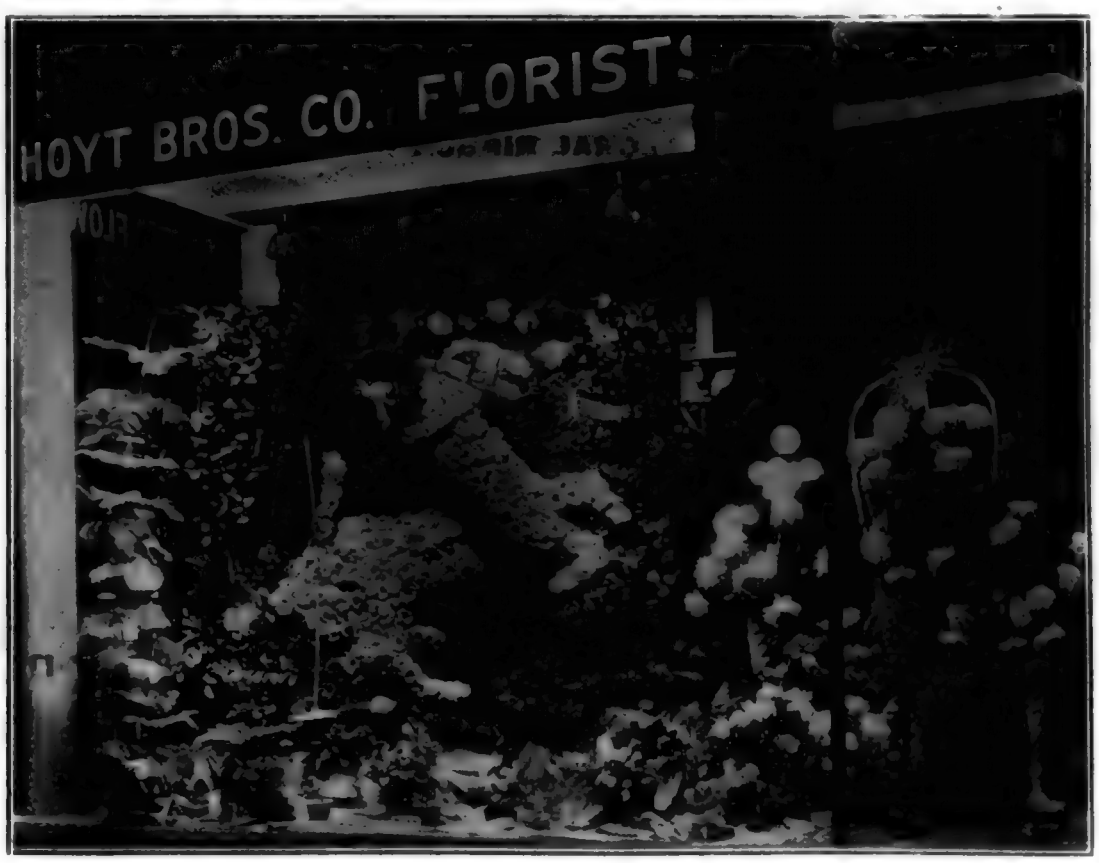
But remember, it's only the basis for an advertisement. The map and the photographs make the people stop in front of the store, but they don't bring them inside. And that is what the storeman who spends time on a window decoration is trying to do.

The florist who displayed the map of Europe in his window and surrounded it with the flags of the various countries done in flowers went one step farther, and it was a long step, too. He not only made the people stop to look at his window, but he also attracted their attention to his particular line. He forced them to take notice that his was a flower store.

Unless the florist does both these things in his window decoration his time and effort are wasted. He must attract the people's attention, and when he has secured their attention he must make them notice that his is a place for them to buy flowers. The objection to the window full of palms and vases of cut flowers is—perhaps we should say was, for this window is rapidly disappearing—that it does not attract attention. And a show window that does not attract attention might as well be a brick wall. Equally objectionable is the window showing only a map, a tank of goldfish, or the like; it attracts attention, but it does not advertise the flowers. And it doesn't do any good to make a lot of noise if nobody knows what you're talking about.

Making Them Look.

The florist, however, rarely errs in the latter respect. His wares are so easy to display and he is so used to arranging them in pleasing fashion that he naturally puts them into every window display. The difficulty that he faces oftenest is how to make the people look. He can speak plainly; he wants to know how to make the noise.



The clue to this problem is found in the map idea. Show the people something in which they are interested. Let your display be a reference to something that the people who pass your store are thinking about. Timeliness is the keynote for the window decorator.

Just now war is the subject uppermost in the mind of nearly everybody, and references to anything military or to anything relating to the scene of conflict are of great interest to all. There are other subjects of as strong interest in each locality. Baseball has been used by florists as a basis for noteworthy window displays when feeling was high; a description of such a decoration, with a baseball diamond in flowers, appeared in a city news-letter in The Review not long ago. Boat races, county and state fairs, G. A. R. reunions, conventions of various organizations, celebrations of one kind and another have been successfully used to furnish the underlying idea for many florists' window displays, and they always draw the crowds.

Getting Ideas.

There is no lack of ideas for such displays. Something is always going on, no matter how dead you think your town may be, even in the middle of the summer. Summer itself has furnished the best basis for a timely and attractive display. As was pointed out in The Review during the summer, everybody is interested in a cool spot in hot weather, and the florist's window that shows one draws the crowds. Similarly, Hallowe'en, Thanksgiving, Christmas and all the other holidays and festal occasions during the year furnish ideas for timely displays. Election day often has been put to use.

Fads and fashions contribute their share of suggestions. A few years ago a miniature Japanese garden in a florist's window would have only the interest of novelty. Today it has the additional interest of timeliness, and these gardens in various florists' windows in different parts of the country have attracted much notice because the people whom the florist wants to reach are interested in this form of garden just now. In a like manner other popular subjects will furnish the ingenious window decorator with ideas for displays that will make the people look. A timely topic, one that appeals to those whom the retailer wishes to reach through his show window, is the basis on which the window artist can be sure of making a display that will attract attention. With this in mind he can have a window with drawing power all the time, and not merely when the decorator has a rare inspiration.

The Polo Pony.

The Review has from time to time printed illustrations of timely window displays. A recent one is shown on the preceding page. This occupied the window of the store of Hoyt Bros Co., at Spokane, Wash., during fair week. As the polo game at the fair is the great drawing card for all classes, the window proved to be a great drawing card as well, through its seasonableness. Using as a guide the design on the front of a booklet sent out by a clothing firm, the window artist constructed a frame of boards, which was covered with moss and then with burlap to hold the moss in place and assist in keeping the toothpicks secure. Asters, immortelles, cape flowers and a little chenille were the other materials used. The completed piece measured 6x6 feet. The manner of construction as well as the materials did not allow of as artistic a representation of the polo pony and his rider as would an oil painting, but the timeliness of the display, coming as it did when interest in polo was strong, made it a complete success.

THE "ONE PLANT" WINDOW.

An idea that has pulled well is to feature a plant by decorating with it and nothing else—a window of Boston ferns in all sizes when a sale was on; or a window of roses in variety, and nothing but roses. Penn, in Boston, who is a live publicity artist, always has some unique or pleasing arrangement to attract the thousands who pass daily. The duck farm made a decided summer hit. At present one window is filled with plants of the bird's nest fern, Asplenium Nidus-Avis, in all sizes, tastefully arranged in groups. A box in the front contains hundreds of 2 months old seedlings; others are 6 months, 2, 3 and 4 years old. A large specimen near the center is 5 years old. Many receptacles are perforated and filled hedgehog fashion. These sell remarkably well. Cards giving the ages of the various groups are displayed in the window, and it is interesting to note how the people stop and read them. This special window has boomed the sale of these ferns wonderfully.

"FORGET THE WAR."

The merchants of the United States are giving altogether too much of their time to worrying about conditions in Europe. This terrible war surely deserves more than a passing thought; still, we cannot help matters by spending half of every business day figuring out the next move of the Germans or allies. Money may be a little tight, but it will become still more so unless we "forget the war" and turn our thoughts to loosening the general public's purse-strings. The money is somewhere and it is up to the florists to display their wares so that the hundreds, perhaps thousands, of people who daily pass their stores cannot resist the temptation to buy. Take advantage of the war, as the papers and magazines are doing. Display some of your imported baskets and give in your window some data relative to the basket industry in Germany, or the azalea growing industry in Belgium later on when you can show some azaleas. Any recent importations from the countries now at war, if properly displayed, will hold a crowd. H. S.

COOK AND THE PINEAPPLE.

For the last three and one-half years Henry Cook, of New Orleans, has coddled a pineapple. At last, as a reward for his care, the plant bore an excellent fruit. Removing it from the greenhouses to the store at 129 Carondelet street, Mr. Cook used it as the central feature of his window display. Many people thought it was an artificial arrangement or something of that sort, and it attracted much attention for the fortnight it was used for display. The plant is shown in the accompanying illustration.

MAKING THEM REMEMBER.

Harry A. Bunyard has discovered in System the following suggestion on "What I Would Do if I Were a Florist":

"I would make up a list of several hundred prosperous residents, consult the vital statistics at the office of the town clerk or city hall and learn, as far as possible, the birthday dates of the wives of these people. Then I would send a small plant or bouquet to these ladies, on their birthday anniversaries, with a card of birthday greetings. These ladies would never want flowers afterwards without thinking of that little gift."

FROM A STEAMSHIP COMPANY.

That the ocean lines are recognizing the large extent of the florists' business in bon voyage tokens and are taking the best of care of the flowers sent on board their vessels is made apparent in more ways than were set forth in the article on this subject in last week's Review. As further evidence on this score, G. E. M. Stumpp,

How Penn, of Boston, has Featured Asplenium Nidus-Avis and Boomed its Sale.

Floral Arrangement for Table, Shown by S. A. Frost, Toronto.

the New York retailer, quotes a letter received from a German line in regard to an order addressed to a person booked to sail, but who was not on board when the steward came to deliver the flowers. It reads as follows:

"S. S. Kronprinzessin Cecilie, eastbound, April 21, 1914.

"Parcel-check No. 4447.

"We refer to your consignment of flowers addressed to ——— in care of our above named steamer, and beg to inform you that we have been advised by the chief steward that this passenger could not be located on board ship and the flowers have been therefore destroyed.

"We would thank you to kindly keep notice on file in case of any inquiry which might be made by your client."

TO PHOTOGRAPH A WINDOW.

Many expert photographers, as well as most florists, do not know how to overcome the reflections on the glass when taking photographs of window displays.

If there is a broad street before the window, it will be almost impossible to take a picture by day; it is always darker in the window than it is outside, and the opposite condition should prevail. But you can get it at night. See that the electric lights, while flooding the window, are themselves hidden from the street. If you have a good lens, from ten to thirty minutes' exposure will be enough. People can walk between the camera and the window without injuring the picture—provided they don't stop.

A good time to photograph a window is just before sunrise. The light is strong and penetrating, and a good picture will usually result. If the window is darker than the street, the glass acts as a mirror, reflecting everything on the opposite side of the street. If the sun shines on the window and the opposite side of the street is dark, there will be no reflection of foreign objects in the picture, but sun shining on part of the window will throw the rest of it into such darkness that the camera will get nothing there.

A method often adopted with good success is as follows: Make a cloth screen of black cambric, sufficiently large to shut off all reflections when raised before the window. Fasten the two upper corners to poles, and when about to take the picture have two boys back of the camera. All reflections will be avoided, and a clear picture should result.

RETAILERS' WORK AT TORONTO.

In spite of display facilities not being of the best, the work of the retail florists at the Canadian National Exhibition, at Toronto, was of a high class. The entries of the retailers were good as a whole, and the exhibits of S. A. Frost, of Toronto, were particularly admired. Among his prize-winnings Mr. Frost was able to count the blue ribbons in the classes for decorated tables and for floral arrangements for tables. His exhibit in the latter class, which is shown in the illustration on this page, contained speciosum lilies, valley, ferns and gypsophila. For decorative effect pieces of coral and seaweed were used.

A non-competitive exhibit displayed by Mr. Frost that was exceedingly striking was a life-sized representation of two war-horses drawing a chariot and driven by a female figure representing Britannia. The horses were covered with magnolia leaves and the chariot with moss, and ferns and palms were used to set off the design, which is shown in one of the accompanying illustrations.

TO VISIT INDIANAPOLIS.

The Indiana State Florists' Association has extended, through its secretary, an invitation for the Illinois State Florists' Association to meet with them at the annual chrysanthemum exhibition of the Chrysanthemum Society of America at Indianapolis, Ind., November 6 to 8, 1914, and be its guests at a banquet on the evening of November 6.

There will be a meeting of the executive committee of the Illinois State Florists' Association on the morning of November 7, to arrange a date and place for the next annual meeting.

This is an opportune time to take a few days' vacation and greet our old friends and neighbors. So don't miss it. Be sure to come. Let's make a good showing and cheer our Hoosier friends. J. F. Ammann, Sec'y.

orator with ideas for displays that will make the people look. A timely topic, one that appeals to those whom the retailer wishes to reach through his show window, is the basis on which the window artist can be sure of making a display that will attract attention. With this in mind he can have a window with drawing power all the time, and not merely when the decorator has a rare inspiration.

The Polo Pony.

The Review has from time to time printed illustrations of timely window displays. A recent one is shown on the preceding page. This occupied the window of the store of Hoyt Bros Co., at Spokane, Wash., during fair week. As the polo game at the fair is the great drawing card for all classes, the window proved to be a great drawing card as well, through its seasonableness. Using as a guide the design on the front of a booklet sent out by a clothing firm, the window artist constructed a frame of boards, which was covered with moss and then with burlap to hold the moss in place and assist in keeping the toothpicks secure. Asters, immortelles, cape flowers and a little chenille were the other materials used. The completed piece measured 6x6 feet. The manner of construction as well as the materials did not allow of as artistic a representation of the polo pony and his rider as would an oil painting, but the timeliness of the display, coming as it did when interest in polo was strong, made it a complete success.

THE "ONE PLANT" WINDOW.

An idea that has pulled well is to feature a plant by decorating with it and nothing else—a window of Boston ferns in all sizes when a sale was on; or a window of roses in variety, and nothing but roses. Penn, in Boston, who is a live publicity artist, always has some unique or pleasing arrangement to attract the thousands who pass daily. The duck farm made a decided summer hit. At present one window is filled with plants of the bird's nest fern, Asplenium Nidus Avis, in all sizes, tastefully arranged in groups. A box in the front contains hundreds of 2 months old seedlings; others are 6 months, 2, 3 and 4 years old. A large specimen near the center is 5 years old. Many receptacles are perforated and filled hedgehog fashion. These sell remarkably well. Cards giving the ages of the various groups are displayed in the window, and it is interesting to note how the people stop and read them. This special window has boomed the sale of these ferns wonderfully.

"FORGET THE WAR."

The merchants of the United States are giving altogether too much of their time to worrying about conditions in Europe. This terrible war surely deserves more than a passing thought; still, we cannot help matters by spending half of every business day figuring out the next move of the Germans or allies. Money may be a little tight, but it will become still more so unless we "forget the war" and turn our thoughts to loosening the general public's purse-strings. The money is somewhere and it is up to the florists to display their wares so that the hundreds, perhaps thousands, of people who daily pass their stores cannot resist the temptation to buy. Take advantage of the war, as the papers and magazines are doing. Display some of your imported baskets and give in your window some data relative to the basket industry in Germany, or the azalea growing industry in Belgium later on when you can show some azaleas. And recent importations from the countries now at war, if properly displayed, will hold a crowd. H. S.

Henry Cook's Pineapple.

COOK AND THE PINEAPPLE.

For the last three and one-half years Henry Cook, of New Orleans, has coddled a pineapple. At last, as a reward for his care, the plant bore an excellent fruit. Removing it from the greenhouses to the store at 129 Carondelet street, Mr. Cook used it as the central feature of his window display. Many people thought it was an artificial arrangement or something of that sort and it attracted much attention for the fortnight it was used for display. The plant is shown in the accompanying illustration.

MAKING THEM REMEMBER.

Harry A. Bunyard has discovered in System the following suggestion on "What I Would Do if I Were a Florist":

"I would make up a list of several hundred prosperous residents, consult the vital statistics at the office of the town clerk or city hall and learn, as far as possible, the birthday dates of the wives of these people. Then I would send a small plant or bouquet to these ladies, on their birthday anniversaries, with a card of birthday greetings. These ladies would never want flowers afterwards without thinking of that little gift."

FROM A STEAMSHIP COMPANY

That the ocean lines are recognizing the large extent of the florists' business in bon voyage tokens and are taking the best of care of the flowers sent on board their vessels is made apparent in more ways than were set forth in the article on this subject in last week's Review. As further evidence on this score, G. E. M. Stumpp

How Penn, of Boston, has Featured Asplenium Nidus-Avis and Boomed its Sale.

...e New York retailer, quotes a letter ...eived from a German line in regard ... an order addressed to a person ...ooked to sail, but who was not on ...ard when the steward came to de... er the flowers. It reads as follows:

"S. S. Kronprinzessin Cecilie, east-...ound, April 21, 1914.

TO PHOTOGRAPH A WINDOW.

Many expert photographers, as well as most florists, do not know how to overcome the reflections on the glass when taking photographs of window displays.

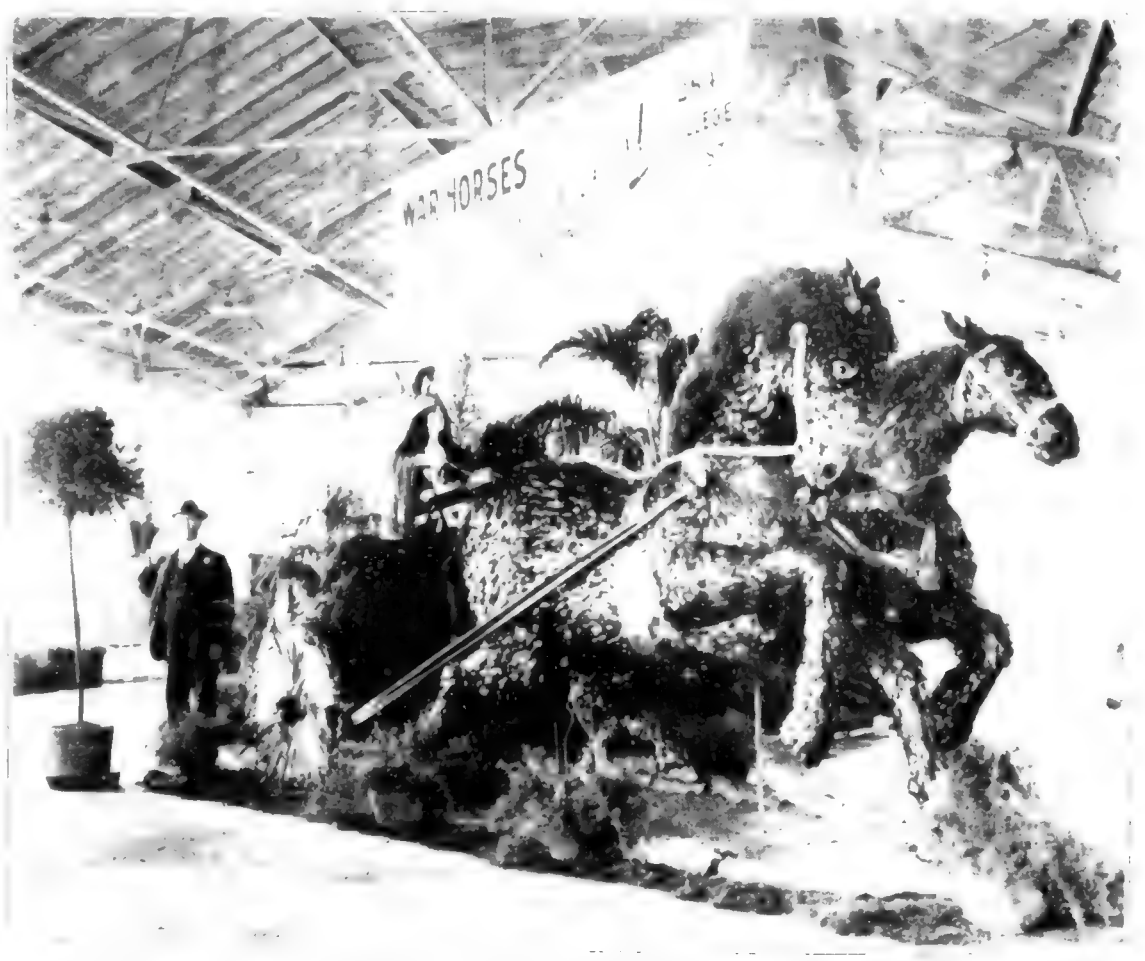
If there is a broad street before the ...indow, it will be almost impossible ... take a picture by day; it is always ...arker in the window than it is outside, and the opposite condition should prevail. But you can get it at night. See ...hat the electric lights, while flooding ...e window, are themselves hidden ...om the street. If you have a good ...ens, from ten to thirty minutes' exposure will be enough. People can ...alk between the camera and the window without injuring the picture—provided they don't stop.

A good time to photograph a window ... just before sunrise. The light is ...trong and penetrating, and a good ...icture will usually result. If the window is darker than the street, the glass ...cts as a mirror, reflecting everything ... the opposite side of the street. If ...e sun shines on the window and the ...pposite side of the street is dark, there will be no reflection of foreign objects in the picture, but sun shining on part of the window will throw the rest of it into such darkness that the camera will get nothing there.

A method often adopted with good success is as follows: Make a cloth screen of black cambric, sufficiently large to shut off all reflections when raised before the window. Fasten the two upper corners to poles, and when about to take the picture have two boys back of the camera. All reflections will be avoided, and a clear picture should result.

RETAILERS' WORK AT TORONTO.

In spite of display facilities not being of the best, the work of the retail florists at the Canadian National Exhibition, at Toronto, was of a high class. The entries of the retailers were good as a whole, and the exhibits of S. A. Frost, of Toronto, were particularly admired. Among his prize-winnings Mr. Frost was able to count the blue ribbons in the classes for decorated tables and for floral arrangements for tables. His exhibit in the latter class, which is shown in the illustration on this page, contained speciosum lilies, valley, ferns and gypsophila. For decorative effect pieces of coral and seaweed were used.



A non-competitive exhibit displayed by Mr. Frost that was exceedingly striking was a life-sized representation of two war-horses drawing a chariot and driven by a female figure representing Britannia. The horses were covered with magnolia leaves and the chariot with moss, and ferns and palms were used to set off the design, which is shown in one of the accompanying illustrations.

ROSES FOR OUTDOOR BEDDING.

Are there some varieties of roses which, when planted in the garden in April or May from 2½-inch pots, will produce good blooms through the summer and early fall? Can you give me the names of the best varieties for this purpose, and at what distance apart should they be placed? S. E. C.

There are a number of roses which will flower well the same season if planted out from pots. You will do better, however, to use stock from 3½-inch or 4-inch pots in preference to that from 2½-inch pots. Place the plants fifteen inches apart each way, and if you keep them well watered and mulched they will repay you for the extra pains taken. A few useful varieties for you to grow are: Clothilde Soupert, Maman Cochet, White Maman Cochet, Hermosa, Cecile Brunner, Gruss an Teplitz, Caroline Testout, Mrs. Cutbush, Orleans, Katherine Zeimet, Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Gustav Grunerwald, Dorothy Page Roberts, My Maryland, Prince de Bulgarie and other hybrid teas.

C. W.

TAUSENDSCHON FOR EASTER.

Please tell me just how to proceed to have pot roses blooming for Easter, 1915. I should like to try a batch of Tausendschon. C. M. S.

Tausendschon and other rambler roses can easily be had in bloom for Easter, 1915. If you have no plants, purchase some good, strong field-grown stock; pot them up as soon as received; stand them outdoors in an open, sunny position; protect the pots from severe frost and leave outside until at least the middle of November, to get the wood as well ripened as possible. Keep the soil somewhat on the dry side after the plants are established. Store them in a cool shed or cellar until wanted for forcing.

For Easter blooming, start them early in January in a temperature of 45 to 50 degrees. First cut out any dead and weak wood and bend down the remaining canes so that they will break better. Spray until the shoots are well started. A temperature 5 to 10 degrees higher can be given when the growth is fairly under way. Always avoid cold draughts, as they are likely to start mildew; also avoid a too arid condition, which would breed red spider. As the blooms open, give a somewhat lower temperature. Tausendschon can be forced into flower some days earlier than Dorothy Perkins, Hiawatha, Crimson Rambler and other Easter varieties. The so-called baby ramblers, however, will come along even more quickly than Tausendschon.

WINTERING HYBRID TEA ROSES.

I have a large bed of hybrid tea roses and would like to know if they can be kept in a coldframe over winter. I left them outdoors the last two winters with about eight inches of leaves and straw over them. The temperature goes as low as 12 to 16 degrees below zero and I have lost several. J. H.

Yes, your plan of wintering in a coldframe is an excellent one. Do not lift the plants until the ground seems likely to freeze up. Moisten the soil well about the roots when planting in and leave the sashes off until the sharp weather sets in. Then spread some perfectly dry leaves over the roses, cover with the sashes and the plants will winter perfectly. The frame should be ventilated during any mild spells right through the winter. C. W.

PLANTS MAKE POOR START.

I wish to ask your advice in regard to some roses that I have in raised benches. I am growing the Killarneys, Hillingdon and Shawyer. There are four and one-half inches of soil in the benches. I cut the plants back some after setting them out, which was done in August. They have made extremely little growth and the new growth consists entirely of blind wood. I feed them with sheep manure and bone meal, but I only started to heat the house in the last part of September. I am located, you will notice, in the vicinity of Rochester, N. Y. The plants are now twelve to fourteen inches high; should they be cut back more?

G. K.

The writer does not state whether these roses are young plants or old stock which had been rested and replanted. If they are old plants they were cut back quite sufficiently if cut to twelve or fourteen inches; eighteen inches would have been better if there is plenty of head room and if the plants had made good growth up to the time of resting.

When starting up old stock it is necessary that the plants receive a thorough watering, to saturate and settle all the soil around the roots; otherwise the plants are likely to make a short, weak growth and then either stand still or die. Plants in this condition should not receive any extra feeding, but should be well watered and then allowed to get fairly dry before the next good watering. When the plants start to make the second growth, a light feeding will be beneficial. Cattle manure in liquid form would give the best results, but sheep manure will do if not made too strong.

W. J. K.

PROPAGATING OUTDOOR ROSES

Will you please tell me how to propagate roses from cuttings taken from outdoor-grown plants? Is it necessary to put them in a hotbed at this season?

C. M. W.

Shoots three inches long containing one or two eyes can be used. Select these rather than robust wood; eyes which are not pronounced are best. Wood which has not flowered is good. Bottom heat is not necessary. Insert cuttings in sand or sandy loam. They will root slowly, but about all should be fit to pot by January if put in now in a close frame or a cool greenhouse. Somewhat earlier in the season, say in August, the hardy roses root well in a hotbed when the wood is about half matured. Ramblers and hybrid perpetuals can be rooted in this way as well as hybrid teas. C. W.

OWN-ROOT OR GRAFTED?

I noted the article entitled "Own-Root or Grafted?" in the Rose Department of The Review of September 3, and I wish to add my testimony to the evidence there given in favor of the grafted plants. This is the second year in which I have been specializing in the growing of roses in the vicinity of Boston, Mass., and I have been experimenting a little in the use of the two kinds of stock.

In the spring of this year, May 20, I planted outdoors 200 4-inch own-root roses of fifteen different varieties. The plants were all hybrid teas and were purchased from a prominent and reliable wholesale firm of rose growers. A little more than a month later, June 25, I set out 250 2¼-inch grafted roses, also from a well known firm. In this case the plants were also hybrid teas, but comprised only four distinct varieties. The conditions of soil and culture have been exactly the same in each case, as the plants are all growing side by side in nursery rows.

Of the 200 4-inch own-root plants, only two, of the variety Pres. Carnot, have made a record that is worthy of mention. The rest of them have made practically no growth. Evidently they were not suited to the soil. Of the 250 2¼-inch grafted plants the story is different; about seventy per cent of them are all that could be desired and some of them are of the same variety as the own-root stock. As to the choice between own-root and grafted plants, there will be no doubt as to my selection in the future, except with reference to two or three varieties.

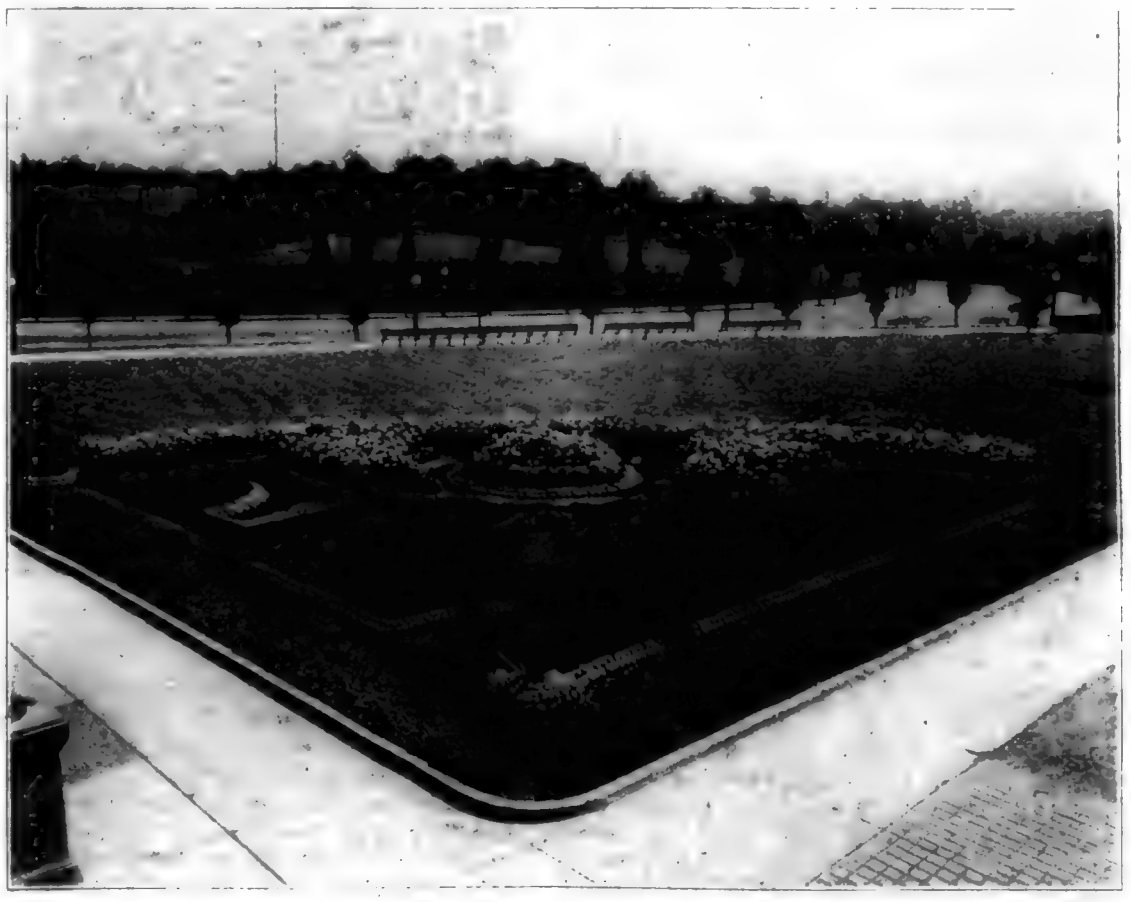
FORCING SPIRÆA GLADSTONE.

If Spiræa Gladstone is potted now, when will it come into bloom in a temperature of 48 to 50 degrees at night?

Carpet Beds at the Entrance to Phipps Conservatory, Schenley Park, Pittsburgh, Pa.

When should I plant it to have it in bloom for May 30, 1915, and what temperature should be kept? J. G.

There is no advantage in potting Spiræa Gladstone so early. Wait until the clumps have had a good freezing. It is useless to try to force it until this has been done. If you have no higher temperature than 48 to 50 degrees at night at command, it will not pay to attempt any early forcing of this plant. In a minimum of 60 degrees it needs nine or ten weeks to flower it for Easter. For Memorial day eight weeks will suffice, as the plants will naturally be starting about the end of March if under glass of any kind. A temperature of 50 to 55 degrees at night will bring it on for Memorial day. C. W.



GLIMPSES OF SCHENLEY PARK.

There are few kinds of evidence that are more convincing than a good photograph. Figures may not prove anything, for they often lie outrageously, in spite of the old adage to the contrary and in spite of the fact that columns of figures look so solemnly honest and innocent. But, though photographs, too, may sometimes be deceptive—in the "movies," in business and elsewhere—yet the camera is usually the most trustworthy of witnesses. Take notice, then, of the testimony that the camera bears, in the two accompanying pictures, to the excellence of the work done at Schenley park, the famous Pittsburgh public resort. Take notice of the delicate exactness and the general gracefulness of the planting, and say whether you can beat it.

The park, with its celebrated Phipps Conservatory, is under the supervision of George W. Burke, superintendent of the bureau of parks, and J. W. Jones, foreman of the conservatories. Mr. Burke has held his present position for eleven years. The Phipps Conservatory was opened to the public twenty-one years ago last September, and Mr. Jones has been connected with the institution for over twenty years.

Both of the illustrations are views of the grounds in front of the conservatory. In one of the pictures a part of the Carnegie Institute of Technology is shown in the background. In this case it was necessary to take the photograph from the roof of the conservatory, owing to a tree that obstructed the view. Mr. Jones states that the two carpet beds in the foreground contain a total of 32,000 plants, comprising 25,000 alternantheras in variety, 5,000 echeverias in variety, 500 Kleinia speciosa, 500 yellow cotyledons and 1,000 Geranium Mrs. Lawrence. The plants in the six corners of the beds, he says, are Euphorbia Havanensis.

One of these two carpet beds is more clearly shown in the foreground of the other picture, with which Mr. Jones has supplied the following description: "The length of the bed from point to point is forty-four feet; its greatest width is nineteen feet six inches. It is planted with Alternanthera paronychioides, A. brilliantissima, A. aurea, A. amabilis, A. amœna, A. versicolor and Kleinia speciosa, with Geranium Mrs. Lawrence at the back. It is bordered with echeverias. The scroll work and center of the bed are raised. The method of doing so is to use ordinary loam, sifted so as not to have any lumps or stones in it. This is made into a thick paste, or perhaps it has more of the consistency of dough. It is laid on the ground, molded into the desired shape and planted while soft. If left to dry out it would be too hard to plant and would crack."

Vegetable Forcing

POINTS ON LETTUCE CULTURE.

For heating a house 18x40 with hot water, is it not right to run the returns underneath the benches and the flow under the ridge? This house is intended for growing lettuce in early winter and for general purposes. What is the best fertilizer for lettuce soil? About what distance apart should the plants be set out? Do they require an abundance of water and much stirring or working? F. B. R.

Lettuces do not like any bottom heat, and for these and general crops you would do better to have the piping not under the benches, but hung along the sides of the house. Stable manure, half rotted to well rotted and carefully worked in, is the best fertilizer you can use. The distance apart will depend altogether on the varieties you are planning to grow. Of the forcing head lettuces, like May King, Arlington Tennis Ball, Hittinger's Belmont, etc., the plants should stand at least eight inches apart each way. Big Boston needs more room, 10x10 not being too much. Cos, or Romaine lettuce, being upright growing, can go twice as thick as Big Boston.

Lettuce does not require abundant watering; especially is this true in winter. When in solid beds a good soaking after planting out will sometimes carry the plants to maturity. You must use your own judgment in watering; the condition of the soil should be your guide; always choose a clear morning for the work. In the early stages of growth a little stirring up is an advantage. A night temperature of 45 to 50 degrees should be maintained. C. W.

ONION FORCING.

We have a small house in which we wish to grow onions and should like some information on how to raise them. Should they be grown from seed or sets? E. P. M. & S.

It will not pay to grow plants from seed. Sets are all right. Silver Skin and Danvers are the best. Use small sets, not over one-half inch in diameter. Plant four inches apart each way. While onions will endure more cold than radishes or lettuce, they succeed best in a temperature 10 degrees higher, 55 to 70 degrees suiting them. Give them the warmer end of your house for this reason. They must have a rich soil, containing one-third decayed manure, with some fine bone added. C. W.

TO FORCE RHUBARB.

I wish to force rhubarb this winter. Do you think it could be forced under benches three feet high? C. S. F.

To successfully force rhubarb you need as dark a place as possible; also a good heat. The rhubarb should be subjected to a sharp freezing before forcing. Provided you can box in and darken a place below your benches, there is no reason why you cannot force rhubarb successfully. Of course, in midwinter it needs a brisk heat to start it. C. W.

VEGETABLE GROWERS MEET.

Officers Elected.

The new officers of the Vegetable Growers' Association of America, elected at the meeting in Philadelphia last week, are:

President—M. L. Reutenick, of Cleveland, O.

Vice-president—Daniel P. Comly, of Bustleton, Pa.

Secretary—S. W. Severance, of Louisville, Ky.

Treasurer—E. A. Dunbar, of Ashtabula, O.

The next meeting probably will be held at Toronto, Ont.

A Lively Meeting.

This was the seventh annual convention and one of the best that has been held. The program was as follows:

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 6, 9:30 A. M.

Call to Order—President R. L. Watts, State College, Pa.
Welcome Addresses:
On behalf of the City of Philadelphia, the Hon. Rudolph Blankenburg, Mayor.
On behalf of the Philadelphia Vegetable Growers' Association, Howard W. Selby.
Response—C. W. Waid, East Lansing, Mich.
President's Annual Address.
Report of Secretary.
Report of Treasurer.
Reports of Standing Committees:
"Nomenclature and Varieties of Vegetables," Prof. W. R. Lazenby, Ohio State University, Columbus, O., Chairman.
"Weights and Measures," C. W. Waid, Michigan Agricultural College, East Lansing, Mich., Chairman.
"Seed Inspection and Certification," Dr. W. A. Orton, U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., Chairman.
"Transportation Rates," E. A. Dunbar, Ashtabula, O., Secretary.

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 6, 1:30 P. M.

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 6, 7:30 P. M.

Popular Open Meeting under auspices of Philadelphia Vegetable Growers' Association.
Subject for Discussion: "Standardization." Prof. Clyde L. King, University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, Pa., Leader.
Illustrated lecture on seeds, by Walter P. Stokes, Philadelphia.

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 7, 9:30 A. M.

Appointment of Committees.
Subject for Discussion: "Soil Problems for Vegetable Growers." Dr. Jacob G. Lipman, Director, New Jersey Agricultural Experiment Stations, New Brunswick, N. J., Leader.

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 7, 1:30 P. M.

Inspection Trip to South Jersey Truck Farms at Bridgeton, N. J.

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 7, 7:30 P. M.

Popular Open Meeting under auspices of Philadelphia Vegetable Growers' Association.
Subject for Discussion: "Marketing." Prof. Clyde L. King, University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, Pa., Leader. Discussion by E. T. Butterworth, Philadelphia Branch, National League of Commission Merchants, and others.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 8, 9:30 A. M.

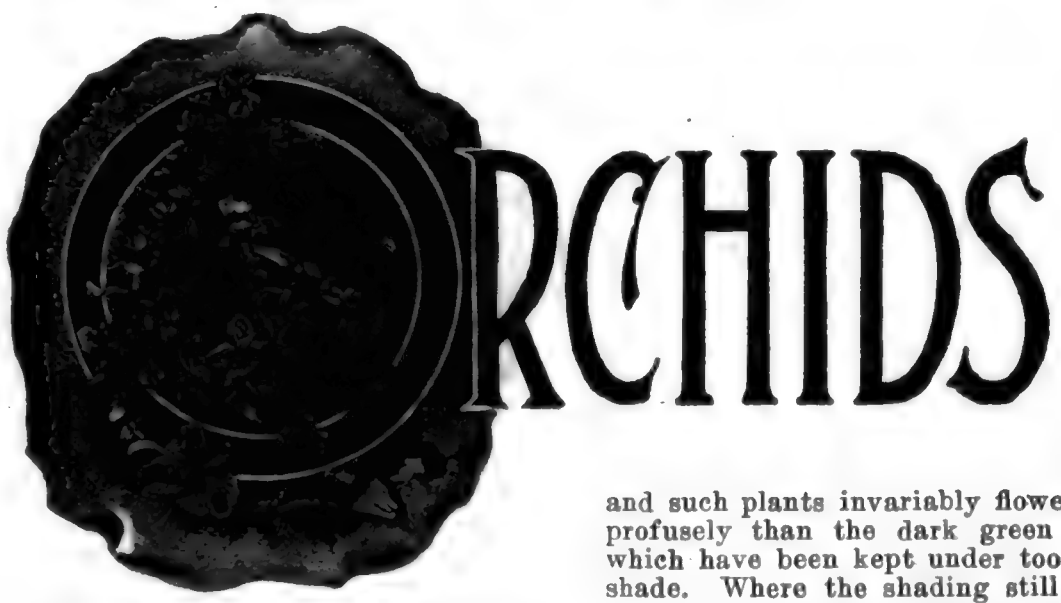
Subject for Discussion: "Coöperation." Prof. Paul Work, New York State College of Agriculture, Leader.
Addresses by—Prof. T. C. Johnson, Director, Virginia Truck Experiment Station, Norfolk, Va., and others.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 8, 1:30 P. M.

Report of Committee on Resolutions.
Report of Committee on Nominations.
Election of Officers.
Unfinished Business.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 8, 7:30 P. M.

Annual Banquet at the Hotel Walton.



FRIDAY, OCTOBER 9.

Inspection Trips to Philadelphia Wholesale and Retail Markets, to C. W. Skinner's Farm at Newfield, N. J., and to other points of interest.

The Exhibits.

The exhibitors were as follows:

Ball Mfg. Co., Glenside, Pa., Lightning celery bleacher.
Bateman Mfg. Co., Grenloch, N. J., Iron Age farm, orchard and garden implements.
Bowker Insecticide Co., Boston, insecticides and fungicides.
R. G. Bruner, Olinda, Ont., onion weeding machines.
W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia, seeds, dahlias and asters.
Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, seeds.
Lord & Burnham Co., Philadelphia, greenhouse designers and builders.
Kroeschell Bros. Co., Chicago, greenhouse boilers.
Keller Bros., Toledo, O., onion seeds and sets.
National Bundle Tyer Co., Blissfield, Mich., bundle tyers.
Skinner Irrigation Co., Troy, O., irrigation systems.
New York Stable Manure Co., Jersey City, N. J., fertilizers.
C. W. Skinner, Newfield, N. J., irrigation systems.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS.

Decreasing the Shade.

We have reached the middle of October, and, while a year ago we experienced long spells of damp, sunless weather, the reverse has been the rule this season; day after day for many weeks we have had cloudless skies, and the sun still shines with almost midsummer brilliancy. The bright skies are favorable to nearly all varieties of orchids, especially if the amount of shading has been much reduced; this applies particularly to cattleyas. Never mind if the stronger light makes the plants appear a trifle more yellow in hue; they will have hardier growths, and such plants invariably flower more profusely than the dark green plants which have been kept under too heavy shade. Where the shading still is too heavy, remove it at once. The best plan is to wash the glass clean; then, when it dries, give it a new but light coating of kerosene and white lead, unless perchance the fortunate cultivator has lath shades, which are the finest of all shades for orchids, as they can be removed entirely in sunless weather.

Cattleya Labiata.

A good many of the Cattleya labiata already are flowering, and others will come along and make a succession until December. At one time this cattleya was quite cheap; now it is advancing steadily in price, and the size of the plants diminishes as the value soars. This beautiful fall cattleya is indispensable at exhibitions, and every florist who has room for a few orchids should secure some. It is a free bloomer and a good grower; even unpromising looking plants will give a surprising crop of flowers. Keep the plants which are in flower somewhat drier at the root and stand them in a cool, well-shaded position. However, it is not good policy to leave the flowers of this, or, for that matter, any other orchid, too long on the plant, as it has a weakening effect.

An Orchid Group at the Chelsea Show, One of Frequent Displays that make the Flowers Popular in England.

Cattleya Percivaliana.

Compared with C. labiata and C. Trianæ, C. Percivaliana is a small variety, but it blooms immediately after labiata and is usually in nice flower for Christmas; this makes it specially useful. The sheaths on the plants will now be quite prominent. If the plants are standing some distance from the light, move them close to the glass.

Cattleya Trianæ.

Cattleya Trianæ is the standard winter cattleya. It is a robust grower, more so than C. labiata, but the flowers, on the whole, are hardly equal to those of the latter variety; nor is it so free flowering unless the plants are properly treated. I have seen many large, beautiful looking plants, with dark green bulbs and leaves, which would give only one or two flowers to the sheath, all because the cultivator persisted in keeping his plants too much shaded. No cattleya suffers so much from overshading as C. Trianæ. The growths are now well made up and the plants should have good light from now on. Do not wash off all the shading and give full sun at once, or the results will be disastrous to the plants; they must be inured to the light by degrees.

The Cattleya House.

On cold nights there is always a temptation to shut the ventilators tightly, but this is not a good policy. Cattleyas love fresh air and there is no good reason why they should not have it night and day, except during severe weather. If side ventilators here and there are provided below the front benches, they can be left open, except on extremely cold nights. Just as soon as cattleyas are subjected to a close, warm atmosphere, they start sending roots outside the pots or pans. Some growers believe this is a sign of vigor. As a matter of fact, it is one of the worst possible signs in cattleyas and lælias, as the bulbs on such plants will always be more or less starved and miserable. Keep the roots inside the receptacles, water with care, air freely and never coddle, and nearly all cattleyas will do well. Do the watering early in the morning. On bright days a spraying overhead will still be found beneficial.

Lælia Perrinii.

Lælia Perrinii, a Brazilian variety, now is coming into flower. It is a good grower. The bulbs carry solitary leaves and two or three of the deep crimson flowers are usually carried on each scape. This orchid is showy, of easy culture, and succeeds particularly well at the warm end of the cattleya house. It will be found valuable for use in fall orchid groups. It is inexpensive and anyone who can grow cattleyas will have no trouble with it.

Lælia Autumnalis.

Lælia autumnalis is one of the most beautiful of all Mexican lælias. In its native habitat it is found growing on bare rocks and on stunted trees in the full sun; in such positions it grows well and flowers amazingly. Many growers complain of their autumnalis running out in a few years. This is due to radically wrong treatment, and not to any inherent weakness of the species. Give it plenty of sun and it will even last as long as anceps, and flower just as freely. The flowers are even more beautiful than those of anceps. Owing to continued hostilities in Mexico, few of these orchids are now arriving in America. L. autumnalis is a fall bloomer; frequently its flowers are in good condition for Christmas.

Lælia Anceps.

If the plants of Lælia anceps have been grown in a light, airy structure through the summer, they should now be bristling with flower spikes. The cool end of the cattleya house is now a good place for these and other Mexican lælias. L. Gouldiana, supposed to be a natural hybrid between L. anceps and L. autumnalis, is a variety well worthy of culture. As many as eight or ten flowers are often carried on a stalk. The flowers are deep rose-purple and possess a delightful odor.

THE STATE OF THE ART.

Orchid growing in America is an infant industry compared to England, but of late there has been a wonderful increase. It has been a commercial development, however, as the increase in the number of plants grown for cut blooms for the market has far outstripped the number grown in the private greenhouses of the wealthy. Only one or two firms in America are able to put up displays of orchids in any way comparable to what the big English trade exhibitors do, possibly largely for the reason that the greater part of the demand in this country is for the few varieties of cattleyas used for cutting. What the English do in the way of staging quantity and variety is shown by the accompanying illustration, in which can be seen only a part of the group of Sander & Sons, of St. Albans, at the 1914 Chelsea show. But the appreciation of orchids in America was never so wide as now, and the future seems bright.

Medina, O.—All hands have been kept busy at Hammerschmidt & Clark's range. Half of the houses have been painted inside and out, new cypress benches have been put in and concrete cistern tops made. A new Giblin boiler has been installed in the boiler room, a Skinner irrigating system in the gardens and a National cash register in the office. This firm makes a specialty of plants in 2¼-inch pots, and relies on The Review's classified ads to move the stock. The greenhouses are now filled with stocks and snapdragons for benching after the mums are cut. This is their thirteenth year in business, the members of the firm having begun at the respective ages of 16 and 17.

Vegetable Forcing

POINTS ON LETTUCE CULTURE.

For heating a house 18x40 with hot water, is it not right to run the returns underneath the benches and the flow under the ridge? This house is intended for growing lettuce in early winter and for general purposes. What is the best fertilizer for lettuce soil? About what distance apart should the plants be set out? Do they require an abundance of water and much stirring or working? F. B. R.

Lettuces do not like any bottom heat, and for these and general crops you would do better to have the piping not under the benches, but hung along the sides of the house. Stable manure, half rotted to well rotted and carefully worked in, is the best fertilizer you can use. The distance apart will depend altogether on the varieties you are planning to grow. Of the forcing head lettuces, like May King, Arlington Tennis Ball, Hittinger's Belmont, etc., the plants should stand at least eight inches apart each way. Big Boston needs more room, 10x10 not being too much. Cos, or Romaine lettuce, being upright growing, can go twice as thick as Big Boston.

Lettuce does not require abundant watering; especially is this true in winter. When in solid beds a good soaking after planting out will sometimes carry the plants to maturity. You must use your own judgment in watering; the condition of the soil should be your guide; always choose a clear morning for the work. In the early stages of growth a little stirring up is an advantage. A night temperature of 45 to 50 degrees should be maintained. C. W.

ONION FORCING.

We have a small house in which we wish to grow onions and should like some information on how to raise them. Should they be grown from seed or sets? E. P. M. & S.

It will not pay to grow plants from seed. Sets are all right. Silver Skin and Danvers are the best. Use small sets, not over one-half inch in diameter. Plant four inches apart each way. While onions will endure more cold than radishes or lettuce, they succeed best in a temperature 10 degrees higher, 55 to 70 degrees suiting them. Give them the warmer end of your house for this reason. They must have a rich soil, containing one-third decayed manure, with some fine bone added. C. W.

TO FORCE RHUBARB.

I wish to force rhubarb this winter. Do you think it could be forced under benches three feet high? C. S. F.

To successfully force rhubarb you need as dark a place as possible; also a good heat. The rhubarb should be subjected to a sharp freezing before forcing. Provided you can box in and darken a place below your benches, there is no reason why you cannot force rhubarb successfully. Of course, in midwinter it needs a brisk heat to start it. C. W.

VEGETABLE GROWERS MEET.

Officers Elected.

The new officers of the Vegetable Growers' Association of America, elected at the meeting in Philadelphia last week, are:

President—M. L. Reutenick, of Cleveland, O.

Vice-president—Daniel P. Comly, of Bustleton, Pa.

Secretary—S. W. Severance, of Louisville, Ky.

Treasurer—E. A. Dunbar, of Ashtabula, O.

The next meeting probably will be held at Toronto, Ont.

A Lively Meeting.

This was the seventh annual convention and one of the best that has been held. The program was as follows:

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 6, 9:30 A. M.

Call to Order—President R. L. Watts, State College, Pa.
Welcome Addresses:
On behalf of the City of Philadelphia, the Hon. Rudolph Blankenburg, Mayor.
On behalf of the Philadelphia Vegetable Growers' Association, Howard W. Selby.
Response, C. W. Waid, East Lansing, Mich.
President's Annual Address.
Report of Secretary.
Report of Treasurer.
Reports of Standing Committees:
"Nomenclature and Varieties of Vegetables," Prof. W. R. Lazenby, Ohio State University, Columbus, O., Chairman.
"Weights and Measures," C. W. Waid, Michigan Agricultural College, East Lansing, Mich., Chairman.
"Seed Inspection and Certification," Dr. W. A. Orton, U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., Chairman.
"Transportation Rates," E. A. Dunbar, Ashtabula, O., Secretary.

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 6, 1:30 P. M.

Inspection Trip to Bustleton Market Gardens.

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 6, 7:30 P. M.

Popular Open Meeting under auspices of Philadelphia Vegetable Growers' Association.
Subject for Discussion: "Standardization." Prof. Clyde L. King, University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, Pa., Leader.
Illustrated lecture on seeds, by Walter P. Stokes, Philadelphia.

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 7, 9:30 A. M.

Appointment of Committees.
Subject for Discussion: "Soil Problems of Vegetable Growers." Dr. Jacob G. Lipman, Director, New Jersey Agricultural Experiment Stations, New Brunswick, N. J., Leader.

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 7, 1:30 P. M.

Inspection Trip to South Jersey Truck Farms at Bridgeton, N. J.

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 7, 7:30 P. M.

Popular Open Meeting under auspices of Philadelphia Vegetable Growers' Association.
Subject for Discussion: "Marketing." Prof. Clyde L. King, University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, Pa., Leader. Discussion by E. A. Butterworth, Philadelphia Branch, National League of Commission Merchants, and others.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 8, 9:30 A. M.

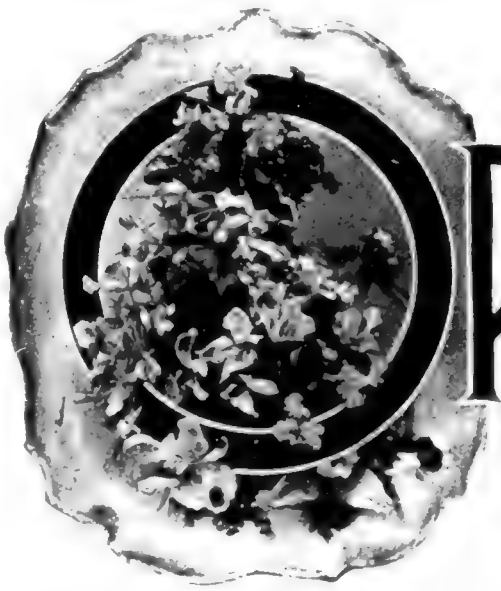
Subject for Discussion: "Coöperation." Prof. Paul Work, New York State College of Agriculture, Leader.
Addresses by—Prof. T. C. Johnson, Director Virginia Truck Experiment Station, Norfolk, Va., and others.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 8, 1:30 P. M.

Report of Committee on Resolutions.
Report of Committee on Nominations.
Election of Officers.
Unfinished Business.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 8, 7:30 P. M.

Annual Banquet at the Hotel Walton.



FRIDAY, OCTOBER 9.

Inspection Trips to Philadelphia Wholesale and Retail Markets, to C. W. Skinner's Farm, Newfield, N. J., and to other points of interest.

The Exhibits.

The exhibitors were as follows:

Ball Mfg. Co., Glenside, Pa., Lightning cold bleacher.
Bateman Mfg. Co., Grenloch, N. J., Iron Age farm, orchard and garden implements.
Bowker Insecticide Co., Boston, insecticides and fungicides.
R. G. Bruner, Olinda, Ont., onion weeding machines.
W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia, seeds, dahlias and asters.
Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, seeds.
Lord & Burnham Co., Philadelphia, greenhouse designers and builders.
Kroeschell Bros. Co., Chicago, greenhouse boilers.
Keller Bros., Toledo, O., onion seeds and sets.
National Bundle Tyer Co., Blissfield, Mich., bundle tyers.
Skinner Irrigation Co., Troy, O., irrigation systems.
New York Stable Manure Co., Jersey City, N. J., fertilizers.
C. W. Skinner, Newfield, N. J., irrigation systems.

ORCHIDS

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS.

Decreasing the Shade.

We have reached the middle of October, and, while a year ago we experienced long spells of damp, sunless weather, the reverse has been the rule this season; day after day for many weeks we have had cloudless skies, and the sun still shines with almost midsummer brilliancy. The bright skies are favorable to nearly all varieties of orchids, especially if the amount of shading has been much reduced; this applies particularly to cattleyas. Never mind if the stronger light makes the plants appear a trifle more yellow in hue; they will have hardier growths, and such plants invariably flower more profusely than the dark green plants which have been kept under too heavy shade. Where the shading still is too heavy, remove it at once. The best plan is to wash the glass clean; then when it dries, give it a new but light coating of kerosene and white lead, unless perchance the fortunate cultivator has lath shades, which are the finest of all shades for orchids, as they can be removed entirely in sunless weather.

Cattleya Labiata.

A good many of the Cattleya labiata already are flowering, and others will come along and make a succession until December. At one time this cattley was quite cheap; now it is advancing steadily in price, and the size of the plants diminishes as the value soars. This beautiful fall cattleya is indi

If side ventilators here and ... are provided below the front benches, they can be left open, except on extremely cold nights. Just as soon as cattleyas are subjected to a close, warm atmosphere, they start sending roots outside the pots or pans. Some growers believe this is a sign of vigor. As a matter of fact, it is one of the worst possible signs in cattleyas and lælias, as the bulbs on such plants will always be more or less starved and miserable. Keep the roots inside the receptacles, water with care, air freely and never coddle, and nearly all cattleyas will do well. Do the watering early in the morning. On bright days a spraying overhead will still be found beneficial.

Lælia Perrinii.

Lælia Perrinii, a Brazilian variety, now is coming into flower. It is a good grower. The bulbs carry solitary leaves and two or three of the deep crimson flowers are usually carried on each scape. This orchid is showy, of easy culture, and succeeds particularly well at the warm end of the cattleya house. It will be found valuable for use in fall orchid groups. It is inexpensive and anyone who can grow cattleyas will have no trouble with it.

Lælia Autumnalis.

Lælia autumnalis is one of the most beautiful of all Mexican lælias. In its native habitat it is found growing on bare rocks and on stunted trees in the full sun; in such positions it grows well and flowers amazingly. Many growers complain of their autumnalis running out in a few years. This is due to radically wrong treatment, and not to any inherent weakness of the species. Give it plenty of sun and it will even last as long as anceps, and flower just as freely. The flowers are even more beautiful than those of anceps. Owing to continued hostilities in Mexico, few of these orchids are now arriving in America. L. autumnalis is a fall bloomer; frequently its flowers are in good condition for Christmas.

Lælia Anceps.

If the plants of Lælia anceps have been grown in a light, airy structure through the summer, they should now be bristling with flower spikes. The cool end of the cattleya house is now a good place for these and other Mexican lælias. L. Gouldiana, supposed to be a natural hybrid between L. anceps and L. autumnalis, is a variety well worthy of culture. As many as eight or ten flowers are often carried on a stalk. The flowers are deep rose purple and possess a delightful odor.

AND STILL THEY COME.

In writing about other matters, readers and advertisers continue to commend the new magazine style Review. The improved appearance of the paper apparently has attracted even more attention than was expected. Here are a few of the latest comments:

The new Review is all right and the little classified ad is doing great work for us.—Joseph S. Merritt, The Maryland Flower Garden, Baltimore, Md.

We have noted the new "yaller jacket" covering recent issues of The Review and must congratulate you on its smart appearance.—Arthur T. Boddington, New York.

Congratulations on the improved appearance of The Review.—A. Washburn & Sons, Bloomington, Ill.

The Review is all right; we are entirely sold out; your paper surely gets results.—Smith Bros., Gasport, N. Y.

I also wish to congratulate you on the new arrangement of The Review and on the attractive cover.—Richard Gloede, Evanston, Ill.

It was quite an agreeable surprise to see General Review in his new distinctive uniform after so many years of faithful and useful service in the ranks.—C. Adams, Memphis, Tenn.

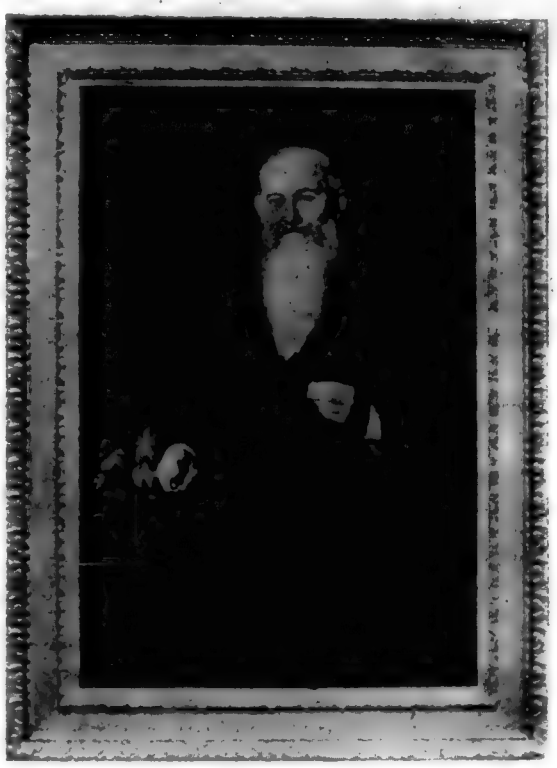
Congratulations on The Review's new fall dress; it is a big improvement in every respect. I approve the change in position for the Index to Advertisers, the Table of Contents and the Classified Department.—A. C. Bushnell, Pasadena, Cal.

The new form of The Review is neater in appearance, but I doubt if you could improve the contents.—C. H. Arnold, Springfield, Mass.

The new Review is greatly admired here.—New Haven Floral Co., Fort Wayne, Ind.

I must say the new cover on The Review, with date on the thick back edge, is a great improvement, but still greater is the new Index to Advertisers and Table of Contents; but greatest of all is placing the Classified Department at the back of the book. This certainly brings The Review up to the minute.—H. W. Koerner, Milwaukee, Wis.

POLLENIZING THE DAHLIA.



Please tell me when and how to pollenize dahlia blooms to make them set seed. I have tried many times and failed. Is it the small organ in the base of each petal that is to receive the pollen? I am entirely successful in seeding carnations, but with dahlias I am a rank failure. J. M.

The question here raised is a good deal easier to ask than to answer. It is no trouble to find those who can do the job in a manner quite satisfactory to themselves, but as to passing along the information so that it can be profitably used by another person, that is a program not yet completed, as far as my information goes. When Burbank admits that the best results with the dahlia come from selection, and when Bassett, of New Jersey, says that many of the best dahlias now on the market, those that have stood the test of time, cannot be traced to hand pollenizing, but have come by selection from promiscuous seedlings—when experts make such admissions, what is the use of trying to lay extravagant claims to creative powers through hand work? There is no desire, of course, to decry hand work, as it is the persistent, watchful fellow who brings out the good things.

Personally, I carried on a seven years' unsuccessful siege on the hand-made idea. Then I took two varieties, C. W. Bruton and A. D. Livoni, planted them in the field side by side, took good care of them and then turned them over to the tender mercies of the friendly bumblebee, and success crowned the effort. I used the seed saved from Bruton flowers, and out of over 2,000 seedlings kept for experiment there are a dozen I am willing to place alongside any on the market that have ever come under my observation. The dahlia is a difficult flower to work with, though the reason for the difficulty cannot be any better explained than can many of the other mysteries of nature.

After my seven years of patient work and experiment, the conclusion reached was: Select good, strong-growing self-colored varieties; plant them together; then take the seed from the variety carrying the best stem and flower, and let the pollenizing machinery be the bumblebees' ghead gear. Then select the best that grows.

CINERARIA FOR BEDDING.

What plant is commonly used for bedding in Belgium, or other European countries, which looks like a cineraria? Is it a cineraria of some kind?

J. F. C.

Cineraria maritima is used for bedding in quantities. It has silvery foliage and probably is the variety you want the name of. C. W.

RIPENING FRENCH HYDRANGEAS.

Should French hydrangeas be allowed to freeze and lose their leaves before they are brought indoors?

F. P. F. C.

It is not necessary for these to be frozen before forcing them, but keep them on the dry side and give them full sun, so that they can ripen up well. C. W.

WHITE MEDAL GOES ABROAD.

For the second time since the creation of this award the George Robert White medal of honor for horticultural achievement has been awarded to a foreigner. Sir Harry J. Veitch, head of the firm of James Veitch & Sons, Ltd., Chelsea, London, England, has been selected by the board of trustees of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society as the recipient of the 1914 medal, in recognition of his services in promoting the advancement of horticulture both in Great Britain and in the United States.

This medal, which was established in 1909 by George Robert White, of Boston, to be awarded annually by the Massachusetts Horticultural Society to one of those who had done the most in recent years toward the advancement of the interest in horticulture in its broadest sense, has been awarded in the five previous years since its establishment as follows:

1909—Prof. C. S. Sargent, director of the Arnold Arboretum.

1910—Jackson Thornton Dawson, of the Arnold Arboretum.

1911 — Victor Lemoine, Nancy, France.

1912—Michael H. Walsh, Woods Hole, Mass.

1913—Park Commission of the city of Rochester, N. Y.

On the other side of the water Sir Harry James Veitch has long been looked upon as one of the leaders in the horticultural world. In 1906 he received the Victoria Medal of Honor in Horticulture and two years later was made a Chevalier of the Order of Leopold by the late king of the Belgians. Not long since he received the distinction of knighthood. He has for some years been connected with the management of the Royal Horticultural Society, and when, in recognition of his services in this connection and in general, it was proposed about five years ago to have a portrait of him painted by subscription, to hang in the council room of that society, the funds came in so rapidly that there were not only enough for the painting of this portrait, but also sufficient besides to give each subscriber a photogravure of the portrait, to paint another portrait for presentation to the then Mrs. Veitch and to provide for a large presentation dinner. The portrait shown herewith is made from the oil painting which hangs in the council room of the Royal Horticultural Society, London.

He was born in 1840, the second son of James Veitch. At the age of 18 he went to France and spent some time in the employ of Vilmorin, Andrieux & Co. and Thibaut & Keteleer, and in 1865 became associated with his father, marrying in 1867. Upon the death of his father in 1869 and of his elder brother, John Gould Veitch, in 1870, he assumed the management of the business together with his younger brother, Arthur, who died a few years later. The renown which his concern has gained speaks better than words for his business ability, and his interest in and work for horticulture as a whole has won him wide esteem, of which the award of the White medal is the latest mark.

Milwaukee, Wis.—The Kummer Floral Co. has received a permit to erect a greenhouse, to cost $600.

BUSINESS EMBARRASSMENTS.

Albany, N. Y.—Edmund S. Hazeltine, who conducts a retail store on Central avenue, filed a petition in bankruptcy October 5, showing liabilities of $29,728 and assets of $4,665, consisting largely of mortgaged real estate in which he has an interest. The petition is the result of the creditors of a moving picture theater at Catskill, N. Y., in which Mr. Hazeltine was interested, filing liens amounting to about $10,000 on the theater, bankruptcy proceedings being considered necessary to conserve the assets. The florists' business of the petitioner is not involved, as all of the creditors are well secured.

Baltimore, Md.—Upon complaint of the B. F. Bond Paper Co. and H. Bayersdorrer & Co., an order was signed October 8 in the Circuit court requiring cause to be shown by October 19 why a receiver should not be appointed for the Forthuber Bros. Co., 1905 Greenmount avenue, with four greenhouses on the Belair road. It is alleged in the bill of complaint, filed through James J. Carmody and Harris A. Rome, attorneys, that the Forthuber Bros. Co. owes the complainants $16.92 and $145.12 and is insolvent.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Robert Kift, for many years in the retail florists' business on Chestnut street, has filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy. His troubles are said to have resulted from losses on property at 1821 Chestnut street acquired as an outside venture. Mr. Kift is one of the pleasantest of men and has a wide circle of friends in the trade who will hope to see his difficulties adjusted so that he can continue in business.

New York, N. Y.—Otto Burkard, who ran a flower store at 1402 Madison avenue, has made an assignment to Anna Burkard. He has been in business eight years.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y.—Olson Sherwood, a violet grower near here, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $6,364 and assets $3,650, consisting of greenhouses and building, $2,500, covered by a chattel mortgage of $3,750; horses and wagons, $850, and a lease, $300.

Kenosha, Wis.—The creditors' committee appointed to look into the affairs of the United Refrigerator & Ice Machine Co., which recently became embarrassed, at a meeting October 13 recommended that the merchandise creditors, with claims aggregating $88,000, accept sixty per cent, payable semiannually beginning July 1, 1915. If this is accepted the business will be continued under the direction of the committee. Many florists use apparatus from this concern.

DAHLIAS FOR CUTTING.

Will you give the names of some good dahlias for commercial use as cut flowers? I want good, large blooms in white, pink and yellow. I should prefer show and cactus varieties. P. J. G.

Good show dahlias for your purpose are: A. D. Livoni, soft pink; John Walker, pure white; Charles Lanier, deep yellow. In cactus sorts these are fine: Florence M. Stredwick, white; Snowdon, pure white; Pink Pearl, soft pink; Glory of Wilts, golden yellow; Lightship, clear yellow; Indomitable, rich rosy pink.

The decoratives are excellent for cutting. Good sorts are: Mme. Van den Dael, shell pink, shading to white at center; Jeanne Charmet, pretty color, pink edges shading to white, pale yellow margins; Innocence, pure white, not large but free; C. W. Bruton, bright yellow.

Peony-flowered dahlias are today more in favor than any others for cutting. A small selection you could grow are: Bertha von Suttner, salmon pink shading to pale yellow; H. Hornsveld, light salmon; Snow Queen, pure white; Sonnenblume, clear yellow; Queen Wilhelmina, pure white. C. W.

PLANT RECEIPTS HEAVY.

That azaleas and other plant stock from Belgium will not only be on hand for the coming season, but will also be as plentiful as in previous years, is borne out by the manifests of incoming vessels as well as by advices from abroad. Over 1,000 cases—1,060 to be exact—arrived on the steamer Ryndam from Rotterdam, which reached New York October 7. In this shipment were several large consignments and a number of small ones. They were as follows:

Consignee.	Cases.
Langeler, H.	34
Rölker, A., & Sons	106
Lunham & Moore	69
Lang, R. F.	7
Smith, C. F.	62
McHutchison & Co.	1
Hampton, J. W., Jr., & Co.	199
Maltus & Ware	560

WINTERING SANTOLINAS.

Will you please tell me how to care for santolinas during the winter and when to take cuttings for spring?

J. F. C.

Winter the plants on a shelf or a light, sunny bench in a temperature of 50 degrees at night. Take spring cuttings in February and March. This plant is a rapid grower. C. W.

London, England.—The council of the Royal Horticultural Society, over the signatures of the officers, has issued a full-page advertisement in gardening papers, the essence of which is: "Whilst rightly denying oneself all unnecessary luxuries, it is, in our opinion, an act of the highest patriotism to live our normal lives as far as possible, cultivating the same area of land, employing the same staff, transacting, in fact, all our usual business and household arrangements."

Leiden, Holland.—De Graaff Bros., Ltd., state: "A great part of the orders from England for Dutch bulbs has been canceled, and where that has not been done wholly the orders have been diminished to half or one-third or so. This, combined with no chance of sending anything to the continent of Europe, makes things extremely bad here. We do not believe people realize that the culture of bulbs in one part of Holland is the sole means of existence in that part."

Ghent, Belgium.—The nearest place near the nursery district of Ghent where actual fighting has taken place is Melle, some five miles distant from Ghent, famous for its begonia fields, and where among the hundred nurseries are those well known of Francois Spae, De Coster, Vercauteren, Bier & Ankessmit, Dekoker, etc. The nurseries did not suffer any real damage, the fighting not reaching quite so far, "but," says a nurseryman who was there at the time, "had it extended half a mile farther down the road to Ghent we should have to deplore an unequaled disaster for the nurserymen. I can assure you we felt rather uncomfortable to hear the artillery barking at so close a range, so that the ground trembled and set the glass in the greenhouses rattling."

Surrey, England.—Jackman & Son indicate that the shipments of Manetti stocks from this district to America will not go out on time as usual.

Ghent, Belgium.—Jean Van Acker, who yearly grows a million begonia bulbs and quantities of gloxinias, states that he expects to make his usual deliveries in spite of the armies.

Pinte Gand, Belgium.—Julien Authierens says the situation is fully as bad as the worst reports have made out. He has been unable to move any considerable part of his stock. Not one plant has been shipped to his customers in France, Russia and Germany. Transportation to America has been open and that country is the sole source of business.

Paris, France.—Philippe de Vilmorin, of Vilmorin-Andrieux & Co., is an officer and on active service. M. Cayeux, of the firm of Cayeux & Le Clerc, Paris seedsmen, also is an officer and on service. Emile Rosette, the well-known chrysanthemum grower of Caen, is in the field. Gaston Clement, another chrysanthemum specialist, is in the Garrison Artillery in one of the forts in the east of France. A. Truffaut's two sons and his two sons-in-law are in the field. M. Rivoire, of Lyons, secretary of the French Chrysanthemum Society, is an officer of Reserve; so, too, is M. Nomblot, of the firm of Nomblot-Bruneau & Co., of Paris, the newly appointed secretary of the National Horticultural Society of France. Henri Nonin, the only son of Aug. Nonin, the well-known chrysanthemum raiser, is a sergeant in a line regiment, is wounded and in hospital. M. Ripard, son-in-law of George Schneider, president of the French Horticultural Society of London, is with his regiment in the vicinity of Versailles.

REMOVING LIME FROM GLASS.

In putting the shading on our carnation houses, we were unable on one occasion to obtain slaked lime and had to slake it ourselves. Part of this shading was applied when a little too warm and we are experiencing a good deal of trouble in getting it off. I read an inquiry of the same nature as this several years ago, but the reply, I believe, was to the effect that there was no acid that would act on the lime without also acting on the putty and paint. Is there not something that would aid somewhat in loosening the lime and would not seriously injure the putty? I believe I will run a little Mastica down each side of the bar anyway, as the putty is not in good condition; so I think the acid could not do much harm. Please state, also, just what strength of solution would be safe. Most of the lime was removed a long time ago, but we want to make a good, clean job of it.

J. F. D.

It would not be advisable to use a mineral acid to loosen the lime, as it not only would ruin the paint and putty, but would also cause any iron or steel used in the construction of the roof to corrode. If an acid of any kind is to be applied, it would be well to use acetic acid, and there is no better form of this than in strong vinegar. Apply it with a brush, going over the glass two or three times if necessary, and the lime will be softened so that it can be readily scrubbed off. Another method would be to use a solution of caustic soda, one pound to two gallons of water, applying it in the same way. T.

CULTURE OF NERINES.

Will you kindly tell me how to handle nerines as cut flowers? What varieties are best for cutting for commercial purposes and what are the proper temperatures for day and night? Do you consider this a profitable undertaking if handled properly? W. M.

Nerines, or Guernsey lilies, would seem to have some commercial possibilities in America, although the price of the bulbs and the fact that they do not increase rapidly militate against their use to any considerable extent. One or two well known trade growers, particularly Thomas Roland, of Nahant, Mass., cultivate them quite successfully. On the estate of Prof. C. S. Sargent, at Brookline, Mass., the head gardener, Charles Sander, has a large collection of named varieties and thousands of seedlings, the latter including some beautiful colors.

Nerines are now in bloom. Their flowering period is from mid-September until mid-November, and occasionally later. Growth commences after the flower spikes finish and is made during the winter months. The plants require cool greenhouse treatment and flower particularly well in small pots. Single bulbs of the stronger varieties do well in 3-inch and 4-inch pots, and three bulbs of the larger and six of the smaller bulbed varieties are sufficient for a 5-inch pot. I have grown plants of Fothergilli major with ten to twelve spikes per pot in as large as 8-inch pots, but smaller pots usually are more satisfactory. Fibrous loam, one-fourth well decayed cow manure, with some sharp sand and powdered charcoal added, make a good potting material. A point to remember is that nerines never bloom well until thoroughly potbound and for this reason can go several years without repotting if top-dressings and liquid manure are supplied.

If a heated greenhouse cannot be spared for the plants in winter, they can be carried over in a frost-proof frame or pit. As soon as the leaves begin to turn yellow, usually early in May, gradually dry the plants off, and when all have died away lay the pots on their sides on a hot, sunny bank and leave there until the flower spikes appear in the fall. They need a thorough baking, or the bulbs will not bloom as they should. I have had the best success when I left the pots on a shelf in a greenhouse all summer or stood them under a double thickness of coldframe sashes. The better they are baked the better they will bloom.

As to varieties, far the best commercial variety is Fothergilli major, with vivid scarlet flowers. This possesses greater vigor than any other variety. N. Sarniensis, the true Guernsey lily, blooms somewhat later. It has brilliant crimson-scarlet flowers. N. corusca is a form of N. Sarniensis, of a bright scarlet color. N. flexuosa is pale pink; N. elegans, pink; N. Manselli, deep pink, and N. Novelty, pink. The pink varieties mostly bloom later than the scarlet ones and make smaller bulbs, but flower freely. I have had ten spikes on a 4-inch pot of N. Novelty. Only one or two nerines are offered in America. Elwes in England, C. G. van Tubergen, Jr., Haarlem, Holland; Hubert & Co., Lilley and others in Guernsey have specialized on these beautiful, fall-flowering plants, all the species of which come from South Africa. C. W.

PROPAGATING MOONVINES.

When should moonvine cuttings be started, and how? Or, is it better to start the plants from seed? I have taken both rough and smooth cuttings, at the joints and between the joints, and put them in sand, but they nearly all rot off. Would they root better in loam? J. V. A.

These can be propagated by grafting, cuttings or seeds. The last named method is the simplest. To insure good germination, soak the seeds a couple of hours in warm water before sowing, and also cut the ends from each seed. It is well to state, however, that seedlings are variable in type. This is the reason that many prefer to propagate from cuttings. C. W.

TIME TO PLANT ANEMONES.

Please tell me when to plant anemone bulbs in this Minnesota climate, and something about the culture of the plant.

C. P. N.

This is a rather large order, for the genus contains more than eighty species, all hardy perennials, and the question gives little that will permit of other than a general answer. The anemones are chiefly native of the north temperate and mountainous regions. The plants thrive best in fresh, rather rich, sandy loam, well drained; but most of the species will do well in any good garden soil. The tuberous species are suitable for hardy borders, while most of the others prefer a place in a rockery and some are partial to shady places. Anemone hortensis, A. coronaria, A. fulgens and others repay the little greenhouse care they require to produce winter blooms. They require essentially the same handling as tulips and hyacinths and usually are classed with bulbous plants. The season for both outdoor and indoor planting will directly influence the flowering season. Good seasons for outdoor planting are the months from September to December, and February and March. Tubers placed in pots in October bring a fine show of bloom in February or March.

MEALY BUG ON COLEUS.

What will kill mealy bug on coleus in a greenhouse without injury to the plants? The house contains a general stock of plants. S. E. C.

Use a good pressure of water from a nozzle on the hose to blow the bugs off. Throw away old plants and propagate young stock frequently. The older the plants, the worse is the bug likely to be. Gas will also kill mealy bug. Read the answers to other correspondents in The Review on how to use it. C. W.

WINTERING CANTERBURY BELLS.

What is the proper treatment for campanulas? They are now indoors in 4-inch pots. We do not have hard frosts until after the first of the year in this Kansas climate. F. P. F. C.

Your Canterbury bells would be much better outdoors for a month or two longer in your climate. Then, before sharp frost comes, stand the pots in a coldframe and give a coating of perfectly dry leaves, later placing the sashes over them and ventilating at all favorable opportunities. It is better not to start any of the plants in heat before January. If for outdoor use, leave them in the frames right along.

LANCASTER, PA.

The early mums are making their appearance. The stores are showing fine Golden Glow, Smith's Advance and McNiece. Chrysolora will be ready by the end of the week. Some carnations of good quality also are to be seen.

At the store of Rudolph Nagel, mums are in fine shape. Unaka, with which he was so successful last season, is again a favorite with him. Many of the new varieties are well advanced. Alice Salomon and Salomon's Gold promise to be fine.

At the store of H. D. Rohrer Heston's White, an English variety, is showing some fine blooms and is considered an excellent early white mum.

George G. Goldbach is cutting fine McNiece mums.

Lancaster county held its agricultural fair last week. B. F. Barr & Co had a display that attracted much attention. Mrs. Charles F. Edgar was in charge. G. W. Park, of La Park, exhibited ferns, palms, etc. The amateur exhibition of dahlias, cosmos and general garden flowers was quite good. In trees and shrubbery J. G. Harrison & Sons, of Berlin, Md., and B. F. Barr & Co., had exhibits.

Charles M. Weaver, of Ronks, Pa., is the owner of a fine new Studebaker car.

H. A. Schroyer has been showing dahlias of exceptional merit. Mr.

Schroyer was one of the judges at the York fair this week, a position he has filled with ability for many years.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The whole week has passed without rain and with a summer temperature. The supply of roses is practically unlimited, and in over twenty varieties. There are plenty of American Beauties and prices are lower than a week ago. The same may be said of all the teas, and the new varieties show no special strength or wide demand. Chrysanthemums are already here in all sizes and colors and, from this time on until Thanksgiving, will dominate the wholesale market. Some of the finest arrivals commanded as high as $4 per dozen. The prospect is for a tremendous total of mums this season.

Some beautiful dahlias arrived this week; nothing finer in their line has reached the New York market. The season is about over and to local growers it has been unprofitable because of the long drought.

Carnations fell from their lofty perch, the finest barely holding at $3 per hundred and splendid stock selling at $20 per thousand. Valley has not changed. Longiflorum lilies are back again to $8 per hundred and under. Cosmos is poor this season. Violets still are of mediocre size and quality. As to orchids, there has been no advance from the low figures of recent weeks.

Still there remains a vein of optimism in all branches of the cut flower trade and many of the retailers predict a splendid season.

Club Meeting.

The regular meeting of the New York Florists' Club was held in the Grand Opera House building, October 12. President Wm. H. Duckham opened the meeting promptly at 8 o'clock.

W. E. Marshall, chairman of the outing committee, made a final report on the affair held at Glen Island July 1. It was noted with much satisfaction that the receipts and expenditures balanced, and the committee was discharged with the thanks of the club.

Joseph G. Lane, 11 West Thirty-second street, was elected to membership. The following were nominated for election at the next meeting: James Fraser, Morristown, N. J.; P. W. Popp, Mamaroneck, N. Y.; Samuel Batcheller, Mamaroneck, N. Y.

Announcement was made, with regret, of the death of Miss Lillian Shaw, daughter of J. Austin Shaw, Brooklyn, and a committee consisting of W. F. Sheridan, Emil Schloss and J. R. Lewis was appointed to prepare suitable resolutions.

After recess Alex. Guttman, for the entertainment committee, moved that the November meeting be turned into the annual ladies' night, and it was so voted.

J. A. Manda, chairman of the committee on awards, then reported as follows:

Wm. A. Finger, of Hicksville, N. Y., shows a vase of Dahlias Kalif, Duchess of Brunswick and Golden Gate.

R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co., of White Marsh, Md., has a large vase of Dahlias Geisha, Golden West, Souv. de G. Doazon, Golden Gate, Hon. R. L. Borden, Beloit. This exhibit is given a vote of thanks.

C. H. Totty, Madison, N. J., exhibits a collection of early flowering French chrysanthemums, including Pomponette, Marie Dufour, Eden, Red Riding Hood, Debutante, Bronze Goacher, Normandie, A. Barham and Chas. Jolly, pink. A fine new white Japanese exhibition variety, Antigore, is awarded a certificate of merit. Mr. Totty also shows a vase of White Shawyer, a sport of Mrs. Geo. Shawyer rose, of the same habit of growth as the parent, conforming in all respects thereto. This is given a preliminary certificate.

J. L. Childs, Flowerfield, L. I., shows a vase of the new Celosia Wool Flower, which is given a vote of thanks.

W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J., displays a fine collection of dahlias, large blooms on long stems, including the following varieties: Perfection, Fire Flame, Minnie, Veronica Manda, Josef Manda, Sr., all of which are given a preliminary certificate; Albert Manda, which the committee desires to see again, and Resplendens, Tango, Bohemia, Garnet, Mrs. Gertrude Manda, Mrs. A. I. Du Pont, Excelsa, Frank Manda and Jos. Ehrlich.

Pres. Duckham then announced that R. Vincent, Jr., of White Marsh, Md., would deliver an illustrated lecture on "Scotland." L. W. C. Tuthill, chairman of the essay committee, escorted Mr. Vincent to the platform, where he was warmly greeted. Mr. Vincent asked that allowance be made for the fact that an Englishman was being called on to give a Scotch lecture, but he did not pretend to give the Scotch pronunciation. In his preliminary remarks he dwelt on the Wm. R. Smith memorial, and asked that generous support be given that fund, with which it was proposed to establish, not a stone monument, but something on the lines of Kew Gardens, where young men as well as old can receive a thorough gardener's education. Mr. Vincent related some anecdotes in connection with the late Wm. R. Smith and then passed to his lecture proper. Some time ago, journeying through Scotland, he visited places historically and horticulturally of interest, and secured a number of fine slides, with which he illustrated his talk. The lecture was interspersed with bits of verse from Burns, little historical stories and legends and other entertaining features. The club certified its appreciation by extending a rising vote of thanks to Mr. Vincent for his lecture.

In Brooklyn.

Brooklyn wholesale trade seems to be in a healthful condition, and none of the cut flower merchants make complaint. Wm. H. Kuebler has just completed many useful improvements, including a new icebox, new office and an enlarged store. The supply department reports a successful year.

Bonnet & Blake are in shipshape for the season. Carnations from A. Demeusy and roses from A. N. Pierson already are arriving in considerable quantity. Asters still come from the west.

The Brooklyn Wholesale Cut Flower Market, with Joseph Levy at the helm, is building up a good trade. Mrs. Levy is the firm's bookkeeper and floral artist.

George Crawbuck, manager for the Greater New York Florists' Association, says he thinks the coming winter will be the best since the century began.

Harry Crawbuck is still the green goods man, and the only one, of the City of Churches.

A. Hanig is again on the staff of C. C. Trepel as purchasing agent.

Various Notes.

The auction sales of bulbs, plants, nursery stock, boxwood, etc., continue every Tuesday and Friday.

Maurice Fuld lectured on "Roses" last week at Huntington, L. I.

The Retail Florists' Association of New York has come to life and last week, at its meeting of reorganization, the new officers were elected. Such men as Schling, Bowe and Stumpp give it prestige and practical importance.

John Kervan recently returned from a visit to Florida, where the head of the firm spends his winters.

Wm. Kessler's window has its many novelties ingeniously arranged afresh every day.

M. A. Bowe has been busy with funeral work. Boston's pennant winning detracted from his usual baseball work of the last three years.

Max Schling reports the usual busy days with October weddings.

J. Austin Shaw.

Thomas Young, who now occupies the store at 500 Fifth avenue, has taken a lease of the store at 541 Fifth avenue, southeast corner of Forty-fifth street, in the Hotel Lorraine. The lease is for a term of years, at a rental of close to $8,000 a year.

East Greenwich, R. I.—James Hay, for twenty-five years a gardener for the Goddards on Potowomut Neck, is just completing a greenhouse, 32x100 feet, on his property on Eldredge avenue.

Des Moines, Ia.—The contract for the new greenhouse in Union park has been awarded by the city council to the Lord & Burnham Co. The original bid of $5,875 was reduced to $5,662 by minor changes in the manner of construction before the contract was accepted.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

The Market.

The weather is warm, and the nurserymen are cutting large quantities of extra fine dahlias. Roses are plentiful, with a light call. Carnations are abundant, but have short stems.

Club Meeting.

The Minneapolis Florists' Club met at the store of Rice Bros. Tuesday evening, October 6, with thirty members present. After the routine business was disposed of, the election of officers took place. W. Desmond declined reëlection to the presidency after three years of service, and John Taylor was unanimously elected to succeed him. Vice-president Max Kaiser was not present, but had stated previously that he would decline reëlection, and R. Latham was elected to his place unanimously. Secretary Taylor's office is well filled by W. Vasatka, and Treasurer A. S. Rice is succeeded by E. Meyers.

One of Theodore Wirth's men gave an interesting talk on outdoor roses, showing some fine blooms. The bowling team is doing finely, Mr. Farley having the highest average.

Various Notes.

Miss H. B. Whitted has closed the shop in the Radisson hotel and is devoting her efforts to the other two stores.

The stock at the greenhouses of the L. S. Donaldson Co. is in the best of condition.

Wm. F. Holmes is getting plenty of wedding work. In one order the maid of honor had a blue silk muff covered with valley and the bridesmaids had pink silk muffs covered with valley.

C. B. Livingston will leave the L. S. Donaldson Co. and take charge of the flower department of the Holman-Gerdes Co. Mr. Tropel has been engaged to fill the place of Mr. Livingston at Donaldson's.

L. Mathers, who has been with Holm & Olson, of St. Paul, is reported to have gone to Fargo, N. D.

The florists in the twin cities are wishing for a good frost in the near future.

Mrs. Desmond's bowling will beat last year's record.

The Florists' Club was given a trust fund of $1,000, the interest of which is to be used to promote future flower shows or educational work conducted by the club. Temporary loans can be made also. This money was left after the S. A. F. committee paid all expenses, and it is invested with the Minnesota Loan & Trust Co. Mr. Wirth deserves the credit given him. He has put much time and thought to clearing up the affairs of the S. A. F. convention. C. B. L.

DETROIT, MICH.

The Market.

Trade conditions remain about the same as reported last week. The weather has been altogether too fine outdoors. What we want is some cool, crisp weather to serve as a stimulus to trade.

Stock of every description is good. Mums are now arriving in large quantities and find a ready welcome among the flower buyers. Dahlias are still available at the present writing in all their beautiful colors and variety of shapes. Carnations are of good quality for the season and sell readily for ordinary purposes.

Various Notes.

Thursday afternoon, October 8, a number of the members of the Detroit Florists' Club visited the Beard Bros. establishment and then the dahlia farm of C. E. White, at Grosse Isle. In the party were A. Miller, of Chicago, and Sam Seligman, of Sprinkleproof fame. It was a rainy day, but this did not dampen Sammy's spirits in the least. Albert Pochelon, E. A. Fetters, Chas. Warncke and Michael Bloy kindly supplied the means of locomotion with their large touring cars. The Beard Bros. place was found to be in the pink of condition and Sidney Beard and Mr. Shank, who are now the proprietors, received the congratulations of the visitors. Mr. White has a beautiful collection of cactus dahlias of good commercial value.

John Breitmeyer's Sons had a dahlia exhibition the latter part of last week, displaying thousands of this beautiful fall flower. The blooms were from the dahlia farms of C. W. White, at Grosse Isle, and J. Baumann, of Birmingham, Mich.

Both Breitmeyer's Sons and E. A. Fetters have beautiful displays of artificial flowers in their windows this week. These are combined with real flowers and plants, making them still more effective. The Bemb Floral Co. is making a specialty of bulbs at present and sales are heavy in this line. Sullivan's window has proved most attractive lately, with a fine display of home-grown dahlias. B. Schroeter is showing a fine line of ferns and crotons in the windows.

Norman Sullivan has had his store entirely redecorated, the color scheme being white and Copenhagen blue, and it is indeed a most effective combination.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Detroit Florists' Club held the first meeting of the season last Friday afternoon, October 9. Mrs. Chas. H. Plumb acts as president until the vacancy caused by the death of Mrs. Fetters can be filled. The ladies visited the Van Leuvan Browne home for crippled children and it was decided to give another dancing party early next month as a means of raising more money to help defray the expenses of this institution.

Albert Stahelin spent last week in the east, visiting various establishments of interest to a grower. H. S

Mainly About People

Youngstown, O.—W. Allen Bartels has retired from the florists' business.

Memphis, Tenn.—Mrs. E. J. Robb is starting in business as a retail florist at 64 North Main street.

Topeka, Kan.—J. M. Kessler has leased his greenhouses to Kline & Lamont, of Hutchinson, Kan.

Port Huron, Mich.—Matthias Ullenbruch is back from Europe with war stories, having been in Coblenz at the time of the opening of hostilities.

Fond du Lac, Wis.—Jacob Schmid, who not long ago purchased the Fourth Street Greenhouses, formerly run by L. E. Sawicke, has sold the business and left the city.

Terre Haute, Ind.—The Tribune recently printed in a Sunday issue a three-column illustrated sketch of J. W. Davis and his big greenhouse enterprise. The town has welcomed Mr. Davis with open arms.

Greenfield, Mich.—Thomas F. Browne is sending to market in Detroit a bronze sport of Chrysanthemum Unaka that is meeting with great favor among the retailers. It is Mr. Browne's intention to disseminate the variety next season.

Bristol, R. I.—William Flynn, gardener for former Governor A. O. Bourn, at Seven Oaks, struck his head against an iron spindle while at work recently and received a painful wound, the end of the spindle penetrating the flesh near the left eye.

New Rochelle, N. Y.—F. C. Hitchcock has leased the Dickinson Greenhouse for a term of five years.

Fort Smith, Ark.—George Rye is in charge of the flower department of the Arkansas-Oklahoma interstate fair, which opened in this city October 12.

Farmington, Mich.—Albert B. Havrane, formerly with the Smithfield Greenhouses, at Walkerville, Ont., has purchased the Farmington Greenhouses, of which E. H. Steele was manager.

Wichita, Kan.—Harry S. Mueller, who graduated from the University of Illinois last spring, is now in charge of the greenhouses and landscape department of the business of his father, Charles P. Mueller.

Trinidad, Colo.—R. Floyd Barker, who is connected with the botanical garden at Buffalo, N. Y., is visiting his brother, L. Sewell Barker, superintendent for the Trinidad Floral Co. He says that for the size of the city, the Trinidad Floral Co. has one of the best establishments in the state. Stock at this range is fine this year and business is flourishing.

Wallington, N. J.—By the will of Peter J. Krug, whose death was reported in The Review for September 24, his estate, estimated to be worth between $250,000 and $300,000 and consisting of property in this vicinity, is left to his widow during her life. At her death it is to be divided among surviving children. Mrs. Krug and her son, Arthur E. Krug, are made executrix and executor of the estate

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

Dahlias and cosmos last week completely killed the sale of all indoor-grown flowers. The warm weather, following the cool spell of the week before, brought these and outdoor chrysanthemums into bloom in uncountable quantities. As a result, the refuse heaps are piled high with roses and other flowers. Mock roses have been exceptionally fine, but are somewhat off color, due to climatic conditions. Regardless of this fact, they are the best pink roses on the market at the present time. Russell, Hadley, Shawyer and Sunburst roses are also good, and it is predicted that Sunburst will have a fine run during the coming season. The bottom seems to have dropped out of the valley market, for early in the week there was more than enough to fill all demands, and now only the best brings $5 per hundred. Carnations are coming in more plentifully and in much better quality; stems are stiffer and blooms are much larger. Orchids are somewhat cheaper than they have been and cattleyas can be had at $25 per hundred. Sweet peas made their appearance during the week, and yellow marguerites are among the new arrivals.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club of Washington decided that it would be inadvisable to hold a flower show this year at the regular monthly meeting of the club, at 1214 F street, northwest, last week. The project met with little enthusiasm among the storemen and growers. The summer has been a quiet one and many are taking a pessimistic view of the coming season.

A general discussion on the Panama-Pacific exposition followed the reading of a letter from the local agent of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, quoting rates between this city and San Francisco. Although this is far in the future, it was believed that a car could be made up of florists from this city, Baltimore and Philadelphia, to join those from other cities at Chicago.

Frank H. Bailey and C. A. Jackson were elected to membership.

It was ordered that a vote of thanks be extended to Richard Vincent, Jr., of White Marsh, Md., for his courtesy to the members who attended his annual canna and dahlia show. Mr. Gude, speaking of the show, expressed a belief that it was the best he had ever seen.

R. L. Jenkins, vice-president, presided, in the absence from the city of the president, George H. Cooke.

Various Notes.

George Field is cutting some good cattleyas and his house of cypripediums that will soon come into bloom promises a good cut. His houses of cattleyas that are due to come in about Christmas also look good. Mr. Field is also shipping some good roses to this market.

Among the visitors last week were Charles E. Meehan, of the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; P. Van Melle, of Bobbink & Atkins, Rutherford, N. J.; James W. Heacock, with Joseph Heacock, Wyncote, Pa., and Joseph Goudy, with H. A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, Pa.

Robert Berberich's Sons held an anniversary sale last week, giving to each purchaser of a pair of ladies' shoes a box of candy and bouquet of American Beauty or other roses. The roses were furnished by Gude Bros. Co. It is estimated that 2,000 bouquets were given away during the week; each bouquet contained three or more roses.

Notice has been given by William P. Richards, assessor for the District of Columbia, that the licenses issued by him to florists expire October 31, and all persons desiring to continue in that business must promptly renew their licenses. The cost of these is $15.

THE MEN YOU MEET

JOHN C. GRACEY.

SOME years ago there was a young man in the flower shop of Goff & Maggi, at 2032 Columbia avenue, Philadelphia, who showed unusual promise. He was energetic and capable, taking great interest in his work. Later this young man attracted the attention of his townsmen by taking over the business of his former employers. This field proved insufficient, so with another young man he presently bought out Mrs. John Plender's flower shop on Twenty-sixth street above Girard avenue. Later still he bought out his partner's interest, running both stores himself. This was John C. Gracey. He now is president of the Retail Florists' Association, vice-president of the Philadelphia Florists' Club and a successful business man. His hobby is automobiles. He has four, three for his business and one to carry himself flying all over the city when need be. He believes, with automobiles as with flowers, that you must do things yourself in order to succeed.

GLADIOLI A SECOND YEAR.

I have a fine lot of gladiolus bulbs which I had in greenhouse benches, but which refused to bloom. Would it do to try them again this year? They are perfectly dry and have been out of the benches in a dry place since July 15. I usually take bulbs that I have used in the greenhouse and plant them out in the field the following year, but as these look so well and have not flowered, I thought I would ask your advice. B. R. L.

The probable reason that your gladioli did not flower under glass was too early planting, before the bulbs had a sufficient rest. I have tried gladioli, both the large-flowered and nanus types, a second season under glass, but the results in every case were disappointing, in spite of the fact that the bulbs were larger than in the preceding year, and well ripened. Personally I should prefer buying new bulbs for indoors and planting your others outside. C. W.

Chambersburg, Pa.—Daniel S. Zearfoss, who has been engaged in growing vegetables on his property at South and Fourth streets for some years, recently erected a greenhouse, 22x80 feet, on Curtin avenue, to be used for vegetables.

Terre Haute, Ind.—The Tribune recently printed in a Sunday issue a three-column illustrated sketch of J. W. Davis and his big greenhouse enterprise. The town has welcomed Mr. Davis with open arms.

Greenfield, Mich.—Thomas F. Browne is sending to market in Detroit a bronze sport of Chrysanthemum Unaka that is meeting with great favor among the retailers. It is Mr. Browne's intention to disseminate the variety next season.

Bristol, R. I.—William Flynn, gardener for former Governor A. O. Bourn, at Seven Oaks, struck his head against an iron spindle while at work recently and received a painful wound, the end of the spindle penetrating the flesh near the left eye.

New Rochelle, N. Y.—F. C. Hecock has leased the Dickinson Greenhouse for a term of five years.

Fort Smith, Ark.—George Rye in charge of the flower department of the Arkansas-Oklahoma interstate fair which opened in this city October

Farmington, Mich.—Albert B. Farane, formerly with the Smith Greenhouses, at Walkerville, Ont., has purchased the Farmington Greenhouses of which E. H. Steele was manager

Wichita, Kan.—Harry S. Mueller, graduated from the University of Illinois last spring, is now in charge of the greenhouses and landscape department of the business of his father, Charles P. Mueller.

Trinidad, Colo.—R. Floyd Barker, who is connected with the botanical garden at Buffalo, N. Y., is visiting his brother, L. Sewell Barker, superintendent for the Trinidad Floral Co. He says that for the size of the city the Trinidad Floral Co. has one of the best establishments in the state. Stock on this range is fine this year and business is flourishing.

Wallington, N. J.—By the will of Peter J. Krug, whose death was reported in The Review for September 24, his estate, estimated to be worth between $250,000 and $300,000, consisting of property in this vicinity, is left to his widow during her life. At her death it is to be divided among surviving children. Mrs. Krug and her son, Arthur E. Krug, are named executrix and executor of the estate

Notice has been given by William P. Richards, assessor for the District of Columbia, that the licenses issued by him to florists expire October 31, and all persons desiring to continue in that business must promptly renew their licenses. The cost of these is $15.

GLADIOLI A SECOND YEAR.

I have a fine lot of gladiolus bulbs which I had in greenhouse benches, but which refused to bloom. Would it do to try them again this year? They are perfectly dry and have been out of the benches in a dry place since July 15. I usually take bulbs that I have used in the greenhouse and plant them out in the field the following year, but as these look so well and have not flowered, I thought I would ask your advice. B. R. L.

The probable reason that your gladioli did not flower under glass was too early planting, before the bulbs had a sufficient rest. I have tried gladioli, both the large flowered and nanus types, a second season under glass, but the results in every case were disappointing, in spite of the fact that the bulbs were larger than in the preceding year, and well ripened. Personally I should prefer buying new bulbs for indoors and planting your others outside. C. W.

Chambersburg, Pa. Daniel S. Zearfoss, who has been engaged in growing vegetables on his property at South and Fourth streets for some years, recently erected a greenhouse, 22x80 feet, on Curtin avenue, to be used for vegetables

JOHN C. GRACEY.

SOME years ago there was a young man in the flower shop of Goff & Maggi, at 2032 Columbia avenue, Philadelphia, who showed unusual promise. He was energetic and capable, taking great interest in his work. Later this young man attracted the attention of his townsmen by taking over the business of his former employers. This field proved insufficient, so with another young man he presently bought out Mrs. John Plender's flower shop on Twenty sixth street above Girard avenue. Later still he bought out his partner's interest, running both stores himself. This was John C. Gracey. He now is president of the Retail Florists' Association, vice-president of the Philadelphia Florists' Club and a successful business man. His hobby is automobiles. He has four, three for his business and one to carry himself flying all over the city when need be. He believes, with automobiles as with flowers, that you must do things yourself in order to succeed

OBITUARY

W. L. Palinsky.

William L. Palinsky, one of the oldest florists in Chicago, died October 10 of quick consumption, at his home at 2867 Palmer street.

Mr. Palinsky was born in the little town of Pomell, Germany, May 18, 1863. Coming to America, he located at Chicago when 20 years of age, finding his first employment with August Dressel. Being more than ordinarily progressive, in a few months he was ready to make a start for himself and secured property on Palmer street, where he has been in business for thirty years. At the time of his start the location was open prairie, but in the course of time it became a populous city neighborhood. The business grew with the population and Mr. Palinsky has for many years handled a large volume of trade, both wholesale and retail, in the latter branch having the assistance of his daughter, Sadie, who will continue the business.

Mr. Palinsky was married August 22, 1884. His bride was Mary Natzke, who survives him with five children: Milton, Sadie and Marian Palinsky, Mrs. Martha Mead and Mrs. Bernie Wallace. The daughters, as well as their father, are quite widely known in the trade, as the party of five attended many conventions.

The funeral was held October 13 from the residence and from the Evangelican Lutheran church at Leavitt street and Haddon avenue, with interment in Waldheim cemetery. There was a large attendance of friends of the family and many members of the trade were present. Many flowers were sent by members of the trade.

Alvinza G. Tillinghast.

Alvinza G. Tillinghast, of La Conner, Wash., dropped dead in front of his store in La Conner at noon October 1. He was nearly 70 years old and leaves a widow and one son, Francis P. Tillinghast.

In 1872 he went to Padilla, Wash., and took a preëmption claim in company with E. A. Sisson and R. E. Whitney. They obtained 500 acres, which the three together diked, drained and brought into a state of cultivation. For about a decade Mr. Tillinghast raised oats on this farm.

In 1883 he began growing cabbage seed, establishing what are now widely known as the Puget Sound Seed Gardens.

In 1890 he moved his seed store to La Conner, where it has been ever since.

W. W. McIntyre.

W. W. McIntyre, son of W. T. McIntyre, of Toronto, Ont., died suddenly at Brampton, Ont., on Thursday morning, October 8. He was but 38 years of age, and only as far back as last spring he removed to Brampton and erected a well equipped range of greenhouses, covering over an acre of ground, near the Canadian Pacific railroad station. The first crop of flowers was cut in the week preceding his death, and, although he regarded his business somewhat in the nature of a hobby, it was a great disappointment to his friends that the severance should follow so swiftly and so tragically after his initial difficulties had been overcome. W. G. P.

Wesley Coates.

Wesley Coates, who had been with the Dale Estate, at Brampton, Ont., as a carnation grower, since his boyhood, died of Bright's disease, October 5, after a short illness. The funeral took place on Tuesday afternoon, October 6, and was largely attended by his fellow workers. W. G. P.

Morgan Miles.

Morgan Miles, an old-time nurseryman of San Jose, Cal., died suddenly October 4 at Santa Cruz, where he had gone to pay his regular weekly visit to his daughter, who teaches school in Santa Cruz.

Mr. Miles was born in New York seventy-five years ago, and came to California in a sailing vessel in 1853. He took up the business of nurserymen and his stock filled many of the oldest and best orchards in the vicinity of San Jose. He leaves a widow and three daughters.

Nicholas Rieder.

A well-known Philadelphia florist, Nicholas Rieder, a member of the firm of Wm. H. Rieder & Bro., who conducted a retail store at 302 Susquehanna avenue, died October 11. The funeral was held from the residence, at the same address as the store, October 13. Many members of the trade attended or sent flowers.

Lillian Austin Shaw.

Lillian Austin Shaw, of 1310 Forty-ninth street, Brooklyn, widely known in that city as an instructor in dancing, died October 9 at Clarksville, Albany county, N. Y., of a complication of diseases. She was born in Oshawa, Canada, the daughter of J. Austin Shaw, New York representative of The Review. She is survived by her parents and two sisters, Mrs. Harvey F. Thew, of New York, and Mrs. E. Percy Noel, of Chicago. The funeral was held at the Science church in Brooklyn, Monday afternoon, October 12, burial being in Greenwood cemetery. There were many flowers from friends of the family and from business friends, the latter being numerously represented at the services.

Charles Mason.

Charles Mason, a retired florist of Hamilton, Ont., died October 4 at his home, 400 Cumberland avenue, after a long illness. Mr. Mason had been a resident of Hamilton for forty years. George Slocomb was his successor in his florists' business.

Dayton, O.—The Dayton Florists' Club held its opening session of the year at the J. F. Young establishment October 8. Plans for the coming winter's work were discussed.

Boone, Ia.—Out of his 7,000 feet of glass J. Loehrer, of the Boone Greenhouses, lost over 5,000 in the hail storm which occurred October 6. The hail stones cut up the plants badly, and the rain which followed soaked the benches through. The loss of the glass is covered by insurance.

Berlin, Conn.—In the professional classes of the floriculture department of the state fair prizes were won by A. N. Pierson, Inc., of Cromwell, for roses and hardy perennials; Joseph A. Greenbacker, of Meriden, for floral design; James H. Albiston, of New Britain, for asters; C. Louis Alling, of West Haven, Unger & Tucker, of New Haven, and Lester B. Lindley, of West Haven, for dahlias.

Albany, N. Y.—Among the plans suggested at the last meeting of the Albany Florists' Club to insure a good representation of Albany florists at the S. A. F. convention at San Francisco next year was that each member set aside a certain sum each month, to be paid to the treasurer for deposit, so that there would be sufficient to cover each one's expenses by the time of the convention. President Fred Henkes appointed Edward P. Tracey, Fred A. Danker and Louis H. Schaefer as a committee of arrangements. Stephen Greene, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, addressed the meeting.

Faribault, Minn.—Carl Holmquist has opened a store in the D. W. Ray building, on Second street.

Sioux City, Ia.—R. E. Rathbun, according to notice filed with the city council, holds the city responsible for $450 worth of damages caused by the recent flood of Perry creek. The filling in of the creek a short distance from his greenhouses was, he maintained, the cause of the flood. The city disclaims responsibility because Mr. Rathbun's establishment is, it asserts, below grade.

Jefferson, O.—The Jefferson Greenhouse Co. has practically completed its range of six houses, each 15x200 feet, in which are already established 4,000 tomato plants. These will be followed by other vegetables. A packing house and boiler room, 30x100, houses two large Erie City boilers. A. V. Miller, of Ashtabula, is manager, and the officers of the concern are: President, L. J. McNutt; secretary, R. G. McNutt, and treasurer, H. J. Warner.

Birmingham, Ala.—Florists and nurserymen of Birmingham are taking considerable interest in the city beautiful campaign, in connection with which prizes have been offered for the improvement of home grounds, etc. Among those of the trade who contributed prizes were: A. J. Koenig, Elmwood Cemetery Corporation, Luther Florist & Nursery Co., Wright Tree Surgery Co., Horst & Sons, Birmingham Nurseries Co., Colmant Nurseries, Hugh Seales Floral Co., George E. Luffman, McVay Seed Co., John L. Parker, Theo. Smith and Wimberly & Thomas.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

The market has been suffering from a return of midsummer weather, which opened enormous quantities of flowers during the latter part of the week. During the early part of the week the weather was cloudy, though warm. This retarded the opening of blooms, and as business was up to the usual standard at this season of the year, stock was well taken up; in some things even a shortage was noticed, especially in the better grades of roses. But the few warm, clear days quickly reversed these conditions and at present an oversupply in all lines is in evidence. Roses are to be had in any quantity at the buyers' prices, with only a fair demand in the better grades. The sale of Beauties fell off considerably during the week.

The principal contributors to the overstocked conditions were the dahlias, of which enormous quantities were thrown on the market. Though we have had no rain for some weeks, the cool nights have produced heavy dews, which are responsible for the large crop of dahlias, for until a few weeks ago they gave every indication of being a failure. Carnations are in better crop and are selling fairly well. Violets are practically unsalable; the hot spell shrinks them up sometimes before they reach the wholesale stores and they find their way to the rubbish pile without being unpacked. Lilies are in fair demand for funeral work when other white flowers are not available. Mums are now in good supply. The first pink ones were seen last week, but plenty of yellow and white ones were to be had and some flowers were of good midseason quality. However, as the demand was only fair, they were being offered at sacrifice prices.

Club Meeting.

The regular meeting of the club was held October 12, with President Johnston in the chair. There was a quite good attendance. The matter of stores closing on Sunday was brought up and it brought out the fact that few stores were open on this day for general business, some being open only for the purpose of getting out orders for funeral work or other special matters.

Arthur Richmond had on exhibition, through Leo Niessen Co., a fine vase of Oconto mums.

A letter was read from the Pittsburgh Florists' Club thanking the club for the entertainment provided when the Pittsburghers were here en route to Boston.

City Forester Maxwell replied to the club's invitation to give a lecture before it that he would be present at the next meeting, to be held October 26, and give a talk on tree and shrub planting. It was decided to have refreshments on this evening and give the meeting to social affairs.

The question box was well filled, showing that the members paid good attention to President Johnston's suggestion.

Robert L. Graham, as president of the Maryland Horticultural Society, addressed the members in regard to the fall show to be given in the Fifth Regiment armory, November 16 to 21, and asked for the hearty coöperation of all to make this one of the best shows ever given in this city. The exhibition committee, through Wm. Feast, chairman, reported everything well in hand and promised a number of innovations.

Various Notes.

Richard Vincent, Jr., made a flying visit to New York, October 12, to deliver a lecture before the New York Florists' Club at its meeting on that date.

The premium list of the Maryland State Horticultural Society's fall show is being mailed to the members and anyone not receiving a copy may be supplied on application to T. B. Symons, secretary, College Park, Md. This show promises to eclipse any of the former shows held by this organization and deserves the support of every member of the trade, for nothing can better advertise the business than a good collection of greenhouse products, artistically arranged for the public's view. Every florist should make it a point to be represented, for the list embraces a wide variety of both plants and cut flowers.

Miss Grace F. Burger, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred G. Burger, who are well known among the local trade, was married to Dr. Howard E. Harmon, October 7, at the residence of her parents, 2828 St. Paul street. The house was well decorated for the occasion, principally with white and yellow mums and ferns. The bride's bouquet was a shower of valley and adiantum. The bridesmaid, Miss Florence M. Burger, the bride's sister, carried a bouquet of Melody roses, which were secured especially for the occasion. After the ceremony the happy couple left for their future home, Leetonia, O., where the groom is engaged in the practice of his profession.

The dahlia farm of Halliday Bros., at Monkton, presents a peculiar appearance at present, having suffered from a freak of the weather man. September 28 the foliage was injured by a light frost, but the buds were so far back in the stem as to escape unhurt and now they are opening on stems utterly devoid of foliage, presenting a most peculiar appearance. W. F. E.

The alarm clock went off at four o'clock in the morning.

"I fooled you that toime," said Mike with a grin, "for I wasn't aslape at all."

The florist fools himself who thinks there is any way of selling goods in the trade more effective than advertising in The Review. Also, it's the most inexpensive way in proportion to results.

"We are completely sold out and have had to send money back. The Review is, without doubt, the best advertising medium in the trade."—J. C. RENNISON CO., Sioux City, Ia.

Review readers are not asleep. Note this:

"Please tell us confidentially what you think of — —. Why doesn't he advertise in The Review if he is O. K.?"—MILLER FLORAL CO., Farmington, Utah.

The alarm clock rings in The Review office at 4 o'clock (p.m., not a.m.) every Tuesday. It is to let everybody know advertising forms close for that week's issue in just sixty minutes.

DES MOINES, IA.

There have been, as yet, no harmful frosts in this vicinity. The rains in September and October have greatly helped stock. Everybody is busy getting in stock before the approach of frost.

The Iowa Seed Co. is picking large quantities of outdoor violets. The company's outdoor chrysanthemums, which include such varieties as Chrysolora, Early Snow and Pacific Supreme, are blooming. Wm. Dayson, who has charge of the roses and carnations, says his Beauties are in excellent condition. Carnations are improving, particularly White Wonder, which is making a good length of stem. The newer varieties look promising.

Wm. Trillow has been appointed honorable secretary for the Order of St. George, a new lodge which has recently been organized. Members are of British descent. A number of florists have joined.

The Wilson Floral Co. is busy housing outdoor stock. Christmas peppers, solanums, stevias, etc., are in excellent shape.

The home grounds of C. N. Page, of the Iowa Seed Co., were turned into a veritable fairy-land on the occasion of a lawn fete given for the benefit of the Eastern Star Home, Boone, Ia. There were placed at intervals on the lawn pillars of white enamel, decorated with autumn leaves, from which were suspended red, white and green electric lights. The general effect at night was a brilliant one. W. D.

Danville, Va.—C. T. Eldridge has moved into new and commodious quarters in the Arcade building.

Schenectady, N. Y.—Starting with six standard sashes about four years ago, Jacob J. Thelen has had such success with flower and vegetable plants that he has added several more sashes and last year built a small greenhouse, 16x30 feet. If business keeps up its increase, Mr. Thelen will enlarge his greenhouse.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

THE country again is full of Boston ferns. It is a condition that recurs with the autumn. There will be a scarcity again next spring.

THOSE Ghentians appear to have known what they were about when they rushed the shipment of the azaleas. They shipped while the shipping was good.

THIS seems to be one of the years when the careful credit man reaps the reward of his care, and when the lax man sweats as the result of his carelessness.

PUSH the bulb sales. Spread them out in the store; make a show. Advertise them in the local newspapers; the war will lend interest to "Bulbs from France and Holland."

RUNNING a flower store without a workroom is like eating one's meals in the kitchen. Yet, every once in a while, we see a new store fitted up so that all the inevitable muss of getting in stock and making up work must occur in the public space—getting the meals in the parlor, so to speak.

EVERY sale should consist of supplying some desire of your customer in such a way as to render that degree of satisfaction that will make of him a permanent patron, and any sale that does not do this is worse than no sale, because there is little profit and no progress toward establishing a permanent business when all customers are of the one-time-only class.

HAIL IN THE SOUTHWEST.

There are reports of a severe hail storm which swept southwest over the states of Missouri, Oklahoma and Texas October 8. Information as to the loss of glass is meager, but at St. Joseph, Mo., the Stuppy Floral Co. lost about 12,000 feet and many other losses are reported.

WHY TRADE IS DULL.

Taking it by and large, there seldom has been a summer and autumn of such continuously fine weather.

And the flower business is proverbially a weather business.

We all know that the more dreary the days the better the sale for flowers.

Seldom has there been a time when the American people have lived so much out of doors as has been the case in the last four or five months—never has there been such beautiful weather in early October, taking the country as a whole. Never have so many people spent so much time outdoors.

With frost a month delayed in some of the best trade centers it is no wonder the demand has increased more slowly than usual.

With business as good as it has been under such circumstances it should boom when the frost king finally has mobilized his forces.

PUSH THE BULB SALES.

There probably never was a better opportunity for the average town florist to secure advertising cheaply and which has real "backbone" in it than to suggest to customers the planting of beds or borders of tulips or daffodils this autumn. When in bloom next spring the beds will be the talk of the neighborhood and the florist who supplied bulbs is more than likely to have his name frequently mentioned in the "talkfest." Bulbs are of exceptional quality this season, thereby insuring the best of success, and the prices are low as well.

BIG CROPS INSURE PROSPERITY.

The government crop report issued October 7 indicated a corn yield of 2,676,000,000 bushels, or 78,000,000 bushels more than was estimated September 1, and 230,000,000 bushels more than the final estimate of 1913. Conditions during September were favorable for the maturing of late corn as well as ideal for harvesting.

The government raises the September estimate of the oats crop from 1,116,000,000 bushels to 1,137,000,000 bushels. Wheat figures were not changed materially. The total wheat crop now indicated falls just short of the 900,000,000 bushel mark.

The seven big corn producing states have a combined yield of 1,441,000,000 bushels, compared to 1,209,736,000 bushels last year. The yields by states, with comparisons, follow:

	1914, bus	1913, bus
Ohio	149,000,000	146,250,000
Indiana	165,000,000	176,400,000
Illinois	305,000,000	282,150,000
Iowa	379,000,000	338,300,000
Nebraska	117,000,000	114,150,000
Missouri	159,000,000	129,062,000
Kansas	107,000,000	23,424,000
Totals	1,441,000,000	1,209,736,000

Farm prices for winter wheat average 94.4 cents, compared to 81.2 cents a year ago, and all wheat 93.5 cents, compared to 77.9 cents a year ago. The average price of corn on the farms is about 3 cents more than a year ago and over 10 cents higher than the average for five years. Oats average almost 4 cents higher than last year on the farms. Barley prices are a little lower than a year ago, while rye is about 14 cents higher.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY.

Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Chrysanthemum Society of America will be held at Indianapolis, Ind., at 9:30 a. m., Saturday, November 7. Papers will be read as follows:

"Pompon Chrysanthemums," by Fred H. Lemon, Richmond, Ind.

"Chrysanthemum Cut Blooms for Exhibition," by Wm. Vert, superintendent Castle Gould, Port Washington, N. Y.

"Chrysanthemum Specimen Plants for Exhibition," by J. Canning, superintendent Heather Dell Farm, Ardsley, N. Y.

Friday, November 6, the first day of the show, will be devoted to the staging of the exhibits and the judging.

The address of the Boston examining committee is William Nicholson, care of W. J. Thurston, manager Boston Flower Exchange, Winthrop square and Otis street, Boston, Mass.

Charles W. Johnson, Sec'y.

HERE COME THE AZALEAS!

The shipment of azaleas and other Belgian plant stock has begun in good earnest and heavy consignments are now the rule. The "scarcity" of this stock is likely to come as near being a fact as did that of the French and Dutch bulbs. The steamer Palembaug, from Rotterdam, which reached New York October 5, brought the largest shipload to date, which included the following consignments:

The Market.

The wholesale cut flower market is affording an interesting study. Conditions this fall have been quite unlike those of last year and, now that the situation is changing, everyone interested is watching the drift with unusual care.

The special features this week have been the fall in temperature and the increase in the receipts of chrysanthemums. There has been no killing frost, but temperatures which were running 10 to 15 degrees above normal have fallen until now the weather is only perhaps 5 degrees warmer than it should be at this season. The middle of last week, with its summer sun, was decidedly dull, but Saturday brought a good run of business in spite of the unseasonable warmth. Then came, at the opening of the present week, the long-hoped-for fall in temper-

A NEW CROP OF FINE
BEAUTIES

One of Our Places is Just Starting to Cut Heavily

YOU will like these Beauties. They are from one of the best growers we know and the supply includes all lengths. We have not said much about Beauties lately because the supply was moving out steadily, but now we are able to take care of some more buyers without neglecting those who have looked to us regularly for their supply. Glad to serve YOU.

MUMS! MUMS!! MUMS!!!

Specially strong this week on the medium size Mums that sell at from $10.00 to $15.00 per 100, all colors. Also can furnish other sizes in quantity, including the big exhibition Mums, that are finer than your customers are likely to see elsewhere.

FANCY ROSES

We have had good roses, yes, and many of them, but the cut this week is the best of the season to date. Can you use ature. There has scarcely been time for any important change, but already there is some increase in the demand and it is sure that receipts will fall off sharply after a frosty night. There still are first-class gladioli from outdoors, as fine cosmos as one ever saw, and more dahlias than this market ever before has had in the second week of October. Asters from New York still are on the market.

One might almost say that it is midseason with the chrysanthemums, so greatly have the receipts increased since last report. While large quantities in all colors now are available, most of the stock still grades as of only medium quality. The weather has been too warm for the proper finishing of the flowers. Because of their relative scarcity, there is a stronger demand for the special fancy grade than for any other.

Beauties again are in heavy supply. The special demand at the beginning of last week served to clean the market, but the cut has been heavier than the regular store trade called for, with the result that nearly every wholesaler carries a few pots in his icebox until the flowers are so far open that it is necessary to sell them cheaply. There is considerable variation in the quality, but on the whole the Beauties are good and offer unusual values for the season, especially for the man who can use a quantity.

Practically all roses still are in large supply. The newer varieties clean up fairly well because they are relatively in much lighter supply. Mrs. Russell continues a favorite and Ophelia is selling well. Hadley has not come onto the market so strongly as was to have been expected from the number of plants sold to growers in this neighborhood. Both Milady and Richmond are in better request because of the darker and colder weather. Killarney Brilliant is in good shape, but the weather has been so good that Killarney still is of fine color. Sunburst sells well; Mrs. Ward is less in evidence this year than last.

There has been an increase in the supply of corsage flowers, cattleyas, violets and valley. The alarm with regard to receipts of the new crop of valley pips has subsided and the forcers are putting larger numbers in the sand. Some fine oncidiums have been added to the orchid supply. Short pink snapdragons are seen in some quantity and mignonette has arrived. Easter lilies again have shortened up and the price has advanced to something like normal. Green goods are abundant.

The market has been handling greater quantities of stock than usual for the first part of October, but prices have averaged materially less than they usually do at this time of year, with the result that the total sales for the wholesalers and the returns for the growers have not been up to the standard. The retailers have complained of slow trade, but someone has been handling unusual quantities of flowers.

"Hind Sight, Etc."

Recapitulation makes it look as though 10,000 long-stemmed Beauties were used for last week's big bank opening. As indicating the resources of the market, it is interesting to note that so large a special demand had little effect on prices. In the old days it would have sent prices bounding upward, but it is said that in this instance many of the buyers were able to cover their requirements at bargain rates, in places where the extra demand was not appreciated, and that in scarcely any case was a buyer compelled to pay over the quoted dozen rates. It is an interesting speculation as to how much more the Beauties would have brought the growers had there been advance information of the extent of the demand.

October 8. W. S. Deamud was elected to membership and the names of R. J. Parker and Victor Young were proposed.

A communication was received from Benjamin Hammond, secretary of the American Rose Society, acknowledging the invitation to hold the 1915 exhibition and convention in Chicago, stating that action will be taken by the executive committee within a few days.

The transportation committee reports that arrangements have been made for club members and others who will attend the Indianapolis meeting of the Chrysanthemum Society of America to leave via the Big Four railroad Thursday, November 5, at 10:15 p. m. The fare is $3.70 each way. Lower berths are $2 each and upper berths $1.60. A car will be reserved for the exclusive use of the party, if the number going is sufficiently large.

Field Spreads Out.

An elaboration of the plans for Marshall Field's new flower section is reported, after the department has been in operation for two weeks. With the original equipment the company installed in the flower section, it was apparent that funeral designs and wedding work could not be undertaken. Arrangements are being made, however, to make the department more complete and to add equipment which will allow the larger work being turned out. A basement flower section will be opened shortly. An attractive fountain of concrete and tile has been placed in the third-floor flower section to provide a moist atmosphere, and for decorative purposes. This was done at the instance of R. G. Kootz, who is in direct charge of the section. Mr. Kootz is a young man, but has had an older man's experience in the business. He spent some years with J. C. Schmidt, Unter den Linden, Berlin, and later was with the Fleischman Floral Co., Chicago.

Various Notes.

The death of W. L. Palinsky is recorded in the obituary column this week. Mr. Palinsky had been known to be in failing health, but his demise was unexpected. He had many friends in the trade.

R. E. Kurowski, vice-president of the Moninger Co., returned October 12 from a trip to Cincinnati during which the local branch office there was set going. A well known local contractor, Otto Hirschfeld, is the manager. The office is on the twenty-third floor of the newest and tallest building, the Union Central Trust, from which point of vantage Mr. Hirschfeld expects to be able to sight every new job that comes up in his territory. E. F. Kurowski, president of the company, has been in Canada for ten days on a business trip.

The A. L. Randall Co. is this week mailing to department store decorators its first catalogue in colors showing the line of artificial floral decorations. The recently added plant department is doing a large business. F. M. Johnson and Frank McCabe made an automobile trip to Milwaukee last week, carrying a sample case in the tonneau, and booked some good orders.

Six sprays of Oncidium varicosum Rogersii, cut October 12 by Poehlmann Bros. Co., carried a total of 332 flowers.

The J. B. Deamud Co. has moved upstairs, to 158 North Wabash avenue.

Frank Ayers, right-hand man for C. W. McKellar, has been on the sick list for several days, suffering with neuralgia and rheumatism.

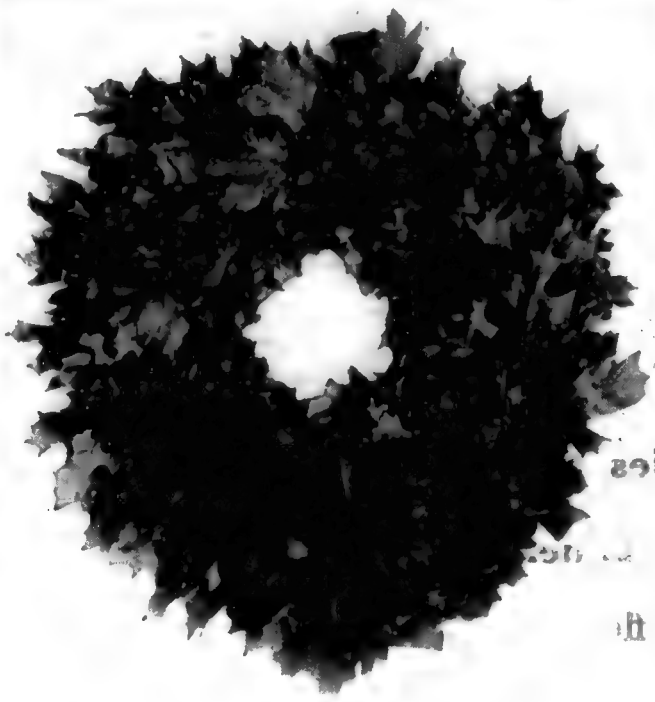
Morgan Jensen has bought the store of L. Hoeckner, at 3345 West North avenue, and installed his daughter, Miss Flora Jensen, in charge. The Jensen family has lived in the neighborhood for thirty years, Miss Jensen having been born and brought up there. The father was for many years with the West Park system and now is a foreman for Jens Jensen, in the landscape business.

The Chicago Carnation Co. is preparing to disseminate the variety Aviator this season.

Erne & Klingel report many telegraph orders for Elastic-Lyke putty to be shipped by express to points in Missouri, Oklahoma and Texas, visited last week by hail.

The Forty-third street merchants had a big business parade one night last week, and the Kidwell flower store was represented by one of the handsomest floats in the line.

George Reinberg and Mrs. Reinberg went to Iowa October 9 for a week's visit with relatives.



This is birthday anniversary week at Winterson's Seed Store. L. H. Winterson was 40 years of age October 10 and there was a celebration. Edgar Winterson, Jr., was 23 years old October 11. John Degnan will be 41 October 16.

James B. Foley says that the Foley Greenhouse Mfg. Co. has had a busier summer than was expected and that orders still are coming along in good shape.

A. Henderson comments that there is no trouble to get orders this autumn; the only difficulty is to collect one's accounts with reasonable promptness. Usually when money is tight buyers order carefully, but evidently most florists think the present condition will pass quickly.

Paul R. Klingsporn, of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, is more than pleased with the success his growers are having with valley.

E. B. Washburn and Mrs. Washburn arrived from Pasadena October 11 to spend a fortnight with their relatives at and near Hinsdale. They will celebrate their fourth wedding anniversary October 18. Mrs. C. L. Washburn has been doing commendable work in connection with the Infant Welfare Society of Chicago. Mrs. Washburn gave an entertainment October 10, at the Hinsdale club, for the benefit of the society. All funds realized through the entertainment went to the welfare sta-

They think it is the best rose that ever came out, but say their record of last year's cut shows it can not be sold at the low prices some sellers have been accepting. J. P. Risch says the rose will go dormant in January and February and that the grower who does not lose a good deal of the foliage will be fortunate. There will be a big spring crop.

While Anton Then was walking down Market street in San Francisco a few days ago he was hailed by a man selling flowers from a stand on the sidewalk, who proved to be T. D. Mosconesotes, perhaps better recalled as Moscow. That gentleman at one time enjoyed the distinction of being one of Chicago's leading retail florists, when he had a store in the Masonic Temple.

According to Ed Enders, right-hand man these many years for C. A. Samuelson, the social season this year will be unusually active. He says the flower stores of the better class all through the country will be benefited by the fact that wealthy people will stay at home this winter.

Next door to his residence on Sheridan road, John Mangel owns a swell 6-apartment building at the corner of North Shore avenue. The rental is $450 per month.

According to the old saying, "it is an ill wind that blows nobody good," and it is so in the matter of the prolonged Indian summer. The cemetery florists have been doing unusually well. Ordinarily at this season they have carnations and mums to wholesale, but Xavery Wijtkiewicz, whose place in Niles is opposite the burying ground, says he has been able to retail all he has cut this season. His winter crops go to Kennicott Bros. Co.

Arnold Ringier, of the W. W. Barnard Co., returned to Chicago October 10, after a trip eastward.

A. Lange featured chrysanthemums October 9 and 10 by advertising a mum show. For this exhibition Mr. Lange bought some of the choicest of the early mums in the market. Jeffery, Crocus, Chrysolora, Golden Glow and October Frost were among the varieties shown and the public bought freely as a result of the advertising.

Word has been received of the arrival of a baby boy at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Stuppy, at St. Joseph, Mo. They were married in Chicago.

Richard Parker, traveler for Poehlmann Bros. Co., was in town for the week end. He has recently been in the cotton states and insists conditions among the florists are not what daily newspaper talk would make them seem. He asserts the florists are doing a fair business and buying about as usual, no matter what general conditions may be.

Because of the portrait and note in last week's issue of The Review, when his birthday anniversary arrived October 10, E. C. Amling found his desk decorated with a handsome vase of

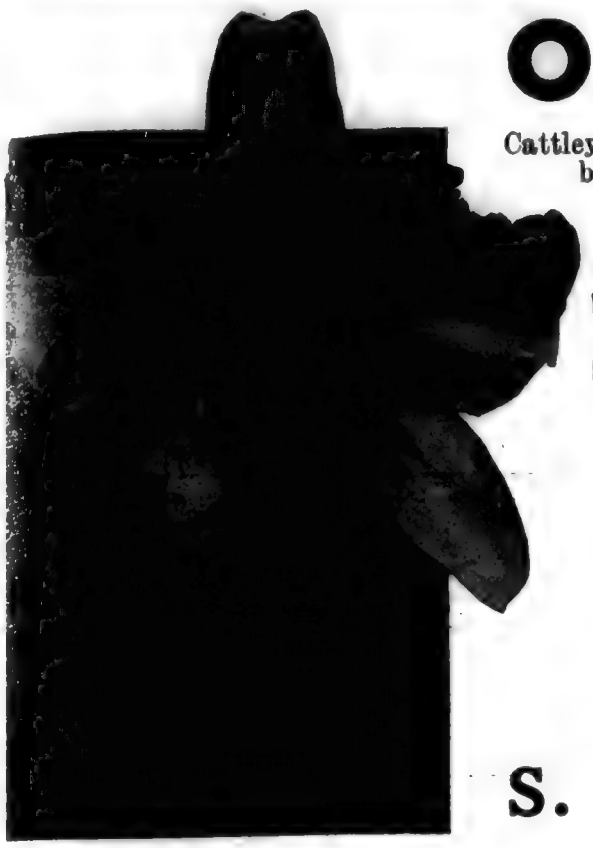
PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Philadelphia has suffered from too much baseball, world's series, and heat during the last week. The supply of flowers has steadily increased, faster than the demand, with the natural result. Business is fair, but not satisfactory in the average prices. Dahlias have improved a little, thanks to the dews at night, though it is a wonder how well they do without rain; some don't. Chrysanthemums are coming in faster with the brilliant sunshine. Polly Rose, Smith's Advance, Early Snow, white; Unaka and Glory of Pacific, pink; Comoleta, Donatello, Chrysolora, Golden Glow, yellow, and Tint of Gold, bronze, are the principal varieties. Orchids are much more plentiful, cattleyas particularly so. They have fallen in price. Yellow roses are selling well. There is no other special change.



Two Fine Affairs.

The million-dollar pier at Atlantic City is the scene this week of the electrical convention. For it J. J. Habermehl's Sons have sent down five carloads of material, besides drawing heavily on stock there. The decorations are exceedingly handsome; they include those for the association proper, or the general decoration of the approaches, the hall and the stage, and also the decoration of each exhibitor's individual booth. Naturally the exhibitors take great pride in their booths and require that the decoration be worthy of the exhibit. There is a beautiful garden scene on so elaborate a scale that 1,500 square feet of grass mats were required to cover its surface. There are hedges and fine plants, many electric lights and balconies and tall columns, and all that goes to make up a handsome indoor garden scene.

A wedding of unusual splendor took place at Haverford on the evening of October 14, when the daughter of one of our most successful merchants was married. The decorations, also by J. J. Habermehl's Sons, were the subject of much careful study to make them in keeping with the surroundings.

The ceremony took place at one end of the drawing room, beneath a bower of Australian ferns, with a background of Farleyense ferns and orchids, flanked on either side by tall vases of pink roses, the whole being surmounted by a graceful canopy of asparagus vine showered with orchids. The bride and groom knelt at a white prie-dieu, which was almost concealed by sprays of valley and orchids. Leading to the bower was an aisle formed by white standards holding clusters of chrysanthemums. Pink was the basis of the color scheme of the entire decoration. A series of floral arches over stairway and doors leading into the hall were formed by garlands of orchids and pink flowers intertwined with asparagus vine.

The table at which the bridal party was seated was decorated with a profusion of orchids and valley, while the buffet table bore loose clusters of chrysanthemums arranged in tall cut glass and silver vases, the bases of which were concealed in dainty masses of valley.

Two temporary pavilions on the terrace and the passageways connecting them with the house were draped with southern smilax on ceiling and walls, while innumerable baskets of pink flowers and autumn foliage were artistically arranged throughout.

Ferns.

The interest in ferns of the Boston type is so general that Robert A. Craig, who makes a specialty of this class of stock, was asked how the popular taste now runs. He said that Teddy Junior evidently belongs to the progressive party, as it is best liked of all the straight-leaved varieties. Robusta is a prime favorite among the crested sorts, fully justifying the opinion of the judges who awarded it high honors when it was first introduced.

Mr. Bayersdorfer Explains.

Many inquiries have been made regarding the increased price of florists' supplies imported from Europe. H. Bayersdorfer says emphatically that there is no increase in the price of baskets or other imports; the increase is in the cost of getting them here. There is a war risk insurance that ranges from five to seven per cent; a higher freight rate, three and one-half times the former contracts on the steamers from the German ports; a surtax of twenty-five per cent on the freight charges, to be paid to the government from whence the goods come, and a charge for carrying the goods from the point whence they should have been shipped to the neutral port from which they are shipped, which varies according to circumstances. This amounted to an increased cost of fourteen per cent on forty cases of baskets just received.

Cannas.

There is a choice bed at the entrance to the Riverview Nurseries of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., that deserves special mention. It contains forty-eight seedling varieties, the cream of 3,000 seedlings of 1912. E. A. Michel places a strong-growing, green-leaved canna with large trusses of fan-shaped flowers at the head of the list. Mr. Michel believes this seedling to be the best white

BUDDLEIA ASIATICA

A New Winter Cut Flower Plant

This new Greenhouse Shrub is without a doubt one of the most interesting and attractive flowering plants in existence. It is of exceptional beauty, and wherever exhibited has been greatly admired by every flower-lover. It grows about 3 feet tall, is of free branching habit and produces, in abundance, long spikes of pure white flowers, with a delicate fragrance, resembling lilac. They can be forced with little heat, a carnation house temperature being the most suitable, and can be brought into bloom quite readily; used in combination with poinsettias or similar decorations, they are especially effective; valuable as a large pot plant or for cut flowers. We predict a big sale for this novelty, and every progressive florist should try at least a few.

Strong plants in 2½-inch pots, $2.00 per dozen; per 100, $15.00. Extra large specimen plants in 6-inch pots, 50c each; per dozen, $5.00. The supply is limited; order early.

variety grown today. Next to it he places an orange of wonderfully fine color, also green-leaved, strong growing and free flowering. Then there is a yellow with scarlet marking and a La France pink, both promising.

Various Notes.

J. J. Habermehl's Sons will open a new flower store, their fourth, in the Ritz-Carlton about November 15.

Nicholas Rieder, a well known uptown florist, died October 11. The funeral took place from his residence, 302 West Susquehanna avenue, October 13.

Robert Kift filed a petition in voluntary bankruptcy October 13. The disaster was caused by losses on his property at 1821 Chestnut street.

Zieger & Son lost a quantity of steamfitting and other tools by theft last week. Mr. Zieger believes that he frightened the thieves off before they finished their work.

H. Bayersdorfer spent four days in New York last week, examining the 249 cases of immortelles that came in by the Sant' Anna, which was damaged by fire. He found the contents of most of the cases was uninjured. A few were abandoned.

The Army and Navy football game, which it was hoped would be played in this city November 28, has been given up.

The Henry F. Michell Co. will erect a brick building 28x96 at Andalusia, Pa. The first floor is to be used for packing, the second for storage.

The Peacock Dahlia Farm held two fine dahlia shows recently. Both were in the Wanamaker stores, one in this city, the other in New York.

Carmen Dengler is rejoicing over the arrival of a little lad last week.

Bertrand H. Farr, of Wyomissing, Pa., and W. E. Simon, Wilmington, Del., were elected to the Florists' Club last week.

William Kleinheinz is superintending the laying out of a wonderful Parisian garden at Lynnwood Hall.

George B. Kaiser gave an illustrated lecture before the Germantown Horticultural Society October 12.

Fred Cowperthwait staged a general exhibit for Michell's at the hardware meeting this week.

Edward Reid says he will have an ample supply of valley this season.

The M. Rice Co. has a new and original finish for baskets, called old iron finish, that harmonizes with all flower colors. Robert Q. Shoch has returned from down east.

The Robert Craig Co. has received its boxwood from abroad. Phil.

BOSTON.

The Market.

We have been favored during the whole of the present month with warm weather, temperatures on several days breaking records of many years. This has not conduced to good business. Arrivals continue heavier than purchases and prices are not so good as one would like to see them. Nevertheless, all things considered, business might be much worse and there is no great cause for grumbling. The continued hot weather has made flowers softer and chrysanthemums have suffered particularly in this respect. There is a large and increasing supply. Leading sorts are Golden Glow, Estelle, Glory of Pacific, Unaka, Smith's Advance and October Frost. A few fancy blooms have made $3 per dozen, but the bulk go at from $4 to $12 per hundred. Carnations are abundant, with prices somewhat low for the season. A sharp frost to clean up the balance of outdoor flowers will improve their sale. Roses are coming remarkably fine. Ophelia is popular, as are Sunburst, Hadley and Russell. Prices on about all varieties continue rather low and, but for street fakers, the surplus would be heavy. The best Beauties are making $20 to $25 per hundred.

Violets as yet are somewhat small, but are becoming more abundant. Valley has been selling better. Lilies are rather too plentiful. Bachelor's buttons are in quite good demand. Some pink snapdragon is seen, but the spikes are short. Cattleya labiata is abundant; there is also an ample supply of oncidiums and cypripediums. The call for asparagus shows a little improvement. October 11 saw the markets open only for a short time in the morning. The demand was rather light locally; people seemed more interested in the world series baseball than in flowers.

Various Notes.

A large gathering is expected at the next meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, October 20, to hear L. W. C. Tuthill lecture on "Advertising, the Spark Plug of Business." A special invitation has been extended to all the leading retailers to attend. Those who are desirous of joining the landscape gardening classes should send their names to the secretary at once.

Galvin's has had a beautifully arranged window of Cattleya labiata. The plants were loosely and artistically displayed. Florida moss draped from the pots obscured them. Cork bark was used in the bottom of the window. A few plants of Oncidium varicosum Rogersii helped to show up the beautiful cattleya display more effectively. Wedding orders have been numerous here of late. I noted one particularly charming bridal bouquet October 10 for Miss Helen Foss, composed of Odontoglossum crispum, Dendrobium formosum giganteum and Bouvardia Humboldtii.

William R. Nicholson, of Framingham, is cutting some grand Unaka, October Frost and Estelle mums. He will cut Ramapo this week and has a superb lot of Chrysoloras. One house is devoted entirely to the best singles and pompons. Among carnations, Champion is well liked and Mr. Nicholson wishes he had planted more of it. Matchless as yet is short-stemmed, as is Benora, but White Wonder and Pink Delight are excellent. About 10,000 carnations a week are being cut.

Edward Bingham, of Dedham, is cutting a fine crop of Smith's Advance, October Frost and Golden Glow mums and is starting to pick single violets. He is not growing many double violets this season.

Charles Rapp, of Melrose Highlands, is sending in a nice lot of Oncidium Rogersii and Cattleya labiata to the Boston Coöperative Market. Mr. Rapp was for many years on the well known estate of Oakley Thorne, Millbrook, N. Y.

The Mishawum Flower Co., of Woburn, is strong at present on Golden Glow, Smith's Advance and Unaka mums.

Mignonette is quite scarce in the local markets, but that coming from A. G. Lake, of Wellesley Hills, is of fine quality.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Ward, of Montvale, have been enjoying a ten days' vacation in Delaware, Pennsylvania and Washington, including the battlefield of Gettysburg.

In Penn's windows October 10 vases and bowls of crimson scarlet dahlias arranged over purple velvet were most effective. These outdoor flowers seemed to appeal to a large number of people. Some large funeral orders were filled last week and there were numerous weddings in addition.

Edward MacMulkin, formerly of Boylston street, is now located on Park square, almost directly in the rear of his old store.

The T. J. Grey Co. has an attractive stand of bulbs, seeds and general florists' supplies at the food fair now in progress at Mechanics building.

At the store of H. R. Comley, on Park street, I noted nice plants of vriesias well flowered, also a splendid lot of blue nymphæas and Bouvardia Humboldtii.

P. J. Donahoe is receiving a fine lot of American Beauty roses from the Pierson greenhouses, Scarboro, N. Y., in addition to his large supplies of Hadley, Russell, Killarney Queen, Sunburst and other roses from the Montgomery

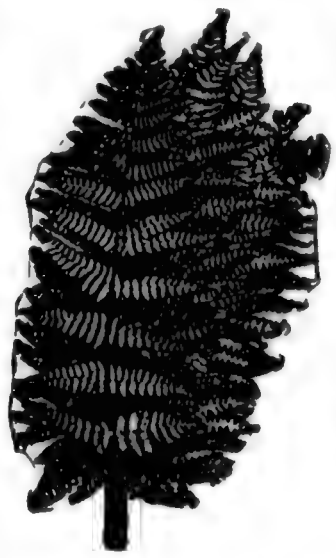
Co., Hadley, Mass. Mr. Donahoe says the Boston retailers now all demand roses cut in tight bud and growers would do well to bear this fact in mind.

F. J. Dolansky, of Lynn, is cutting a heavy crop of Cattleya labiata. He will have an immense cut of Trianæ later, as his plants are looking splendid. He still has some good Oncidium variegosum Rogersii and gardenias.

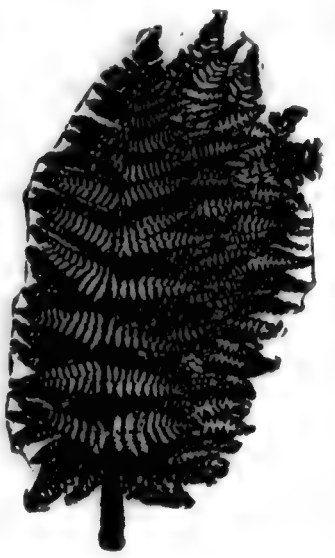
The W. W. Edgar Co. received its first shipment of azaleas, 125 cases, from Belgium a few days ago. They are in excellent condition and many are already potted and will be in flower for Thanksgiving and Christmas.

The drought we still are suffering from has broken all records for duration and intensity. The state house records go back ninety-eight years and they contain nothing so severe. Up to October 11 we have only had one-fourth of an inch of rain in forty-six days, with high temperatures ruling a large part of the time. The effect on vegetation is becoming serious.



Anderson Bros., of Woburn, are cutting a heavy crop of Unaka, Smith's Advance and Golden Glow mums. Thomas A. Cox, of Dorchester, has October Frost of exceptional quality.

Donald Carmichael, of Wellesley; L. E. Small, of Tewksbury, and Harry L. Shedd, of South Lowell, are three local carnation specialists who are sending in good flowers.



Local single violet specialists are busy housing their plants. Owing to the severe drought, the plants have suffered terribly where artificial watering could not be given. William Spillsbury says some plants which he did not water are practically dead.

H. W. Vose, of Hyde Park, is cutting a splendid lot of longiflorum lilies and Smith's Advance mums.

The Houghton-Gorney Co., which will open a new store under the Park street store November 1, will have one of the handsomest places in the city. The new delivery auto will also be a gem. Business at the old stand on Park street has been good of late, roses selling particularly well.

William A. Hastings now is salesman for A. M. Davenport, of Watertown, and is doing a thriving business in ferns, palms, fern dishes, etc.

Mann Bros., of Randolph, are cutting good Polly Rose, Pacific, Advance, Unaka and Golden Glow mums. They maintain a constant supply of Lilium longiflorum.

Frank Edgar, of Waverley, has this season a first-rate lot of poinsettias and cyclamens for the holidays. Among mums, he is cutting Golden Glow and Advance.

Eber Holmes, of the Montrose Greenhouses, has returned from a trip to Nova Scotia. At present Dark Pink Killarney, Killarney and Richmond are extra good here.

At Zinn's, on Park street, I noted handsome vases of Unaka and October Frost chrysanthemums; also a nice assortment of orchids.

Lorraine begonias and cyclamens are already coming into the market, nicely flowered, those from Thomas Roland, of Nahant, being particularly good.

J. R. Comley, of Bedford, is one of the few local growers still handling smilax. He is cutting a fine lot now for the fall weddings.

Peter Hylen, of Randolph, is in the market with a fine lot of Chrysanthemum Smith's Advance. His other varieties are coming on well.

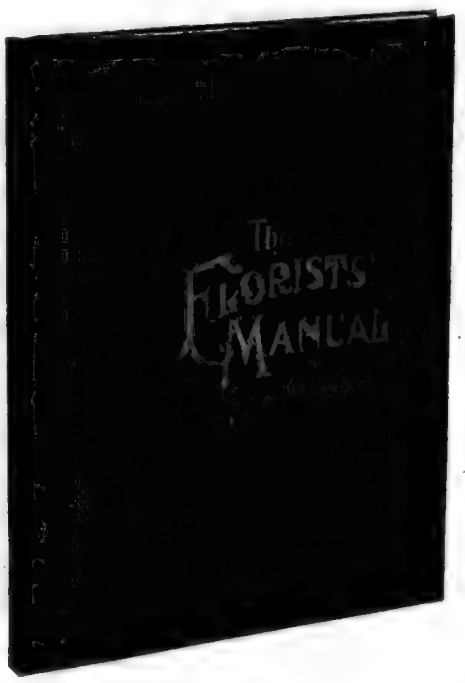
MOTT-LY MUSINGS.



Mangelsdorf Bros. Co., of Atchison, Kan., expects an advance in the price and a shortage in the supply of alfalfa, as the harvest of home-grown seed is short and the shipments from Turkestan, where this year the yield was heavy, are tied up in Germany. Last year the home yield was enormous, and farmers received so small a return that the majority have made several cuttings instead of allowing the crops to go to seed, figuring the green crops of more value to them. Hence the scarcity of seed. A fine, commodious warehouse is in the course of erection, into which Mangelsdorf Bros. Co. expects to move about December 1.

The Chesmore Seed Store, of St. Joseph, Mo., is making extra efforts for bulb business this year by means of special advertisements in the local papers. This concern has the order for bulbs for the parks and believes that the demand will increase. One amateur is planting 1,000 narcissi.

W. C. Kennedy, of St. Joseph, Mo., is looking around for more space to enable him to carry on the various branches of his increasing business to better advantage.

The Stuppy Floral Co., of St. Joseph, was fortunate in capturing the two boys who, by means of a stolen key, obtained access to the company's mail box and were caught in attempting to cash a check taken from one of the stolen letters. One boy had been on parole; the other was, I understand, a trusted messenger boy in the store.

Kramer & Son, of Cedar Rapids, Ia., have found a good thing in the everbearing strawberry known to them as Progressive. At the time of writing they were picking from a moderate sized bed two to three crates weekly, going over the beds three times per week. Although this has been a dry season, the crop has been regular and the fruit luscious. While speaking with the veteran head of the firm, who is rounding out his eighty-third year, I was sitting under a white oak which was planted by him and is his particular pride. Vines are grown here by the thousand, and I noted Wm. Tricker's new introduction doing well, considering the dry season experienced in this section. W. M.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

There has been no marked improvement in the last two weeks and, according to last year's figures, business is away behind. It is the general belief, however, that as soon as cooler weather comes business will immediately brighten. There is an abundance of outdoor stock arriving daily, and it is in fair condition. Unusually good dahlias of all shades arrive fast, but are cleared at low figures. Gladioli are nearing the end. Cosmos in lavender and white sells well. Snapdragons sell quickly and are used extensively with anemones in basket work. Bachelor's buttons are seen in small quantities. The sweet pea consignments are not so large as they have been, but good flowers are still seen. Asters are almost at an end. The carnation crop is fast improving. The supply is not yet equal to the demand. American Beauties are not selling as fast as usual, but there is a good demand for other roses. Violets, on account of the warm weather, have not sold readily. Chrysanthemums are each week larger and of better quality. Golden Glow and Smith's Advance are the two leaders, but a good lavender is on the market. Easter lilies, callas and valley are in moderate supply, but do not move extra fast. There is a constant call for potted flowers, but a few cyclamens and quantities of primulas are all that are to be had. Green goods are meeting all demands.

Various Notes.

Miss Huitweller, of J. B. Keller Sons, entertained Mr. and Mrs. William Keller, Mr. and Mrs. Ferdinand Keller and all of the store force at her home on East avenue, Pittsford, recently. An excellent dinner was provided, and sports and various games made the evening a happy one.

H. E. Wilson is growing some fine long-stemmed Golden Glow chrysanthemums, for which he finds a ready sale. His Main street store, which has recently been undergoing extensive alterations, is now in fine shape. The rear room, which was formerly used for a stock room, is now completely changed. A new icebox has been built and counters have been installed. New double windows and shelves and extra heat will be thoroughly appreciated during the rush season. In the shipping room a large balcony has been built, which will also help out considerably later on.

Miss Rose Brown was away from business the last half of last week, having contracted a severe cold.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Merritt, of Irondequoit, N. Y., have been visiting friends in Brockport, N. Y.

For a recent formal opening of a New York cloak house in this city, J. B. Keller Sons furnished four good-sized horseshoes, baskets and vases of flowers. H. E. Wilson also did his share of work for the same firm.

The Rochester Florists' Association commenced its winter season with the regular monthly meeting, Monday, October 12, at 95 East Main street.

Saturday, October 10, special sales on roses at 50 and 75 cents per dozen were run by the Rochester Floral Co. and H. E. Wilson. Large quantities were cleared.

Good business was reported by H. C. Neubrand, of A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., who was in town last week and visited his old friends. H. J. H.

Dracut, Mass.—C. S. Fincom, the dahlia specialist, has just installed a new boiler.

Lynn, Mass.—F. J. Dolansky has built a new boiler house at his range on Euclid avenue and installed two large boilers.

PAGES OF RETAILERS' CARDS

THIS department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

Gentlemen:-

During the SIX MONTHS from March 4 to September 4 I have received from other Florists, by mail, telegraph or cable, orders to the amount of $513.25 as a result of my advertisement in the Retailers' department of The Review. With the allowance to senders the record for SIX MONTHS is:

Value of orders received----------	$513.25
Less 20% allowed senders--------	102.60
Net value of orders for SIX MONTHS--	410.65

It should be noted that this showing covers the DULL SUMMER MONTHS, when any addition to a Florists's business is decidedly welcome.

Retail Florists not advertising in The Review should profit by this letter.

Respectfully,

The Market.

The weather is most delightful, with no frost yet, though it is the middle of October. Stock is arriving in such quantities as to come near swamping the wholesalers. Roses are fine and plentiful. Carnations are getting better every day and the supply is greater than the demand. Beauties are abundant. Lilies and valley, which were scarce for a time, are now a glut. Chrysanthemums are here in quantity, including such varieties as Smith, Polly Rose, Pacific, Unaka and Chrysolora, all good stock, but as dahlias are holding out and the trade has got into the habit of using them, all other stock suffers. For the greenhouse men, therefore, a killing frost would seem like a godsend.

Club Meeting.

An interesting club meeting was held Tuesday evening, October 6, at the Fort Pitt hotel. Dahlias were the flowers of the evening and there were some good exhibits. R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co., White Marsh, Md., was the only outside exhibitor. This firm sent a collection of extra fine varieties. Carl Becherer, of Dixmont, had a splendid collection, grown almost in the city. It was the finest lot of homegrown stock ever shown and called for considerable explanation on the part of those who have persistently claimed that good dahlias could not be grown successfully about Pittsburgh. William Thompson, gardener for W. P. Snyder,

OAK GROVE PARK
ALLEN, FLORIST

Sewickley Heights, had a fine exhibit of the large show dahlias. H. C. Knauff showed a fine lot of hybrid tea roses, grown outdoors, right in the heart of the city.

John Jones gave an interesting talk on what he saw about Philadelphia, and also called attention to Henry A. Dreer's planting on the Atlantic City pier, which he considered one of the most creditable displays he had seen.

Neil McCallum, the president of the club, is also connected with the West End park, and a few hours before meeting time, in handling a large crane, he was tossed about thirty feet into the air. Although considerably shaken up, he came to the meeting and told us in a most interesting way about his trip to Boston. Most of his time was spent in the Arnold Arboretum.

The only visitor at the meeting was S. S. Skidelsky, of Philadelphia.

Various Notes.

W. C. Beckert, the seedsman, has been making use of his large show window for the exhibition of vegetables grown by the school children, and also for exhibits by various gardeners. His show last week consisted of locally grown dahlias and they were fine. The growers were: Arthur Chandler, gardener for Mrs. J. D. Lyons, Sewickley Heights; Martin Kahlin, gardener for Mrs. L. H. Williams, Shields, Pa.; James Wolf, gardener for B. F. Jones, Jr., Sewickley Heights; Carl Becherer, gardener at the Dixmont hospital; Geo. L. Burgess, Emsworth, Pa.; Miss Rebecca Shields, Shields, Pa., and A. V. Adler, 181 Watsonia road, north side, Pittsburgh. Mr. Beckert now has a large display of Holland bulbs.

Mrs. E. A. Williams has been showing "art in dahlias" in her windows. The dahlia plants and blooms, with ribbons, were so arranged as to represent real art in flowers. This firm had about forty large orders Saturday night, October 10, for the funeral of the general manager of the Canonsburg Tin Plate Co.

Randolph & McClements had several good wedding orders last week and a large club decoration for Saturday night.

G. P. Weaklen & Co. say the dahlia has found a place with their customers that for the time seems to put almost everything else aside.

Some of the growers think it might be well if we all prayed for frost before mums get any more plentiful.

The A. W. Smith Co. duck pin team defeated the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. team. This was the latter's first defeat in three years, but they certainly "got it right." They play again this week. Clarke.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

With the thermometer at 76 degrees for a few days last week and business at a low ebb, summer conditions existed in the market. Large quantities of roses, gladioli and dahlias were sold at low figures, and much cut stock went to waste. If it were not for funeral and wedding work, trade would be completely paralyzed, compared with October of former years. At this time of the year fall trade should be in full swing and constantly increasing in volume, but this is not true at the present writing.

Carnations are excellent, but the greater part have short stems, like all new-crop carnations. Enchantress is good. So are Wards, White Wonder and Beacon. American Beauties are extra fine in all grades and the price is reasonable. Cosmos in pink, white and red is coming into the market in large quantities now, but there is not much demand for it. Snapdragons, calendulas, cornflowers, marguerites and pansies are on sale in various stores.

Chrysanthemums are getting better each week. October Frost, Golden Glow, Advance and Polly Rose are among the early varieties, and they are fine, large blooms, too. Autumn foliage is used with the mums to good effect. Harrisii lilies are in splendid condition and are selling well. There are a few sweet peas here and there. Valley still finds ready sale, even at the high prices, for there does not seem to be anything that the dealers can substitute for it. Orchids are in demand and the price is still firm. Violets are improving right along, but the warm weather keeps them small and pale.

Autumn foliage is used a great deal with all kinds of cut flowers, although ferns and asparagus are plentiful.

Various Notes.

Jacob B. Wiese's store on the market is most attractive these autumn
